WANT AMERICAN AID IN LEAGUE'S PLANS ON DISARMAMENT

Commission Decides to Ask the Council to Invite Our Co-operation.

GENEVA, Nov. 28 (By Telephone to Paris).—The Council of the League of Nations will consider tomorrow a recommendation by the permanent Commission on Naval, Military and Aviation questions that the United States be invited to co-operate in the study of the reduction of armaments.

This resolution was adopted by the commission on technical grounds. The Council will consider its political aspects also.

The action of the commission was based on a letter by a military member, General Clive of England, who pointed out that America had co-operated in the deliberations of The Hague Commission to draft the League Court and in the Brussels financial conference, which, he held, gave a precedent for American co-operation in disarmament. He added that American public opinion had always favored disarmament and that it would be very useful to have American advice and participation.

It was the idea of the military experts to get American aid on technical matters so as to reach technical recommendations for the guidance of the Council and the Assembly in establishing principles of action. It is stated that this co-operation of American experts would bind America in no way to take part in any action which the Council might propose, but would have the advantage of keeping the American Government informed about what the League was doing and would give the League experts the benefit of American advice on a matter in which America is interested, even though she is not and may never be a member of the League.

Want American Officer to Consult.

The League experts would like the War Department to appoint an American officer now in Europe to take part in their discussions and have others appointed for subsequent discussions between now and the next meeting of the Assembly. Major Marlborough Churchill is now here, but would doubtless have to receive special instructions from Washington before he could take part.

It is not known for certain what action the council will take with regard to this recommendation of the experts' commission, but it is presumed generally that the suggested invitation will be sent to the American Government.

One big distinct move toward disarmament made here is in the direction of a State monopoly of arms and munitions. The attitude of the United States toward this proposal will be most valuable. It is pointed out that some small States, notably in South and Central America, cannot afford to make their own arms and munitions but must buy them abroad.

Naturally, in a larger sense, the cooperation of the United States is essential if disarmament is to become real and general. That depends principally, no doubt, on whether America joins the League, but League leaders insist that whether America joins or not she will always be interested in disarmament and can afford to take part in the proposed discussions, which, though unlikely to have very comprehensive results, are regarded as steps which the world expects the League to take in the desired direction.

A thorny question that may arise between now and the next meeting is a proposed system of worldwide inspection of armaments and exchange of military information. The League experts are especially anxious to have American co-operation in attempting to solve this difficult problem.

Will Consider Successor to Tower.

It is reported that Sir Reginald Tower, the British representative of the League at Danzig, whose holding up of French munitions to Poland caused such a stir in the course of the Polish-Russian war, has resigned. The Council will consider the choice of a successor tomorrow. It is said that neither an Englishman nor a Frenchman will be chosen.

After a series of acrimonious secret debates, Commission No. 6 has decided that the power to order an economic blockade against any violator of the covenant should be placed absolutely in the hands of the League Council. There had been a movement by small States to allow individual nations to decide whether they should blockade a neighbor or not. This was followed by another move in favor of having the Assembly appoint a special permanent blockade commission to decide the matter.

Finally the larger powers had their

Wants Direct Tax to Pay Soldiers' Bonus at Once

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 28.—Farm organizations in this State are expected to take action within ten days on a proposal by Sherman J. Soldiers would be exempt from payment of the tax.

BANK INTERVENTION FRIENDLY TO RYAN

ELDER RYAN ASKED TO HELP

Without Result So Far, but Liquidation Will Yield a Surplus to Allan A. Ryan.

While renewed assertions came yesterday from the Hotel Lorraine where Allan A. Ryan lives, that he had gone to Washington to lay before Controller of the Currency John Skelton Williams his financial troubles which grew out of the market decline subsequent to Mr. Ryan's corner of Stutz Motor stock, word came from the capital that neither Mr. Ryan nor the Controller could be located there, the latter being absent, according to his week-end custom.

A number of officials of big banking houses who are concerned in the cooperative plan for conserving Mr. Ryan's assets, pledged as collateral for some $16,000,000 in loans, expressed surprise yesterday at his reported intention to appeal to the Controller. They said that while they knew much bitterness had grown out of the Stutz episode and Mr. Ryan's subsequent expulsion from the Stock Exchange, they did not know his anger had extended to the bankers. On the contrary they had understood that he was working with them in entire harmony and the whole matter was being composed in a most friendly spirit.

Discussing the possibilities of action by Mr. Williams, it was said that, while he might find in the Ryan situation opportunity for a renewal of his recent activities against the high rates of interest charged by New York banks and their call loan policies in general, they were confident he could find nothing in the bankers' treatment of Mr. Ryan to justify specific and particular criticism.

So far as Mr. Williams's general attitude was concerned, said one officer of a large financial institution, there was much sympathy among bankers themselves. Many of them believed the present method of auctioning call money, with resultant wide day-to-day fluctuations, was unhealthy and should be replaced by the English method of cross credits with weekly, bi-weekly or monthly settlements. Where the bankers differed with Mr. Williams, said this individual, was in his finding in certain specific faults of the present system the text for an attack on the whole banking community of New York and accusing its members of profiteering, when, as a matter of fact, money had risen but 20 per cent. during the period in which other commodities had been advanced all the way from 40 to 125 per cent. Moreover, when Mr. Williams took the attitude that only New York money was involved in the whole question, he was ignoring the fact that much of the money loaned here came from the country. In this connection it was pointed out that money obeyed the laws of supply and demand like other commodities, and it would be found impossible to regulate its price by legislation.

Reverting to the specific Ryan situation, this banker, like others interviewed yesterday, was disposed to be

THIRD GRAND JURY TO BE REQUESTED IN BUILDING GRAFT

STAFF OF 30 FOR UNTERMYER

Inquiry Bids Fair to Outstrip Hughes Delve Into Insurance Methods.

PERKINS ADDED TO FORCE

Former District Attorney Joins Legal Assistants of Committee—More Indictments Soon.

With the addition yesterday of Charles A. Perkins, former District Attorney, to the legal staff of the Lockwood committee, it was learned that there is a possibility of having another Grand Jury handle some of the voluminous evidence in the possession of the committee. If another Grand Jury were asked for it would make the third Grand Jury in operation in connection with the committee's housing investigation. The Extraordinary Grand Jury will be chosen today before Justice John V. McAvoy in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court. The additional November Grand Jury has been hearing evidence for a month and has already indicted George S. Backer, a wealthy builder; Robert P. Brindell, President of the Building Trades Council, and Peter Stadtmuller, his chief of staff.

The announcement of Mr. Perkins's accession to the staff of the committee was made yesterday following an all-day conference of lawyers associated with Samuel Untermyer in the inquiry. The conference took place at Mr. Untermyer's home, Greystone, near Yonkers.

Mr. Perkins, who was District Attorney after Charles S. Whitman became Governor, was chosen because of his wide experience in criminal cases. His law partner, Arthur C. Train, became associated with the committee a week ago. Mr. Perkins will probably be made a Special Assistant District Attorney or Special Deputy Attorney General or both for the term of the investigation.

The conference yesterday went into many phases of the testimony brought out at the committee's public sessions and a great deal that has been acquired privately. It was felt by some of those at the conference that the most expeditious way of handling the mass of evidence concerning criminal conspiracies to restrain trade and fix prices, was to have another Grand Jury assigned to take up some of the work.

Staff of Thirty for Criminal Work.

It was felt that the present staff assigned to the criminal work was inadequate in numbers to cope with the situation and it is understood that plans were made to enlist additional men capable of carrying on important parts of the criminal phases of the work.

The present plans are to have the criminal side of the staff consist of thirty persons, mainly lawyers and investigators. This number excludes the great force of clerks already at work, whose numbers will be increased shortly.

It is not known whether the plan to have another Grand Jury to receive evidence would mean the empanelling of another Extraordinary Grand Jury or whether it would mean the empaneling of an additional Grand Jury similar to the November Grand Jury now in operation. An Extraordinary Grand Jury would have to be called at the order of the Governor.

The present additional Grand Jury will probably continue for some time, taking up the labor phase of the investigation, and additional indictments along this line are expected before long.

The Lockwood committee's investigation, it is felt by some of those connected with it, has now reached a point where it is about as extensive as was the insurance investigation conducted by Charles E. Hughes. With the broadening of the scope of the inquiry and the addition of more lawyers and investigators the members believe that the in-

Dwellers in Valley Below Mont Blanc Desert Homes, Fearing Another Avalanche

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, Nov. 27.—The unprecedentedly extensive avalanche which descended from the summit of Mont Blanc into the Italian valley of Courmayeur has caused greater havoc than was at first reported. Several square kilometers of land are covered with blocks of ice, tree trunks and boulders, and near the village of Purtud a pine forest celebrated for the antiquity and size of its trees has been uprooted. The mountain torrent of the Doire was dammed up by débris and overflowed its banks so that the village of Purtud escaped as by a miracle.

The avalanche fell through the air a distance of about 10,000 feet, landing on the Brenva Glacier and carrying away part of the glacier. The detonation was so powerful as to shake houses fifty miles away. The inhabitants of the Courmayeur Valley rushed from their homes in consternation, declaring that the very earth shook. The granite block which became detached from the summit of Mont Blanc and caused the avalanche was in itself as large as a small mountain. The Brenva Glacier below was crushed where the avalanche fell, and its terminal moraine was swept down the valley like a waterfall. The air was thick with dust and loosened fragments of ice and rock, and if the forest had not checked the course of the avalanche the whole Courmayeur Valley would have been destroyed.

The phenomenal size of the avalanche is probably explained by the abnormal weather conditions prevailing throughout the Alps. A drought has prevailed since the beginning of October, and there has been an almost complete lack of fresh snow, which generally falls in Autumn and cements rocks and ice, preventing their becoming dangerous. Never before in November were the glaciers so badly crevassed, and the plateau on the summit of Mont Blanc, which usually consists of soft snow, is now a solid block of ice, so that no airplane could possibly land on it.

It is feared that unless heavy snowfalls soon occur more avalanches may descend from the summit. The Italian authorities have taken away many inhabitants from the Courmayeur Valley.

This is the second Mont Blanc disaster which has taken place within the last month. On the French side of the mountain an immense avalanche descended into the Chamonix Valley, but not from the summit, doing damage running into millions of francs. The inhabitants of the mountainous districts are praying for a snowfall, but there is every sign of the drought continuing.

A message from Chamonix says that the Vallot Observatory, situated about fourteen hundred feet from the summit of Mont Blanc, is intact. Should further masses of the summit be detached by avalanches the height of the mountain would be lessened, perhaps even by 1,000 feet.

500 Soldiers Guard West Virginia Mines

WILLIAMSON, W. Va., Nov. 28.—A provisional battalion of approximately 500 men from Camp Sherman at Chillicothe, Ohio, arrived here today at noon. Colonel Herman Hall, commanding, immediately took up his headquarters at the County Court House, and armed guards were thrown out around the building.

The troops are here in response to a request of Governor John J. Cornwell, who decided that the disorders of the last few weeks had created a situation with which the State and county officers could not cope.

Since the arrival of the soldiers the town has taken on the appearance of a military camp. The streets are filled with army mules, trucks and other paraphernalia, and the sidewalks for long distances are piled high with tents and other equipment.

FAVORED VANDERLIP TO INCENSE JAPAN

Lenin Admits His Purpose to Make Her Relations With Us Acute.

ONE END IN ALL HIS DEALS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—A Helsingfors dispatch to the Morning Post says that in a speech delivered at a meeting of the Moscow section of the Communist Party, reported in the Drasnia Gazeta, Lenin laid bare the motives of the Soviet Government in granting concessions in Russia to foreigners. He admitted that international revolution was proceeding much more slowly than the Bolsheviki had expected, and that the bourgeois powers had emerged from the world war as bourgeois as they were before.

If they had succeeded for the present in averting the danger of revolution, nevertheless the imperialist Governments had been compelled to recognize Soviet Russia as an international factor which they could not ignore. The Soviet knew, said Lenin, how to exploit its position.

"In signing the concession which we have granted to the Americans, we make acute the relations between America and Japan. We profit by this, as by other similar conflicts between our enemies. Our concessions to foreign capitalists are in reality a moral and material victory for us."

RESTORE SEMENOFF'S ARMS.

Chinese in Manchuria Let His Refugee Troops Pass Through.

HARBIN, Manchuria, Nov. 28 (Associated Press).—The anti-Bolshevist troops formerly under Generals Semenoff and Kappel in Siberia who have made their way to the Manchurian border, under Bolshevist pressure from Dauria in Transbaikalia, are surrendering their arms to the Chinese for the passage through Manchuria. The surrender is being made under condition that the arms are returned when the men leave Chinese territory again on their way eastward.

These troops are concentrating, after passing through Manchuria, at Grodekova, northwest of Nikolsk, with the Ussuri district Cossacks. Their leader at present is the popular Colonel Malchanov, who led them in their desperately-beset route from Rauria to Manchuria through Bolshevist territory.

The Far Eastern Republic, at Vladivostok, has declined to recognize the newly-proclaimed independent Far Eastern Siberian Republic, set up at Chita, Siberia, with the view of establishing a State controlling the whole territory of Siberia from the Baikal region eastward.

The delegates from Vladivostok, who went to Chita for a conference with the Provisional Commission which met there and proclaimed the new Government, are returning from Chita, and declare the new Government was formed before their arrival there. These delegates report that Bolshevist methods prevail at Chita, including requisitions, searches and terrorization, and that the commanding positions are filled by Communists, in spite of the announcement that the communistic principle would not be applied in Eastern Siberia.

The Chita Government, it is learned, has called for a general election, to be held Jan. 5.

Unified Socialist Federation of Paris Votes in Favor of Joining.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—The Congress of the Unified Socialist Federation of the Paris district voted today in favor of adhesion to the Third Internationale. The vote was carried by a majority of 13,500.

Another motion, introduced by Jean Longuet, leader of the Ministry Socialists, calling for adhesion with reservations, obtained only 2,000 votes.

As a result of the main vote fifty-eight delegates from Paris will go to the National Congress of the Socialist Party pledged to support the Moscow Internationale.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—A suspected Sinn Fein attempt at arson in London on a large scale was foiled by the city police on Saturday night. Shortly after 10 o'clock a police constable noticed six men outside a big timber yard in Red Lion Market, Finsbury. He questioned one of them and then walked away a little distance.

Then, not feeling satisfied with the answer and noticing that the men remained in the neighborhood, the constable tried to detain one of them, but they all ran away, and an exciting chase followed. Dozens of policemen joined in the hunt. Residents in the neighborhood also took part, and eventually one man was caught. The utmost importance is attached to the capture of the man, who is to be brought before a Magistrate tomorrow.

After the incident detectives found a number of revolvers and also several oil cans and other material which it is alleged the men dropped as they ran away. The place where the affair happened was behind a big timber shed. It is inclosed in a quiet square.

Up to a late hour tonight no further arrests had been made, but it is believed the detectives secured several important clues. The police are extremely reticent but there is reason for stating that sensational developments are expected.

The man arrested in the Sinn Fein arson plot gave his name as Robertson but afterwards admitted it was Murnane. He is an engineering student at the College of Engineers, South Kensington, and is said to be the son of an army officer.

The police today searched his clothing in Lewisham and took possession of a large number of documents. Murnane later made a statement to the police.

The Daily Chronicle says editorially of the Liverpool outrages:

"The Government's more active rounding up of the murder conspiracy was not begun a day too early to save the peace of Great Britain. Had only a little more respite been permitted to the Sinn Fein chiefs their record would have been written in blood in this island, no less than in their own. Even now it may well be that graver events than any at Liverpool will occur on English soil before the terrorists are suppressed. If so, the English public must face them with the same courage of which our war years afforded a continuing example."

POPE GRIEVES OVER IRELAND.

Is Told Arrest of Leaders Will Have a Bad Effect.

ROME, Nov. 28.—The Pope is following with anxious interest the development of the situation in Ireland and is deeply grieved at the daily reports of bloodshed.

Learning of the arrest of Arthur Griffith and Professor MacNeil of the Sinn Fein, he inquired the effect it might produce, and was answered by a prominent Irishman that both men exercised a moderating influence on their followers, therefore their disappearance would probably have a bad rather than a good effect.

NEW CASUALTIES IN IRELAND.

School Teacher Shot Dead and a Constable Wounded.

BELFAST, Nov. 28.—Several casualties from clashes with the authorities and from other disorders occurred here and in other parts of Ireland last night and early today.

A school teacher at Broadford, County Limerick, failed to respond to an order to halt given by Crown forces and was shot dead last evening.

At Cappoquin, County Waterford, a constable was dangerously wounded by three armed men.

Officials Point to Plots Discovered.

BELFAST, Nov. 28.—A statement issued tonight from Dublin Castle, after giving an account of the Liverpool fires and accompanying incidents, adds:

"Read in conjunction with the documents discovered last week in which plans for Sinn Fein reprisals against the English towns of Manchester and Liverpool, among a number, were detailed, these things have a very sinister aspect. The fact of the police being fired on suggests that the methods of the Sinn Fein murder gang in Ireland are being employed against the English people, even if the personnel of the murderers is not the same."

$1,000,000 Damage by Incendiaries in Cork; Destruction Follows Warning to Sinn Fein

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CORK, Nov. 28.—Damage of £200,000 has been done by incendiaries in Cork City since Saturday morning. Destruction of property continued this morning, the premises of the Cahill Company, drapers, being destroyed by fire

Last Wednesday, during the curfew hours, the following notice was posted in several places:

"Anti-Sinn Fein Society Notice—

"If Captain Green, Captain Chambers and Lieutenant Watts are not released unharmed within forty-eight hours, leading members of the Irish Republican Army will be suitably dealt with. Ignore this at your peril. Vengeance may be slow but it will be sure."

The following notice had been sent to the Sinn Fein Club:

"Final Warning—You are hereby notified to evacuate the premises. Ignore this note and you take the consequences. Policemen and soldiers are being murdered every day and their barracks blown up without one word of protest from any section in Cork, with the exception of the loyal population. B. AND T. GOD SAVE THE KING."

These notices had reference to officers kidnapped last Monday week from a train at Waterfall. No news since has been heard of them. The Sinn Fein Club was burned down on Saturday.

OTHER CATHOLICS RESENT PROTEST

ATTACK MADE ON SIGNERS

Termed More Ready to Assail Than Defend Church—Archbishop May Reply Today.

The letter sent by sixty Catholics to Archbishop Hayes protesting against the Thanksgiving Day attack upon the Union Club by persons who had gathered for the MacSwiney mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral and against the alleged "infusion of politics" into the Catholic Church, produced a reply from other Catholic circles yesterday.

Assistant District Attorney Alfred J. Talley, who is Chairman of the Committee on Catholic Interests of the Catholic Club, sent a letter to the Archbishop, expressing resentment at the imputation contained in the "letter of protest" that either the Archbishop or the Church was responsible for the attack upon the Union Club for its display of the British flag and that there had been any "infusion of politics" into the Catholic Church.

Approved by Catholic Club Board.

Mr. Talley's letter was approved last evening at a special meeting of the Board of Managers of the Catholic Club, considered the most important organization of Catholic laymen in the city. The following resolution, signed by Thomas F. Farrell, president of the club, and Edward A. Arnold, secretary, was sent to the Archbishop:

"Resolved, That the Board of Managers of the Catholic Club endorse and approve the sentiments expressed in the letter forwarded to Most Rev. Patrick J. Hayes, Archbishop of New York, by Alfred J. Talley, chairman of the Committee on Catholic Interests of the Catholic Club."

Mr. Talley, in his letter, asserted that, while other churches might preach political doctrine and praise or condemn candidates, and while their ministers might even run for political office, none of the members of the "self-constituted Committee of Protest" could say truthfully that political issues were discussed or political candidates commended from any Catholic pulpit. He asserted that the signers of the protest letter had little right to address the Archbishop as "representative Catholics," and declared that they were more ready in attack upon the Church than in defense against unjust assaults upon it.

Mr. Talley's Letter.

Mr. Talley's letter follows:

Most Rev. Patrick J. Hayes, Archbishop of New York:

My dear Archbishop—I am impelled to address this letter to your Grace, to express the resentment which I am confident is felt by the Catholics of your Archdiocese at the imputation contained in a letter to you which appears in this morning's newspapers, and which purports to protest against the "infusion of politics" into the Catholic Church.

It is difficult to comprehend why the signers of the letter should seek to fix upon your Grace, or the Church which you represent, any measure of responsibility for the occurrence at the Union Club which is given as the cause of their agitation. It is equally incomprehensible why this occasion is seized upon to suggest that by reason of it politics has invaded the domain of the Church. It is a curious anomaly that other churches may freely preach "political doctrine," may praise or condemn political parties, throw open their pulpits to candidates and discuss political issues, and not infrequently do their ministers run for and hold political office, and all this without criticism or comment—but this much is certain, that no member of this self-appointed Committee of Protest can truthfully say that in any Catholic Church or from any Catholic pulpit he or she ever heard political issues discussed or any political candidates commended.

The signers of the letter in question have little right to address you as representative Catholics. They have not been identified to any extent with distinctively Catholic en-

LOGUE DENOUNCES KILLINGS IN DUBLIN

PEOPLE LONG FOR PEACE

Murderers Not Real Patriots, He Adds, and Are Impressing a Stain Upon the Country.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DUBLIN, Nov. 28.—Cardinal Logue, in a letter read today in all the churches of the archdiocese of Armagh, states that from public utterances and private correspondence he knows an ardent sigh for peace continually ascends from the great body of the people. But the murders in Dublin last Sunday oppressed him with a feeling of despair. He never hesitated to condemn in strongest terms deeds of blood from all sources and believes every man and woman in Ireland with a spark of Christian feeling deplores, detests and condemns the deliberate cold-blooded murders of last Sunday morning. No object could excuse, no motive justify them. The perpetrators of such crimes were not real patriots, but enemies of the country, robbing her of just sympathy, raising obstacles to her progress and impressing a stain upon her fame.

Also he believes every right-thinking Christian equally deplores and condemns the indiscriminate massacre of innocent and inoffensive people perpetrated by the forces of the Crown at Croke Park Sunday evening, and if the balance were struck between the deeds of the morning and the evening it would be against the forces of the Crown, who were bound to protect, not destroy, the people. "God help our country, moaning under the affliction of this competition in murder."

The Cardinal exhorts the people to prayer and to avoid all associations leading to crime and disaster.

DUBLIN, Nov. 28 (Associated Press).—Cardinal Logue, the Primate of Ireland, in a pastoral letter read today in all the churches of the Archdiocese, denounces the murders in Ireland, and declares that if a balance were struck between last Sunday's assassinations of officers and the shooting by the police in Croke Park he believes it "should be given against the forces of the Crown."

The Cardinal says the ardent hopes of the Irish people for peace are shared by European and other countries. In support of this he cites a letter from the Archbishop of Malines and all the Bishops in Belgium conveying their cordial sympathy to the Irish people.

With reference to reprisals, Cardinal Logue says lives and property are being sacrificed in cases where there has been no outrage which could give color to retaliation, and that the activities of the military were being carried into districts which hitherto had been considered peaceful.

Vergato Explosions Keep Rescuers Away From the Stricken District.

MILAN, Nov. 27.—The full extent of the terrific catastrophe caused by the blowing up of the War Office explosive dépôt at Vergato, thirty-five miles from Milan, is still unknown, for the district, with its far-spreading woodlands, is a burning volcano and unapproachable.

Eight bodies have been recovered. Among the many scores of casualties more than fifty cases of grave injuries have been reported from hospitals, and as yet there is no clue to the fate of about 100 missing workmen.

The plants which at various intervals in the past thirty hours have been blown into the air covered an area of a square mile and were stored with many hundreds of tons of picric acid, besides huge quantities of ten-inch bombing shells. The explosions destroyed the town of Vergato, which had 4,000 inhabitants, and that of Sesona has also been wiped out. The region of the disaster presents all the familiar appearance of war-devastated territory. Ponderous steel girders which were hurled into space crushed in the roofs of houses fully a mile away. Military aviators over Lake Maggiore narrowly escaped death, for the sudden atmospheric rebound caused their machines to loop the loop.

Railway stations, churches, schools and factories were wrecked; railroad and wire communications were interrupted; fire brigades and troops sustained grievous injuries in heroic but hopeless endeavors to penetrate to the scene of the disaster. The district must for some time remain impassable on account of the unexploded bombs that litter the whole countryside.

Call Attention to Documents Showing Plans to Attack Manchester and Liverpool.

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 29.—A series of outrages, attributed to the Sinn Fein, was committed in Liverpool on Saturday night. No fewer than eighteen fires resulted from organized operations in Liverpool and nine fires in Bootle, the adjoining borough.

William Daniel Ward, 19, was shot dead by the incendiaries. One man was arrested and three were detained in connection with the outrages. Two men are being sought by the police, both undoubtedly concerned in the Sinn Fein movement.

The line of docks extends for seven miles, and fires which broke out simultaneously about 9 o'clock were spread over almost the whole of the area. The premises were set alight by means of rags soaked in paraffine, entrance having been secured to various warehouses by the use of clippers on padlocks securing doors.

To each building marked out for destruction were allotted four or five men, all young and athletic, well coached for the task.

One man in each gang kept watch while the others cut the bolts and entered the premises with the inflammable material.

Many of the fires were suppressed at an early stage, but in some cases the warehouses were gutted. The most destructive outbreak was that in Jordan Street, in the south end of the city, where two cotton warehouses were burned out in spite of help given to the firemen by civilians. Two other warehouses in the same locality were saved from destruction.

Fires in the timber yards were of the fiercest description and were started by the thrusting-in among the wood of sacks soaked in paraffine. The total extent of the damage is not yet known, but it must amount to hundreds of thousands of pounds. In some cases warehouses were burning throughout the night and well into today.

Suspects Fight with Police.

It was during the outbreak at the cotton warehouse in Parliament Street that the fatal shooting affray occurred. Ward saw a group of men acting suspiciously in the doorway of the adjoining warehouse. He walked in among them and saw they were cutting padlocks off the door. He informed a policeman of his suspicions and on the officer's questioning them the men bolted in different directions. Giving chase the constable succeeded in getting hold of one of the men, who swung round and struck him violently with a heavy bolt cutter. Almost the same moment the other man who had got clear turned round and fired at the officer with a revolver. The bullet missed the constable but struck Ward, who died in a few moments.

In the confusion the man who fired the shot escaped. The man who struck the constable is under arrest, having been felled by a civilian. He speaks with an Irish accent, but so far has refused to give any account of himself.

In the Bootle district there was some more shooting but with no fatal result. Five men were seen behaving suspiciously and two policemen approached them. One suspect was found to have the pair of bolt cutters in his hand. He was promptly seized. Another man flourished a revolver and fired at the constables without result. He got away in the confusion.

The incendiary attempt was foiled by the prompt intervention of officers and the military is now guarding the north end of the docks. All is quiet on the Merseyside tonight.

Fires Start Simultaneously.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—A dispatch to the Press Association from Liverpool says:

"An alarming outbreak of Sinn Fein violence occurred on Saturday night, shortly before 9 o'clock. Fire broke out simultaneously both in the south and north ends of Liverpool, and also in Bootle.

"There were seven fires in Bootle and eleven in various parts of Liverpool.

"Subsequent discoveries revealed a well-planned Sinn Fein plot to spread a holocaust of fire among the warehouses in the dock area. The fires were spread over almost all of the whole seven miles of the dock area.

"Owing to the inflammable nature of the contents of the warehouses the flames quickly gained a strong hold, and by 1 o'clock in the morning the whole sky was lit up. The local fire brigades were unable to cope with the situation and were obliged to call brigades from other suburbs. The police commandeered all telephone wires and took all steps to prevent further outbreaks by concentrating policemen along the line of docks.

"Three youths, watching the suspicious movements of two men at the cotton warehouse in Parliament Street, warned the police, who challenged the suspects. Thereupon they bolted and fired upon the police, who pursued them. The policemen were unhurt, but a bullet pierced the heart of a youth, Daniel Ward, who was among those who had warned the police, and he fell dead.

"The fires in some instances were quickly quenched. Others, in stocked cotton warehouses, burned fiercely the night long. One in the south end and another in Bootle, at the north end, are taken as proving that there was careful organization. It was found that all the locks on the warehouses had been cut with bolt cutters. Many empty petrol cans were found on the scene. Each fire was started at more than one place. In the case at one timber yard there were three separate outbreaks.

"It appears that for each building marked for destruction there were allotted gangs numbering from four to five men, one of whom stood sentry while the others cut the locks and applied the inflammables.

"Many fires were suppressed in their early stages, and in these cases there was clear evidence of incendiarism in the finding of rags soaked in paraffin and empty petrol cans and bolt cutters left behind. The most destructive fires were in two large cotton warehouses on either side of Jordan Street, which were not extinguished until 7 o'clock this morning, when the buildings were completely destroyed.

"It is impossible to estimate the total damage, but it is known it will run into hundreds of thousands of pounds.

"The man who shot Daniel Ward escaped, but the police chased and captured his accomplice."

The Liverpool correspondent of the Evening Telegram, in an untimed message, today says:

"An orgy of outrage and destruction, believed to have been engineered by Sinn Feiners, was carried out on twelve cotton warehouses and several timber yards here. Several fires were burning at once, necessitating a call for the assistance of outlying fire brigades. Many of the fires are still burning."

The newspaper says a suspected man, believed to have been connected with one of the fires, when seized by a policeman pulled a revolver and shot the policeman dead. The man later was arrested.

The description of two men wanted in connection with the fires has been circulated by the police, and it is believed, adds the message, that both are connected with the Sinn Fein movement.

Fires Mentioned in Sinn Fein Plan.

Speaking in the House of Commons on Wednesday, Sir Hamar Greenwood, Secretary for Ireland, made public alleged plans for the destruction of Liverpool docks and Manchester power plants. Numerous fires as diversions were mentioned by the Secretary as part of the plan.

The Liverpool plan called for twenty-three officers, twenty-seven engineers and seventy-five privates, with 800 pounds of a high explosive, for attacking twenty-one points, most of them dock gates, with a view to stranding ships.

Diversions suggested in the report would consist "of numerous fires in cotton and other warehouses, starting a half hour before the other operations."

The Manchester plan dealt with the destruction of the street car power plant serving both industries and tram lines, with hammers and explosives, and also the Clayton Valley pumping station, which furnishes water to a large part of the city.

Specific instructions for the manufacture of certain high explosives had been discovered, the Chief Secretary declared, and two carefully detailed plans for the destruction of a large power-house in Manchester and of docks in Liverpool had been found. In the Liverpool case, he said, among the details were instructions regarding action at twenty-one points, involving the use of 800 pounds of gelignite.

THIRD GRAND JURY FOR BUILDING GRAFT

quiry will outstrip the earlier investigation in its manifold ramifications.

The members feel that they have hardly scratched the surface of the real reasons behind the housing shortage. The committee is now in the second phase of its investigation, that of inquiring into the workings of the building material trust. The first phase was the relation of labor or rather that of certain labor leaders to the high cost of building. The next phase will be the relation of banks and insurance companies to the housing shortage. The two combinations to fix prices that have thus far been discovered by the committee and brought into the open are said to be but a small part of the actual evidence regarding combinations that will soon be placed before the public. There are said to be enough cases of violation of the anti-trust laws to keep three Grand Juries busy for a long time.

Real Competition Restored.

Evidence reaching the committee indicates that since the investigation started prices in some building materials has been lowered and real competition in some cases has been restored.

Mr. Untermyer will examine talesmen at 10 o'clock this morning before Justice McAvoy, and it is believed the entire panel of twenty-three men will be obtained today. The trial of George S. Backer will continue in General Sessions. There still remain seven jurors to be chosen before the presentation of evidence begins.

In view of the necessity for his appearance this morning before Justice McAvoy, Mr. Untermyer has asked the Board of Estimate to postpone until 3 o'clock this afternoon the joint meeting of the Lockwood committee and the board. Mr. Untermyer, in the course of the day will probably drop in at the Backer trial, which is being handled by Assistant District Attorneys Robert Johnstone, Albert B. Unger and Special Assistant District Attorney Stanley Richter.

The joint meeting of the Board of Estimate and the Lockwood Committee will take up the proposed form of affidavit that it is expected to submit to all contractors doing city work. Mr. Untermyer has suggested certain procedure to be followed in the cases of contractors doing city work, and he is of the opinion that if his suggestions are followed the city will protect itself and that honest contractors and their employes will also be protected.

Public sessions of the Lockwood Committee will be held in the City Hall tomorrow, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, according to present plans.

BREAD CUT IN PHILADELPHIA.

Fair Price Commissioner Announces Drop of One Cent Dec. 1.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—The price of bread in Philadelphia will be reduced a cent a loaf Dec. 1, according to an announcement tonight by Frank B. McClain, Fair-Price Commissioner for Pennsylvania. The reduction was decided upon by the leading bakers of the city at a recent conference with Mr. McClain.

The present retail price is 11 cents for a one-pound loaf and 15 cents for a twenty-four-ounce loaf. Chain stores reduced their price on a pound loaf to 8 cents about ten days ago.

OPPOSE DE VALERA AS SPOKESMAN HERE

Friends of Freedom and Clan-na-Gael Favor Justice Cohalan as American Leader.

DEPLORE RIVAL BODY

Want Citizen, Not Alien, to Dictate Policy—Big Crowd to Greet MacSwiney's Widow.

That there has come a distinct rift in the ranks of the supporters of the Irish cause in this city, with Supreme Court Justice Daniel F. Cohalan, John Devoy, the Friends of Irish Freedom and the Clan-na-Gael on the one side and Eamon de Valera, "President of the Irish Republic" and his newly formed American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic, on the other, became known yesterday.

Ever since the Republican Convention at Chicago and the National Democratic Convention at San Francisco, when the Irish planks suggested by de Valera were turned down by both parties, American citizens of Irish extraction living in New York State—90 per cent. of the membership of the Friends of Irish Freedom, and a good percentage of the Clan-na-Gael—have wanted their own spokesman to be an American. Their choice was Supreme Court Justice Cohalan.

The 1,200 delegates from all parts of the State who attended the New York State Convention of the Friends of Irish Freedom at the Yorkville Lyceum, in East Eighty-sixth Street, yesterday passed resolutions heartily endorsing Supreme Court Justice Cohalan and Devoy and "deprecating and deploring the attempt now being made to start a rival organization to the Friends of Irish Freedom."

The rival organization referred to is the Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic and its policy will be dictated by "President" de Valera.

Do Not Attack de Valera.

There was no attack on de Valera at the convention yesterday. Lieut. Col. Alexander E. Anderson, President of the State Council, who presided at the session, declared that there had never been any attack on the "President of the Irish Republic" and there would be none.

Reporters were not admitted to the convention hall, but the brief statement made public at the close of the meeting indicated plainly to persons familiar with the situation that an effort was being made to bring Supreme Court Justice Cohalan to the fore as the spokesman for Irish-American sentiment. De Valera, according to some, loses weight in his argument in this country because he is an Irishman first, last and all the time, while Supreme Court Justice Cohalan in all his public pronouncements has declared that he is an American first and an Irishman next. It is behind him then, according to statements yesterday, that the local Irish-Americans wish to stand. This is the statement made public at the close of the convention:

"The New York State Convention of the Friends of Irish Freedom was held yesterday at the Yorkville Lyceum in East Eighty-sixth Street. Lieut. Col. A. E. Anderson of the 165th Regiment, President of the State Council, opened the session and was unanimously elected Chairman of the convention.

The Secretary, T. J. Barrett, reported that delegates representing 153 branches and fifty associate branches of the Friends of Irish Freedom were present, including such remote parts of the State as Buffalo, Rochester, Binghamton and Albany. All the old officers of the State Council were re-elected for the coming year, Miss Sarah McKlevey, President of the Cuman-Na-Bnam, Inc., of New York, being elected to the newly-created office of Vice President. The reports of the various officials were read and adopted.

"In accordance with the constitution, as recently amended, recommendations for the election to the National Council were balloted, for New York State is entitled to twenty-two representatives on the National Council. These were selected with marked unanimity, Justice Daniel F. Cohalan, John Devoy, the Rev. Edward J. O'Reilley and Colonel A. E. Anderson receiving an overwhelming indorsement.

Want United States to Intervene.

"Resolutions were unanimously adopted condemning the savage warfare now being waged against the Irish people, urging the United States Government to intervene as it did in Cuba on account of Spanish atrocities, calling for the immediate recognition of the Irish Republic and pledging continuous support of the Government of the Republic of Ireland, insisting upon a boycott here of British-made goods and the buying of American goods instead, and urging the necessity of a single, compact and ably led organization, and deprecating and deploring the attempt now being made to start a rival organization to the Friends of Irish Freedom."

One member of the Friends of Irish Freedom, who asked that his name be withheld, summed up the situation as follows:

"We are as much for Irish freedom as President de Valera is, and we stand loyally behind him. But there are certain elements which enter into the situation which he must recognize. One of them is that as the spokesman for Ireland he loses weight in this country because he is not an American citizen. Then, again, it must be remembered that the American citizens of Irish extraction are for America first, while de Valera is for Ireland first. The Friends of Irish Freedom is about 99 per cent. made up of American citizens. Justice Daniel Cohalan is wanted as our spokesman.

"We are all for Irish freedom. It is a matter of leadership solely. In other words, we do not want De Valera as the President of the Irish Republic to dictate the policy of American citizens."

The American Women's Reception Committee of which ex-Congressman Jeannette Rankin of Montana is Chairman, is making arrangements for the reception of Mrs. Terence MacSwiney, widow of the Lord Mayor of Cork, who will arrive on the Celtic on Friday or Saturday. From the interest shown in her arrival it is expected that thousands will greet her at the waterfront. It was announced last night that a special bodyguard was being selected for the widow, consisting of the longshoremen who struck several weeks ago as a protest against keeping the dying hunger-strikers in jail any longer.

Mrs. MacSwiney will be accompanied by Miss Mary MacSwiney, a sister of the late Lord Mayor. They are to be the guests of Mrs. Henry Villard, mother of Oswald Garrison Villard, organizer of the Commission of One Hundred to study the Irish question.

WALK OUT ON COHALAN.

De Valera Faction Bolts Convention in Massachusetts.

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 28.—One hundred delegates to the State Convention of the Friends of Irish Freedom at the Grand Theatre here this afternoon walked out of the auditorium when it was announced that Justice Cohalan of New York was to speak. The bolters represented the de Valera adherents among the supporters of the Irish cause. They were led by the Holyoke delegation. There were 455 delegates in all present.

The de Valera men stuck through most of the business of a stormy session, which tested the tactfulness of Father James J. Howard, Chairman, in keeping order at times when the opinions of the rival factions clashed. The de Valera adherents lost their fight to have all business relating to the future of the organization presented from the floor and not through the Resolutions Committee.

Judge Cohalan, who was received with cheers, told of the break between himself and de Valera over the plank to be presented to the national political conventions. He declared that his plank, had it been made part of the Republican platform, would have prevented the prevalent atrocities and reprisals in Ireland.

IRISH SYMPATHIZERS SPLIT.

Part of Friends of Irish Freedom in Pennsylvania Withdraw.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Nov. 28.—Proposed propaganda in America and the methods to be used caused a split today in the State convention of the Friends of Irish Freedom, many delegates, headed by former Congressman Michael Donahoe and John T. Flood, both of Philadelphia, leaving the hall and organizing a separate convention in an adjoining theatre.

The body headed by John F. Buckley of Scranton claimed that only about one-fourth of the delegates withdrew, but the Donahoe-Flood supporters declared most of the Philadelphia delegation and parts of other delegations throughout the State had joined them and that they would be recognized as the regular organization in Pennsylvania by the national body.

The Donahoe-Flood delegates elected William A. Lacy, Pittsburgh; President; David Garrahan, Allentown, Vice President; Mark A. Gallagher, Philadelphia, Treasurer, and John J. Sigerson, Philadelphia, Secretary.

Buckley supporters later adopted resolutions to merge with the American Association for the Recognition of Irish Independence, which merger, it was announced, has the approval of Eamonn de Valera, "President of the Irish Republic." Mr. Buckley was chosen President and other officers elected included James P. Mulvihill, Pittsburgh, Vice President; Mrs. David Jones, Canonsburg, State Treasurer, and Francis S. Clark, Philadelphia, State Secretary.

POSTAL CO. INCREASES RATES AND WAGES

Increases of 20 per cent. in rates and 10 per cent. in salaries to employes, effective Dec. 1, were announced yesterday by the Postal Telegraph and Cable Company through its Secretary, William J. Deegan.

In a statement issued by the company and sent to its offices throughout the country, the increases are announced as "necessary to meet increased operating expenses, to properly care for our employes and give better service to the public."

Under the increases the rates will be on a level with those charged by other telegraph and cable companies in the United States, Mr. Deegan said.

The increase brings the Postal Company's rates to the same level in effect before the wires were returned to private ownership, when Clarence H. Mackay, President of the company, was in controversy with Postmaster General Burleson in regard to Mr. Burleson's 20 per cent. toll increase order.

Mr. Mackay, in correspondence with Mr. Burleson, argued for an early return of the wires and promised the public that when this was done the rates of the Postal Company would be reduced immediately. Mr. Mackay made good his promise and reduced the rates 20 per cent.

In opposing the increase ordered by Mr. Burleson at that time Mr. Mackay said that it would mean a loss of $16,000,000 a year to telegraph users.

deavor within my recollection. They are more ready in attack upon the Church than in defense against unjust assaults upon it. I am not aware of any conspicuous effort on the part of any of them to aid you in your defense of the Catholic charitable institutions when our nuns and religious communities were bitterly assailed and their homes and institutions attacked and invaded in a far more insidious manner than was the Union Club. Their attitude then was one of silence, of apology for and even of defense of your opponents.

Their action in rushing into print with their letter indicates to my mind a desire rather to advertise themselves than to effect any good purpose by their communication. It would have seemed more commendable at least to have awaited your answer, if you deem it worthy of reply, than to have forwarded their letter to the press, in all probability before you had received it yourself or had an opportunity to give it such attention as you may have deemed it deserved. Genuine reverence for their church, a decent regard and respect for your Grace, should have prompted at least that.

I feel satisfied that I am expressing the views of the practical Catholics of your archdiocese, those who not only profess but live up to the teachings and traditionsofthe Church and who see to it that their children are reared and educated amid Catholic influences, so that they, too, may remain true to the faith of their fathers, when I resent the suggestion contained in the letter in question and the implication that your Grace is answerable in any manner to the signers of the letter for the occurrence of which they complain.

With sentiments of deep respect, believe me,

Very respectfully yours,
ALFRED J. TALLEY.

Archbishop May Reply Today.

The resentment over the "letter of protest," as made evident by the action of the governing body of the Catholic Club, was apparently more keen among members of the Catholic clergy than among the members of the laity. There was a general agreement that this letter was unprecedented in the history of the Catholic Church in this country, and one priest went so far as to characterize it as an "insult" to the Archbishop.

No statement upon the matter could be obtained from Archbishop Hayes. It was intimated that some comment upon the letter might be expected from the archepiscopal residence today. Signers of the "letter of protest" were informed last night by THE NEW YORK TIMES of the letter of Mr. Talley and its indorsement by the Catholic Club Board of Managers, but declined to make a reply.

No mention of the attack upon the Union Club was made yesterday at any of the services at St. Patrick's Cathedral. Copies of The Sinn Feiner were sold for 10 cents each in the porch of the cathedral by small boys. The issue was dated Saturday and contained an editorial upon Terence MacSwiney, former Lord Mayor of Cork, and an article commending the recent attacks upon the British flag at the Capitol Theatre.

Praise from Protestant Pulpit.

The sixty signers of the "letter of protest" were praised by the Rev. S. Edward Young, pastor of the Bedford Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, in his sermon last evening. Dr. Young said that "officials in high places" were really to blame for the attack. He said, in part:

"The Sinn Fein attack upon the British flag at the Union Club was about as villainous a piece of lawlessness as could be conceived. It preceded and followed divine worship. It defied the noble appeal of Mgr. Lavelle. It violated property rights. It jeopardized many lives. It insulted the flag of a friendly nation.

"Officials in high places really started that mob. Conferring the freedom of New York upon De Valera, the vote of Congress expressing sympathy for the Irish and similar attempts to slap Great Britain in the face are responsible.

"We never could have endured these outrages so patiently as has Great Britain. The sooner we deport a lot of these fanatical Sinn Feiners, the better it will be for America, and, in the long run, for Ireland.

"All honor to those Catholic laymen who have the courage to protest. Our hundreds of thousands of patriotic Irishmen, who are law-abiding American citizens, can serve this country and Ireland too by utterly repudiating Sinn Feinism and giving these extremists to understand that there is no place for them and their propaganda on American soil."

The Union Club, with its smashed windows unrepaired, was under police guard all day yesterday and last night, and was regarded with interest by thousands who were impelled by curiosity to pass by. Policemen on duty expressed belief that another display of the British flag might lead to further disorder.

ANTI-BRITISH SPIRIT A PERIL, SAYS PASTOR

Mayflower Passengers Were Pure Anglo-Saxon, Dr. Kelman Declares in Sermon.

PREDICTS NEW CREED HERE

The Rev. C. F. Potter Sees Abundant Evidence of Move—Many Pastors Praise Pilgrims.

"Pilgrim Fathers' Sunday" was celebrated in many churches yesterday, pastors preaching sermons on the Mayflower and its influence on American history.

"Anything that is anti-British here is the most ignorant and dangerous thing in the world today," declared the Rev. Dr. John Kelman, yesterday morning, in a sermon on "The Pilgrim Fathers" at the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church. Dr. Kelman is a Scotchman, having come here just a year ago this month from Edinburgh, where he was pastor of St. George's Free Church.

He also declared that anything which was anti-American "over there" is likewise dangerous and ignorant. "Let us set our faces against it," he added.

"Those on the Mayflower were British men and women," continued Dr. Kelman. "Every man and woman on the ship was pure Anglo-Saxon. America's most original and characteristic traits come from her British blood."

The Rev. Charles Francis Potter in a sermon, yesterday, before the congregation of the West Side Unitarian Church, now worshiping in Earl Hall, Columbia University, prophesied the coming of a new American national religion and asserted that there is abundant evidence of such a religion at the present time.

The Rev. Dr. Alexander Ramsey, pastor of Highgate Presbyterian Church, London, who is one of the British delegates to the Pilgrim Tercentennial, preached yesterday morning and last evening, in the West End Presbyterian Church, Amsterdam Avenue and One Hundred and Fifth Street.

"The Men of the Half Moon" was the topic of a sermon by the Rev. Dr. David James Burrell, yesterday morning, in the Marble Collegiate Reformed Church, Fifth Avenue and Twenty-ninth Street.

The Rev. Dr. Frank M. Goodchild gave an illustrated lecture last evening on "A Little Journey to the Homes of the Pilgrim Fathers" in the Central Baptist Church, Ninety-second Street and Amsterdam Avenue.

"Pilgrims, Old and New," was the subject yesterday morning of the Rev. Dr. Edgar Whitaker Work in Fourth Presbyterian Church, West End Avenue and Ninety-first Street.

The Rev. Dr. Walter D. Buchanan took the same topic for his sermon yesterday morning in the Broadway Presbyterian Church at 114th Street.

"The Pilgrim and the Book" was the theme of the Rev. Frederick W. Evans, pastor of the Harlem-New York Presbyterian Church, Mount Morris Park West and 122d Street.

less reticent, now that the fact that the bankers had intervened in the tangle has become public. In general, spokesmen of some of the institutions which are working together in the matter asserted that their intervention had accomplished four things—it had steadied the market, it had aided the brokerage houses involved with Mr. Ryan, it had aided the banks and it had been most helpful to Mr. Ryan himself.

Such bankers as were willing to talk were in agreement in declaring that they felt certain the final composition of Mr. Ryan's financial affairs would leave the institutions which loaned him money without a dollar of loss. As to Mr. Ryan's own position, they were not quite so positive, but one said: "There is every reason to believe that in the course of time, after his assets have been liquidated, a substantial margin will remain for him."

Value of Assets Exceeds Loans.

This banker expressed confidence that Mr. Ryan's assets, or more directly, the properties behind them, were worth much more than the amount of the loans for which his securities were collateral, and it was simply a case of not trying to realize on that collateral at an inopportune time and in most costly haste. Mr. Ryan, he said, was confronted with a falling market, and found himself with liquid liabilities and non-liquid assets, and then the banks stepped in under an amicable, harmonious and co-operative arrangement.

Inquiry yesterday as to the exact time and place of the meeting which some bankers said on Friday would take place today to consummate the arrangement, met with the declaration in informed quarters that if such a meeting should take place it would simply be in routine furtherance of an operation already in full swing. "It's all over and done," said one banker. "The banks have been 'sitting in' on the situation for some time."

Stories that appeals had been made by or for Mr. Ryan to his father, Thomas Fortune Ryan, for aid in the crisis, coupled with rumors that the son's situation had healed the breach existing between the two since the elder Ryan's second marriage, brought the assertion from one financier who has been in touch with the whole Ryan affair that "an indirect appeal had been made to the elder Ryan." He added that while, so far as he knew, the old breach between father and son had not been healed, and up to the present time the father had not come to his son's aid, there was reason to believe that his decision was not final and that he might yet take a hand in setting his son's affairs straight.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Allan A. Ryan, who is reported to have come to Washington for a conference with John Skelton Williams, Controller of the Currency, could not be located in Washington today or tonight, after a canvass of the leading hotels. Controller Williams, who could not be found at his home or office, was believed by his associates in the Treasury to have gone to Richmond.

Williams Spent Day in Richmond.

Special to The New York Times.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 28.—John Skelton Williams, Controller of the Currency, was at his home here today and left about 8 o'clock tonight to return to Washington.

Inquiry here failed to develop that he had seen Allan A. Ryan of New York while Mr. Williams was in Richmond. Whether or not Mr. Ryan, who was reported to have left New York for a Sunday conference with the Controller at the capital, communicated with Mr. Williams here was not earned.

WANT AMERICAN AID ON DISARMAMENT

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

way, and it was voted last night that the Council should be the judge and that no individual blockade action should be valid unless the Council approved it. Representatives of the small States argued that special circumstances might warrant exceptions, but H. A. L. Fisher of Great Britain and Leon Bourgeois of France declared that the meaning of the covenant with regard to the use of the economic weapon against a violator was quite clear—that, moreover, this was the one real weapon which the League possessed and that it must be used strictly and universally to be effective. They said that the Council must decide.

Tittoni to Quit the Meeting.

Tommaso Tittoni, head of the Italian delegation, is leaving for Rome tomorrow and will not return. He is understood to have found himself out of sympathy with the less conservative leaders on many points.

His greatest lack of success has been regarding his project for a world pooling of raw materials, which was supported by the smaller States but opposed by Great Britain and France. Yesterday Commission No. 2, of which he is Chairman, refused to accept the report of the Brussels Conference containing a paragraph advocating this world pooling system.

Tittoni has not been in good health for some days, but is able to travel. Ex-Premier Nitti may replace him.

Sharp Conflict Over Pooling.

GENEVA, Nov. 28 (Associated Press).—The question whether countries shall be allowed to control and dispose at will of their natural resources has been the subject of a sharp conflict in a committee of the Assembly. The contest arose over a resolution by Gustave Ador of Switzerland, proposing to set up a permanent economic and financial commission, one of the duties of which would be to examine measures for preventing monopolies in raw materials and the means of controlling their distribution.

The resolution is based on Article XXIII. of the covenant, which assures all States equitable treatment. It is supported chiefly by Italy, Switzerland and other countries not rich in raw materials.

One of the strongest opponents of the resolution is Sir George E. Foster of Canada, who has taken the same attitude as N. W. Rowell, also of Canada, who served notice on the Assembly in an impressive speech recently that any attempt to exercise such control would be regarded as interference in internal affairs, to which Canada would never submit.

Mr. Rowell at the same time said that the entry of the United States could not be hoped for if any such interference were attempted.

Advisory Power as to Oil Fields.

The question of mandates is a difficult subject coming up this week. The Council has on the agenda for tomorrow the nomination of a permanent mandate commission, and another committee at the same time will take up the general question in the form of terms and control of mandates.

With respect to mandates, most of the delegates are very reserved regarding the bearing which the position of the United States in the matter of the exploitation of the Mesopotamian oil fields would have upon the settlement of the mandate question by the Assembly.

One of the non-European delegates points out, however, that the Mesopotomian mandate is in Class A, which carries with it only advisory powers on the part of the mandatory, and that consequently it is for Great Britain to advise, not dictate, what shall be the economic policy in Mesopotamia. Others recall that the whole theory of mandates rests on the principle of equality and justice, and that it was not intended that territories involved should be exploited for the profit of the mandatory State.

"If it is true that the nations seeking mandates are looking for the utmost good for the people placed under their guidance," said another delegate, "then any profits of the exploitation of economic resources under the mandate will naturally go to the people themselves."

Still another matter on the program of the Council for tomorrow is to decide what reply shall be made to the German protest against the approval of the results of the Eupen-Malmedy plebiscite. Germany contends that the Belgian troops of occupation exerted pressure on the population.

HOPEFUL OF ACTION TO RESCUE ARMENIA

But There Is Little Expectation at Geneva That America Will Help.

By G. H. PERRIS.

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, Nov. 28.—Lord Robert Cecil, Dr. Nansen and their colleagues of the Armenia Committee are very hopeful of carrying through their plans.

Lord Robert, whose devotion and stout independence have made him from the outset one of the most striking figures in the League Assembly, now looks in his pallid intensity more than ever like a Peter the Hermit spurring the nations to a new crusade. His fiery confidence is that if he gets the $20,000,000 he is demanding of rich Americans and Europeans—and the prospect is said to be favorable—not only the remnant of the Armenian people but the soul of the League of Nations itself will have been saved.

But while giving these crusaders all due credit it would be folly to magnify the power of their admirable zeal. It may be that General Maurice and their other advisors are justified in the belief that if the money were forthcoming a force of 60,000 men, or whatever number that may be found necessary, could easily be raised and rapidly brought to bear upon the Kemalists. Their plans can naturally not be published, and so cannot be criticised. Suppose them perfect for so much of the task as can now be foreseen, but the history of military expeditions warns us that only the first stage can be foreseen and that the after developments may bring many a heavy surprise.

There are no patent pills to cure generations of crime and cowardice. Mustapha Kemal might be bought off or removed tomorrow and a new chief might appear next year at the head of a movement no less redoubtable. It is the chief allied Governments alone that can permanently save Armenia and the neighboring States and give them possibilities of order and progress.

Lord Robert is not blind to these considerations. He is fully alive, as he assures me, to the fact that the only hopeful line of action is to help the Armenians to stand alone. In appealing for money, which would be considered as a loan to Armenia, he is attacking the most flagrant weakness of the situation of all civilized Governments today—that in the exhaustion of their people they are afraid of incurring expenditure for however noble a purpose. To remove that difficulty would be immensely to lighten the problem.

Hope, therefore, lies neither along the lines of the Viviani nor the Cecil proposition alone, but in a combination of them, which would harmonize with and fall within the policy for the whole problem of Asia Minor, which the British and French Premiers with Count Sforza are understood to have been discussing in London.

The League Council meets tomorrow, and it is just possible that it may then have received a reply from President Wilson. Although there is little hope here that the United States will take or participate in action in this matter, the contingency cannot yet be dismissed. On the whole there is a better prospect of something being done to right this ancient wrong than for many a long year.

SING SING CONVICTS DASH FOR LIBERTY

Open Cell Block Door With Burglar's False Key and Hide in Yard.

ONE RECAPTURED AT ONCE

The Other Sneaked Back to Cell and "Played Possum," but Later Confessed.

Special to The New York Times.

OSSINING, N. Y., Nov. 28.—Using a burglar's false key to open one of the heavy steel doors of the cell block at Sing Sing prison, James Taylor, a convict serving a term for robbery, made his way into the prison yard tonight and hid there for two hours in the hope that he would have a chance to make a break for freedom over the walls bordering the Hudson River. With him on his unsuccessful attempt was another convict, Michael Dohar, who tried to escape two years ago and was punished with the addition of another year to a sentence of four years.

One of the guards in the yard saw the streak of light shoot into the darkness from the quickly opened door, and he shouted a warning to the armed men in the towers, one of whom telephoned the alarm to the office of Warden Lewis E. Lawes. The guards saw two men hurry out of the door, but in the darkness they could not see whether they had been able to climb the river barricade.

All guards off duty were rushed to the river wall and extra men patrolled the other sides of the prison, rifles ready, so that the two convicts would have little chance of getting away in any bold break for liberty. Then a search of the yard was begun, and Dohar was quickly found near the house where the fire apparatus is kept. He refused to give any information about his companion.

Then the searching guards had a bad hour and a half. All the other convicts were at a moving picture show in the chapel and, although Warden Lawes was sure that it was Taylor who was missing, he ordered all prisoners into the cell blocks so that a recount could be made. By this time Taylor had lost his nerve in the dark yard, and he decided to sneak into the marching line of convicts, make his way back to his own cell, and "play possum" by going to sleep there, locked up tight so that no one would think he had ever tried to escape.

When the count showed no man missing and, faced with the positive assertion of two guards that they had seen two prisoners leave the cell block, the wardens were puzzled. Two men left the cell block, one was recaptured and still none was missing. Finally, they rolled Taylor out, and he told of his attempt to escape. He had been working in the print shop late with Dohar in the adjoining Mutual Welfare Room, and they decided that it was time to "break."

Neither convict would tell what kind of key he had used to open the complicated lock on the cell door, and a search for the invention was ordered so that no more doors would fly open for Sing Sing inmates while guards were not around. Taylor is serving eight years for robbery and has six more, not including the possible penalty of an extra year or so for this attempt to escape. Dohar was sent up from Westchester County for six years for assault.

An American in Paris

IN PARIS a certain American business man is now an active investor in the New York market.

At the outbreak of the war when he went across as an officer, he left all his securities in the custody of our Customers' Securities Department. Now, as a business man in Paris, he continues the arrangement.

By cable he instructs us to buy and sell securities which we either charge or credit to his deposit account. In addition to this we handle all details in connection with the care of his holdings, such as the detaching of coupons and the watching for called bonds and stock subscription rights and we keep a record of this income for tax purposes.

Many persons residing here in New York are more out of touch with their investments than this man situated in Paris. Their securities, locked in their safe deposit boxes and allowed to look after themselves, are only half alive, and are frequently not being used to the best advantage.

Our Customers' Securities Department is equipped to act practically as your Financial Secretary for moderate fees. We shall be glad to send you on request our booklet "The Modern Method Of Caring For Securities".

COURT FAVORITISM CHARGED BY FORD

Justice Writes Gov.-Elect Miller Complaining of Appellate Division's Policy.

WANTS CHANGE IN THE LAW

Censorship by Seven Justices in Higher Court Unjust to Supreme Bench, He Says.

Justice John Ford of the Supreme Court, who was re-elected at the last election with the indorsement of both parties, made public yesterday a letter to Governor-elect Miller, complaining that the Justices of the Appellate Division of the First Department exercised favoritism in distributing desirable assignments to Justices of the Supreme Court in the First Judicial District.

He included a table covering the last fourteen years to show that a few Justices had been selected by the Appellate Justices for the assignments which carry with them important services, prestige and patronage. These are the assignments to Parts I, II and III in New York County.

Justice Ford complains that the alleged tendency to keep certain Justices in these Parts, which require and develop superior judicial ability, constitutes an injury to the Justices selected for work calling for less learning and mental power. Justice Ford suggests an amendment to the law to remedy the situation. Here is his letter:

"Nov. 27, 1920.

"Hon. Nathan L. Miller, Governor-elect,
Hotel St. Regis, New York:

"Dear Judge Miller: Two reasons prompt me to address to you this communication relating to the manner in which the Justices of the Appellate Division of the First Department exercise their power over the Supreme Court and its Justices in the First Judicial District.

"The first reason is that the integrity and good repute of the Appellate Division will be peculiarly in your charge during your term of office, since it is essentially an appointive (designated) gubernatorial court. The terms of two of its members expire, and it is not unlikely that other vacancies will occur during your term of office.

"Secondly, you have sat upon that court, and are intimately familiar with the motives and influences which govern its Justices in the performance of their administrative functions.

"This communication relates not to the Appellate Division as a court, but to the Justices of the Appellate Division as a body exercising extra-judicial powers.

"During the fourteen years of my service upon the bench the seven Justices of the Appellate Division of this department have prevented Justices of the Supreme Court from fully exercising the functions of their office, as shown by the annexed tabulation and analysis. This they have done in contravention of the Constitution, in my opinion. In this view I am confirmed by the practical construction placed upon the Constitution of the three other Appellate Divisions, who have never presumed to pass upon the qualifications of their fellow-Justices of the Supreme Court or to exclude them from any work of the court, as is the practice of the Appellate Division Justices of the First Department.

Seven Judges as Censors.

"From the tabulation it is evident either that these seven Justices are actuated by personal motives or that they assume the right to determine the fitness of other Justices to discharge the duties of the office to which the people have elected them. They will scarcely admit that their persistent assignment of some Justices to the inferior work of the courts while the more important functions are discharged by the others is prompted by partisanship, favoritism or malice. If we assume, however, that they would give in explanation of their undoubted discrimination against certain Justices and in favor of others, that they endeavor to assign to the most important work of the courts those Justices who in their opinion are best qualified for it, we are squarely up to the main question involved.

"Have they the right under the Constitution to pass upon the qualifications of any Justice to perform any of the duties of his office? If they have not this power from the Constitution itself, then they have it not at all, for the Legislature cannot give it to them.

"In the broadest and most unqualified terms the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court has been declared and confirmed by successive Constitutions from the beginning of the State Government.

"Authority to curtail the powers so given, to be effective, must be conferred by the Constitution in language clear and explicit. The power conferred by the Constitution upon the Justices of the Appellate Division to fix the times and places for holding special terms and to assign the Justices to hold such terms surely is not sufficient to warrant the exclusion of any Justice from performing any of the work of the Supreme Court. The Constitution takes no cognizance of the peculiar system of classifying causes in vogue in the First Judicial District and the concentration of all of the several classes in separate calendars. The purpose of the fundamental law is merely to ensure that Justices would be present at reasonable times to try ready causes in every county of the State.

No Hint in Constitution.

"There is no hint of power to exclude any Justice from the right to hear those causes or to discriminate between Justices on any ground. The practice of discriminating has its foundation in legislative enactments which are ineffective because they are in derogation of the Constitution so far as they seem to authorize the practice.

"If, for instance, the Legislature should directly enact that this body of seven men 'designated' by the Governor, should have the power in their discretion to revise the popular decree by passing upon the qualifications of the elected Justices of the Supreme Court in the First Judicial District and excluding some of them from the right and opportunity to discharge any part of the functions of the office to which they had been elected, such an enactment would be laughed out of court as palpably unconstitutional.

"It is elementary that what the Legislature may not do directly it cannot do by indirection.

"You will observe from the tabulation in which large measure the Justices of the Appellate Division have excluded some Justices from the most important and desirable equity parts of the court. They have indeed reduced some of them almost to the status of mere nisi prius Justices. If there were warrant in the Constitution for thus stripping Justices of the most important functions of their office it is but a short step further for them to refuse to assign a Justice to any of the work of the court and thus divest him of all his prerogatives as a Justice of the Supreme Court.

Three Judges "Carpet Baggers."

"Be it remembered that these seven men who presume to thus degrade Justices were themselves elected merely as Justices of the same rank. And three of them were not even so elected by the people of this Judicial District—'carpet baggers' they would be called if they held any other office. All the seven are Justices of the Appellate Division by mere designation of the Governor without confirmation by the Senate even, although the designation of the three up-State Justices carries an increase in yearly compensation of $7,500 to each, besides other valuable perquisites, all at the expense of the taxpayers of Manhattan and Bronx Counties.

"Thus far I have treated the subject in the light of the primary principles of American Government. I mean the integrity and independence of the Supreme Court, particularly its freedom from any oppressive or coercive influence emanating from either the legislative or the executive department of government, and the fundamental right of elected Constitutional officers to exercise the functions of their office and to be answerable only to the authority prescribed by the Constitution. The power to reward and punish trial Justices which the Appellate Division Justices arrogate to themselves is incompatible either with integrity or independence and savors rather of Oriental despotism than American democracy.

Personal Phase of Question.

"But there are also vital personal considerations involved. These seven men know that the bench and bar and others who are at all conversant with the work of the courts construe their refusal to assign Justices to the three most coveted and important parts of the court as a verdict of unfitness found against them by this jury of seven. It is their stamp of deficiency placed upon the names of the Justices so barred. Ordinarily one who is elected to the Supreme Court begins a new career. It becomes his lifework and in it he has the right to make the most of himself. That he cannot do trying negligence cases. He can keep himself abreast of the law and show the best that is in him only by doing his full share of all the work of the court.

"Trying jury cases month after month becomes monotonous and tiresome to the last degree and tends to make the trial Justice mentally lopsided. He may know all there is to know about the law of negligence and of sales, but he will grow stale and rusty in the other and higher reaches of law and equity.

"In the three parts of the court embraced in the tabulation he is confronted with a hundred difficult questions daily and his mind is freshened up and expanded by the vast and varied fields of study and research which he must cover in the solution of the problems presented. For a Justice to be denied the privilege of sitting in these parts is to be shut out from the opportunity to make for himself as distinguished a career on the bench as his natural endowments, his educational equipment and his own efforts can gain for him. Further, he has the same right to aspire to higher office in the judicial or other fields, or to re-enter the practice of law, as has any one of these seven Justices of the Appellate Division.

Can Blight Judge's Prospects.

"It should not and does not rest with these men under the Constitution to blight those prospects by turning a Justice of the Supreme Court into a mere trial master. They never, as far as I know, have condescended to explain where they find legal warrant for their discrimination in making assignments.

"They can hardly claim that it is in the Constitution, since in the three other departments of the State the Justices of the respective Appellate Divisions do not find it there. In those departments the Justices of the Supreme Court are permitted to divide their work among themselves. This is so in every other court in the State, in the Federal courts and in every other court in the civilized world so far as I have been able to discover. Only in the First Judicial District—the heart of the financial and commercial world—do we find Judges reduced to the status of clerks to an extraneous body, and the Judges so treated are not those of the City Court, the Municipal Court or the Court of General Sessions—they are the Justices of the Supreme Court in that long suffering strip of territory which contained the old City of New York.

"Upon what authority do the seven Justices of this department rely as warrant for robbing a Justice of the right to exercise the functions of his office? I can find nothing except the second paragraph of Section 84 of the Judiciary Law, and that is unconstitutional on its face. Unfortunately, there is no established procedure for getting this section before the courts for judicial construction, but I am confident that one will be found to test their right to brand Justices as unfit for their office.

Suggests Change in Law.

"I am of opinion that the repeal of the second paragraph of Section 84 of the Judiciary Law would put an end to the present practice and that the mode of dividing court work which is followed with success, attended by satisfaction all around, in the three other departments of the Supreme Court would then be adopted in this department also and the court in this district thus lifted in some degree toward a plane of equality with the Supreme Court as administered in the other eight districts of the State.

"Do you not think it is important enough for you to embody in your forthcoming message to the Legislature a recommendation that the part of the section indicated be repealed? I enclose a proposed bill for that purpose which shows the legislative discrimination against the New York District.

"The first paragraph of the section correctly paraphrases the provision of the Constitution found in section 2, article VI, and by it terms applies to all departments alike.

"The second paragraph takes this department out of the operation of the first paragraph and attempts to change the plain terms of the Constitution, first by making mandatory that which is discretionary, and second by attempting to limit the power of the Justices of the Appellate Division to make rules as the Constitution contemplates. My suggestion is to repeal the second paragraph, leaving all the four departments of the State under the operation of the same statute. This would be a quicker and simpler remedy than could be found in a resort to the courts or an appeal to the electorate.

"Your power and influence can cure the abuses to which I have called attention, and to do so would be to serve the Commonwealth signally and fundamentally by restoring in large measure the Supreme Court and its Justices in the First Judicial District to that status of independence and untrammeled freedom of action which the Constitution contemplates. Sincerely yours.

"JOHN FORD."

Services of Justices.

The most important statistical matter submitted to Governor-elect Miller is the following:

ASSIGNMENTS OF JUSTICES OF THE SUPREME COURT TO SPECIAL TERM, PARTS I., II. AND III., NEW YORK COUNTY, FOR THE LAST 14 YEARS AND TO SPECIAL TERMS IN BRONX COUNTY SINCE ITS CREATION.

In these parts the patronage of the courts is dispensed—referees, receivers, trustees, guardians and commissioners appointed. Here litigants must apply for injunctions, attachments, orders of arrest, new trials, dismissal of indictments, writs of habeas corpus and a multitude of other forms of relief. Every legal and equitable question imaginable comes before these special term parts.

MILLER TO CONFER HERE ON POLICIES

Traction Situation to Be Discussed With Local Republican Leaders.

FIRST MEETING TODAY

Reorganization of Public Service Commission Believed Certain—Fare Increase May Be Delayed.

The policies which Governor-elect Nathan L. Miller will follow after he takes office on Jan. 1 will be determined in part by conferences with New York City and State Republican leaders which will begin today. Governor-elect Miller will arrive here this morning, and is expected to remain for several days, closing up his legal business, as well as getting the views of the local Republicans.

The most important matter from the local viewpoint to be discussed by Judge Miller is the New York City traction situation and the proposed reorganization of the Public Service Commission. According to well-informed Republicans here, reorganization of the Public Service Commission is certain, and the only doubt is as to whether the up-State Public Service Commission will be reorganized as well. The suggestion has been made, as stated in THE TIMES yesterday, that there should be only one commission, with statewide power. From the Republican viewpoint, this would have the advantage of legislating out of office two Democratic members of the up-State commission, but it was said to be regarded with disfavor by the New York City Republican leaders.

The plan, said to be advocated by local Republicans, is a return to the old commission of five members here, probably with increased powers, such as the power to fix rates, which would mean the power to increase fares, if the courts should hold that the Legislature had the legal right to grant it.

Governor-elect Miller is understood to favor a settlement of the traction muddle in New York City in what he has described as an "equitable" manner. He said in his campaign speeches that he "believed that the interest on subway bonds should be cared for out of operation," but has also disclaimed favoring an increased fare without further knowledge of the situation.

Oppose Immediate Fare Increase.

The Republican organization leaders, it was learned, are opposed to any action by either the Legislature or the Governor, or both, which would increase fares during the coming year. It was said that Samuel S. Koenig, New York County Chairman; Jacob A. Livingston, the Brooklyn leader, and Richard W. Lawrence, County Chairman of the Bronx, were ready to protest to Judge Miller against any such action, on the ground that it would probably result in the re-election of Mayor Hylan, who has made political capital out of his opposition to an increased fare, and at any rate would make the election of a Republican or fusion candidate for Mayor doubtful, if not impossible. These county leaders are expected to urge that, if action to increase fares is considered necessary, it should be delayed until 1922, after the city election.

Another matter to be put before the Governor-elect is the question of a legislative inquiry into the conduct of the city administration by Mayor Hylan and his associates, to follow the leads opened by the disclosures before the Lockwood Committee. One element of the Republican Party was said to be strongly in favor of such an inquiry in the belief that much might be developed to discredit the present city administration and help in the election of the Republican candidate for Mayor.

Mr. Livingston was said to consider a legislative investigation advisable, while Mr. Koenig was said to remain uncommitted on the question of its desirability. At Republican State Headquarters the view taken was that, as it was entirely a city matter, the outcome would depend upon the views of the local Republican leaders and the Republican members of the Legislature from New York City.

Other matters to be discussed will concern action to be taken toward the so-called "liberal" laws, including those permitting Sunday baseball, Sunday "movies" and the act creating the Boxing Commission.

Prohibition Enforcement.

There might also be discussion of a State prohibition enforcement law, if it were not known that Governor-elect Miller will insist upon its passage and that this is likely to be one of the first important bills which will be passed by the next Legislature.

The State enforcement law will parallel the Federal Volstead act, it was said, and place the legal limit of alcohol in beverages at one-half of 1 per cent. It will not be proposed to form a new State Department but the enforcement of the State law will be left to local officials.

Abolition of the present State Excise Department was originally contemplated, but it has been found that it still has a legitimate function in the collection of the "volume" tax placed on druggists dealing in alcohol, the receipts from which more than pay the cost of the department. It was said to be probable that the State Excise Department would be retained, but without any enforcement function.

According to persons high in the State Republican organization, neither the Governor-elect nor the leaders of the Republican Legislature have any intention of abolishing Sunday baseball or forbidding the opening of motion-picture theatres on Sunday. A few up-State Republicans were said to have suggested repeal of the present law permitting local authorities to legalize Sunday baseball as a measure of punishment for the "liberal" and "sporting" elements in New York City, which they believe to have voted strongly for the re-election of Governor Alfred E. Smith and against Judge Miller, but it was said that the suggestion never met with favor from the latter. The suggestion has been made that a tax be placed on Sunday baseball, similar to the war tax on theatre tickets, and it was said that possibly this might be done.

To Reorganize Commission.

So far as the boxing situation is concerned, it was said that the Boxing Commission would certainly be reorganized, even if the Walker act, which created it, was not repealed. A reorganization was said to be the more probable, and the present officials, largely Tammany members, will be replaced by Republicans if that course is followed. More stringent regulations would probably be incorporated in whatever legislation might be adopted as well as a limitation on the size of purses. It was said that Judge Miller, as Governor, would be unlikely to permit the proposed Dempsey-Carpentier fight to take place in the State.

The Governor-elect was said to have given little thought as yet to appointments, although Lieut. Col. Eugene V. Kincaid of Syracuse, formerly with the Twenty-seventh Division, was said to be reasonably certain of appointment as Adjutant General. Colonel Kincaid is now Judge Advocate on the staff of General John F. O'Ryan, commander of the State Guard.

George W. Franklin of Troy, former Deputy Superintendent of Prisons, is a candidate for Superintendent. Mr. Franklin has the indorsement of the Rensselaer County Republican organization. Edwin Duffey of Cortland County, who was Commissioner of Highways under Governor Whitman, may have this post if he wishes it, it was said. Colonel Frederick S. Greene, the present Commissioner, who was appointed by Governor Smith, still has three years of his term to serve, but is understood to be willing to retire.

Governor-elect Miller was said to have decided to recognize William Barnes, Republican leader in Albany County, by appointing an Albany man Superintendent of Buildings. He also was said to intend to appoint a number of women to posts of prominence, but as yet to have made no selections.

I. H. STERN'S HOME ROBBED.

Thieves Bind and Gag Caretaker, Then Enter Wine Cellar.

Special to The New York Times.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Nov. 28.—Thieves broke into the Summer home of I. Harold Stern, whose New York home is at 255 West Eighty-fourth Street, early this morning and, after gagging and binding the caretaker, got into Mr. Stern's wine cellar. They were piling up quantities of Mr. Stern's liquors and wines when they were frightened away by the gardener, whom the caretaker had summoned by squirming to an electric button connected with the gardener's cottage. They took with them, in their flight, about two cases of wines.

The Stern home is in Prospect Avenue, and has been closed for the Winter. The caretaker told the police that three men had seized him while he was asleep and, after binding him and taking $47 from underneath his pillow, had started to ransack the house.

The Safe Cracker

A Subject for the Consideration of Bankers

A weekly occurrence throughout the country. We quote from the Indianapolis News:

"Robbers last night entered the Lake State Bank at Richland, broke into the safe deposit vault, and escaped with $50,000 in Liberty Bonds and $85 in money.

"The yeggmen used an acetylene torch to burn through the double doors of the vault, where the Liberty Bonds were kept. They overlooked nothing of value. The $85 was in dimes in the safe.

"Practically all the cash deposits were in a big safe which was not molested. Police, in surrounding towns and cities have been notified. It is presumed the bandits traveled in an automobile. Officials of the bank discovered the robbery when they opened for business today.

"S. C. Ferguson, the cashier, said all the bonds were owned by individuals. The bank carried no insurance on the stolen bonds."

"The bank carried no insurance on the stolen bonds." This means that the bank must make the loss good to the depositors. The easiest, simplest, most economical way to make good such a loss is to prepare in advance for such a contingency.

Your Bank can prepare itself in advance—and it can secure such protection at a nominal cost.

F & D Bankers' Blanket Bonds furnish all around protection. They insure the safety of your deposits. They relieve the Bank and its stockholders from personal liability. They are fool-proof. They are "stronger than steel."

In case of loss, an F & D Bankers' Blanket Bond insures the prompt payment of claims without refuge behind technicalities.

FARMERS BACK PLAN FOR GERMAN CREDIT

Organizations to Urge $1,000,000,000 Proposal as Means of Raising Prices Through Exports

CONGRESS HEARINGS SOON

Germany Said to Be Ready to Buy $750,000,000 of American Products in a Year.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Information has been submitted to Congressional leaders interested in legislation seeking an extension of credit to Germany and near by European countries for the purpose of buying the surplus food and raw products of the United States, to the effect that Germany stands ready to buy $750,000,000 worth of American products before the end of 1921 in the event that Congress enacts legislation granting a credit based on alien property seized in the United States.

The American Farm Bureau Federation tonight announced that organized agriculture would strongly advocate such an extension of credit at the convention which the federation will hold at Indianapolis Dec. 6 to 8, when the plans broached for making such a credit possible will be discussed by delegates.

The sponsors for the pending legislation have gathered considerable data from this and other agricultural organizations which are seeking a market for surplus products now selling at low prices in this country.

The proposed credit extension plan will be made the basis of early hearings by the Ways and Means Committee at the coming session. There is pending a bill introduced by Representative Thomas F. Smith of New York last Spring, which seeks to authorize the War Finance Corporation to "pay to any person, firm or corporation or association engaged in business in the United States the contract prices of supplies and food and raw materials hereafter purchased or agreed to be purchased by the German Government from any person, firm, corporation or association and to accept in full payment of the money so advanced the bonds, obligations or other evidence of indebtedness to be issued by Germany for the payment of the moneys so advanced, to bear interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum."

The Smith bill provides that "the said bonds, obligations or undertakings by Germany shall be a first charge on all the assets and revenue of the German Empire and its constituent States, and shall be paid in priority to all other bonds, obligations and undertakings of Germany except such as may be issued for the payment of the costs and expenses of the armies of occupation subsequent to the armistice of Nov. 11, 1918."

It also provides that the German property seized by the United States Government shall be collateral for the payment of money advanced. The bill proposed to appropriate $1,000,000,000 for the use of the war finance corporation for this purpose.

Declares Germany Will Help.

The statement was made tonight that William Wallace Brauer, a New York cattle exporter, who is said to have been active in securing the support of farm organizations for the pending bill, declares that he has a contract with the German Government to supervise the expenditure of the $1,000,000,000 in this country, if the credit is authorized by Congress. It has been intimated that the allied governments are ready to yield priority to the bonds to be given to the United States over other indebtedness as provided under the terms of the Smith bill.

The alien property which has been in the custody of the Alien Property Custodian cannot be disposed of except by act of Congress, which reserved to itself the disposition of that property.

A group of New York bankers who have been discussing the possible use of the seized property as collateral for a credit to Germany recently took up the matter with Attorney General Palmer with a view to ascertaining the possibility of the issuance of an Executive order by the President making the property subject to use in the manner proposed. The Administration took the position that nothing could be done without sanction by Congress.

Plans discussed by the New York bankers are said to include the possible formation of a corporation under the Edge law to handle the financing of German purchases of American products. The suggestion has been made that a number of prominent bankers be made Directors of such a corporation to serve without profit in administering the fund, if made available by Government action.

Secretary of the Treasury Houston has opposed all suggestions for a revival of the War Finance Corporation and is expected to continue his opposition to any such proposal as is involved in the Smith bill. Failing to obtain action at the short session of Congress, the sponsors of the proposed German credit legislation will seek the support of the new Administration.

The revival of the War Finance Corporation is in line with the program endorsed by a number of farm organizations and by Eugene Meyer, Jr., former Managing Director of the War Finance Corporation, who has opposed Secretary Houston's policy with respect to the matter.

Farmers Seek Normal Outlet.

Gray Silver of Washington, representative of the American Farm Bureau Federation, issued tonight this statement relative to the plans of the Federation at its Indianapolis convention to urge legislation for an extension of credit to Germany and other European countries:

"We must open up our usual and natural outlets for cotton, wool, grain and meats if we are to relieve the present disastrous economic situation, which has already cut the farmer's income far below the cost of production and is rapidly reacting to close the shops and factories and throw millions out of employment.

"There is no real surplus crop production in this country today. With the exception of corn, potatoes and apples, the total production of most of the important farm crops is under the five-year average.

"Domestic and European demands have, of course, taken a decided slump recently, but one of our big troubles is that some of our normal outlets are closed. Of the 9,000,000 bales of cotton normally exported before the war 3,000,000 bales went to Germany. Now that the after-the-war boom has subsided, the absence of this pre-war market is making itself keenly felt.

"Wool is another commodity which strikingly illustrates the need for the German market. The large accumulation of coarse wool stocks appears to be a direct result of the inability of the central European countries to buy their former quotas. Fine wools, which never depended upon Germany and Austria for a market, have no considerable surplus, although the present price is ruinously low due to the pressing effect of the large surplus of coarse wools.

"Abundant evidence is accumulating to prove that the opening of foreign markets is the real key to the solution of our present economic ills, and objection to an extension of credit to foreign countries to permit them to buy such of our products as they badly need is becoming less each day. People are beginning to ask whether it might not be better to take a chance on losing a billion or so in Central Europe rather than to go through a period of inaction and non-production in this country while every one is waiting for prices to touch bottom. They ask, 'Aren't we losing several billions in non-production and loss of wages while we are waiting? Will not the reopening of foreign markets stop the downward rush, restore confidence, start needed purchasing in this country and reopen our mills and mines and farms on a reasonable but readjusted basis?'

Protection for American Loans.

"Then, too, we must remember that we already have a stake of some $10,000,000,000 in Europe, and it ought to be good business to protect these loans by advancing the raw materials and food which will help these foreign countries start production and get on their feet again.

"The American Farm Bureau Federation has been urging the passage of the Smith bill which authorizes the Government to extend a billion dollars credit to Germany, taking as part security the half-billion of German funds still remaining in the hands of the Alien Property Custodian and taking in addition a first lien on Germany ahead of reparation claims as provided in the Peace Treaty.

"However, if the plan recently suggested by Henry Morgenthau and prominent New York bankers to make this half-billion dollar alien property fund the basis of a two-billion dollar credit to Germany under an Edge law syndicate can be so arranged as actually to provide for the consumption of our usual surplus of raw products in Germany without undue expense and delay in banking operations involved, I can see no objection to the utilization of the plan.

"No mere banking arrangement to facilitate the transmission of goods will suffice. What must be provided is real money or credit. Not only would the Government be able to make the loan quicker than a banking syndicate but it would be better able to protect its interests abroad than a private enterprise. Moreover, the Government might be justified in taking the risk involved in the transaction which a private concern would hesitate to accept."

TREASURY TO PUSH SALE OF SECURITIES

Secretary Houston Prepares for Campaign to Increase Investment by Public.

ANNOUNCES NEW ISSUES

Government Will Offer $1 Savings Stamp and $25 Savings Certificate in 1921.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Secretary Houston of the Treasury tonight announced his official belief that the market prices of Government bonds, especially long-term Liberty bonds, is bound to improve, and urged the consistent buying of Federal securities by investors.

"With reduced prices for commodities and lower money rates," Mr. Houston said, "the market prices of Government securities like the long-term Liberty bonds are bound to appreciate. Widespread purchases of Liberty bonds for investment will serve the best interests not only of the country as a whole, but also of investors themselves. One of the crowning achievements of the war was the purchase of Liberty bonds and Victory notes by more than 20,000,000 patriotic subscribers. Consistent buying of Liberty bonds by this great army of investors at the present attractive prices would be to the lasting benefit of both themselves and the nation."

Mr. Houston's statement also announced that the two new Treasury savings securities would be issued during the coming year in the shape of $1 Treasury savings stamps and $25 Treasury savings certificates. The $1 stamp will be non-interest bearing, bright red in color, imprinted on a green tint and bear the portrait of Alexander Hamilton, the first Secretary of the Treasury. The $25 certificates will be similar in design and terms to the $100 and $1,000 Treasury savings certificates, which will also be offered in 1921, to mature Jan. 1, 1926.

"The new securities," said Mr. Houston's statement, "will supply a $1 unit for saving and a registered Government security in the $25 denomination, which can be conveniently purchased through accumulation of the $1 Treasury savings stamps. More important still, the new securities will complete a most attractive line of Government savings securities—the $1 stamp and the $25, $100 and $1,000 registered Treasury Savings Certificates—and thus place the Treasury savings movement on a solid peace-time basis. The small denomination war-time securities—the $5 War Savings stamps—in a 1921 series and the 25-cent thrift stamp—will also be offered during the coming year.

Strong Demand for Securities.

"Notwithstanding the reaction since the armistice from habits of saving, and the natural tendency during the past year to invest funds in Liberty bonds and Victory notes at current market prices, the demand for the savings securities has continued strong in many parts of the country. As the security market becomes more settled, Treasury Savings Securities, bearing interest at 4 per cent., compounded quarterly, exempt from State and local taxes and from the normal Federal income tax, and redeemable substantially on demand, should prove increasingly attractive, particularly to the multitude of small investors.

"With these considerations in mind, the Treasury is committed to the continued sale of Government saving securities and feels that as time goes on continuous sales of savings securities over the counter, at Post Offices and banks throughout the country, should play an increasingly important part in the current financing of the Government.

"To this end, the Treasury is also committed to the continuance of the work of the savings divisions, in Washington and in the several Federal Reserve districts. This organization endeavors to promote the popular purchase of Government savings securities; develops and protects the secondary market for Liberty bonds and Victory notes and other war issues of Government securities, and unites the efforts of all helpful agencies and movements, financial, industrial, educational, commercial and social, in a broad savings campaign to make permanent the habits of saving and investment in United States Government securities. Its work along these lines will be intensified in 1921.

"The Treasury savings movement has already demonstrated its usefulness by its efforts to promote sound economic conditions throughout the country and disseminate sound economic doctrine. In fact, the work of the savings division this year, not only in promoting the sale of Government savings securities and in strengthening the secondary market for Liberty bonds but in establishing widespread habits of thrift and saving, has been frequently recognized as meeting a great national need. That recognition has been strikingly emphasized by the requests of great national organizations that the savings work be continued and by their offers of active co-operation in the movement.

"In responding to those demands from great national organizations the Savings Division will intensify during 1921 its campaign to spread broadcast the essential facts relative to wise saving and spending and investment and the continued development of new capital. The savings securities to be offered have also been shaped to meet these demands. The $1 Treasury savings stamp and $25 Treasury savings certificate, for example, come as a result of a work carried on in the great industrial plants of the country. This campaign demonstrated that workers like a $1 unit for saving and that they are seeking an investment security of the $25 denomination.

School Work to Go On.

"For similar reasons the 25-cent Thrift Stamp and the $5 War Savings Stamp, which have obtained a strong foothold in the schools of the nation, will be continued during 1921 in order that every American youth may have the opportunity of becoming an active partner in the great business of his national Government. This should go far to develop wise financial habits and practical patriotism throughout the nation. The 1921 War Savings Stamp of $5 maturity value will be larger in size than the 1920 issue, will be orange in color, and will bear the portrait of Lincoln. The 25-cent Thrift Stamps will be unchanged.

"The American Federation of Labor at its last annual convention expressed itself as heartily in favor, not only of the Government savings movement but also of Government savings securities. It has strongly urged that the Treasury continue to issue these securities in order to provide safe investments for the savings of wage earners.

"Nearly every fraternal organization of prominence in the United States has endorsed the savings movement and many have placed their funds in Government securities. Individual lodges have announced similar action.

"Presidents of women's organizations have emphasized the need of the continuation of the savings work among their membership in 1921. Beginning Jan. 1, 1921, the activities of the savings movement among women's organizations will be centralized in the offices of the Savings Division in Washington with more active direction of the savings program delegated to the National and State officials of the organizations.

"The work of the Savings Division has been splendidly successful in the schools, with the children, and as well with the leaders of educational thought in America. As a result, the committee of State Superintendents of Public Instruction, which has just met in Washington, has decided to urge every State Superintendent and Commissioner of Education to install thrift courses in every school and at the same time provide for the practice of the principles taught by offering means for sound investment. The committee declared: 'We believe that instruction in economic principles and practice in thrift are vitally needed in the schools, and we urge the prompt adoption of the new thrift education in all State and local educational systems of the United States.'

"The Savings Division will also continue to devote its best efforts during the coming year to developing the secondary market for Liberty bonds and Victory notes. At current market prices Liberty bonds offer a unique opportunity to investors, large and small, and are being widely absorbed for investment. Many employers, banks and other agencies throughout the United States are re-establishing partial payment plans in order to provide facilities for instalment purchases at prevailing prices. At the same time great numbers of the bonds are being purchased outright by small investors as savings become available."

MILK BOARD AGREES TO REDUCE PRICES

Accepts Dairymen's League's Offer of $3.18 a Hundred Pounds for December.

FARMERS' POOL FLOURISHES

25,000 Have Signed to Participate in Plan to Make Them Independent.

Announcement was made yesterday by the Dairymen's League, Inc., 303 Fifth Avenue, that the conference committee of the New York Milk Conference Board, representing the distributers, had decided to recommend the acceptance of the league's offer to sell during December milk testing 3 per cent. butterfat at $3.18 a hundred pounds at the 200 mile freight zone. The producers made a voluntary reduction of 1 cent a quart from the prices prevailing in November, October and September. They will receive $.0727 a quart for average milk testing 3.6 per cent. butterfat.

The league price for December had already been accepted by Borden's Farm Products Company, which announced that the consumers would receive the full benefit of the 1 cent reduction, making the price for Grade B in December 17 cents a quart and Grade A 20 cents a quart. Sheffield Farms Company, the other large distributing firm in the New York Milk Conference Board, has not yet made any announcement as to the December prices to the consumer.

The dairy farmers in this territory see in the action of the manufacturers of condensed, evaporated and powdered milk in refusing to continue to buy milk through the league until the surplus stocks of manufactured products have been disposed of, a movement that has for its object the disruption of the Dairymen's League, Inc., according to the league officials. The manufacturers, it is asserted, are announcing their willingness to buy milk at league prices from individual farmers, but not through the league.

It is asserted that the refusal of the manufacturers to buy milk at any price through the league has deprived farmers of a market for about one-fourth of the total supply in league territory. "This shutting off of long established markets," continues the statement, "has caused great losses to thousands of farmers, many of whom have been driven out of business.

"The attack which is being made by the manufacturers and distributers on the Dairymen's League is materially aiding the farmers' organization in putting over its proposed pooling plan. The plan will not be put into operation until 50,000 league members shall have signed the contract to deliver their milk to the co-operative association. Over 25,000 have signed during the last month.

"League officers assert that as soon as the pooling plan gets under way farmers will be assured a permanent market for their milk, and manufacturers never again will be able to shut off the producers' market because they have more high-priced supplies on hand than they can sell without a loss."

WHALEN DEFENDS DUMPING OF ASHES

Reply to Untermyer Says Lawyer's Statements Are at Variance With Facts.

GIVES OFFICIAL FIGURES

Records Show, He Declares, That Other Concerns Had Greater Privileges Than Holland & Co.

Grover Whalen, Commissioner of Plant and Structures, made public yesterday his reply to Samuel Untermyer's suggestion that the city should institute suit for $400,000 against Holland & Co., a contracting firm in which Mr. Whalen formerly had a half interest, because the latter concern had dumped ashes on the Court House site. Mr. Untermyer's suggestion and Mr. Whalen's reply were contained in letters written to Joseph Haag, secretary to the Board of Estimate.

With his letter to Mr. Haag, Commissioner Whalen enclosed ten exhibits, consisting of official records. He said he called Mr. Haag's attention to the documents because many of the statements made by Mr. Untermyer were "at variance with the easy ascertainable facts and records."

Mr. Whalen said that when he was called as a witness last Tuesday before the Lockwood Committee he did not know he would be questioned on matters in which he was not concerned and so he had no opportunity of collecting the facts from the various city departments.

Mr. Untermyer "saw fit to create the impression by his questions and insinuations" that he, Whalen, was responsible for the action taken by the city in filling in the Court House site with ashes and that Holland & Co., was the only firm which dumped ashes into the site, said Mr. Whalen. An examination of the records, he declared, reveals that there was no justification for the charges or insinuations made by Mr. Untermyer.

Of the sixty-one concerns which were permitted to dump ashes in the Court House site, seven dumped more ashes than Holland & Co., and one of the seven dumped almost twelve times as much, he said.

The record shows that Holland & Co., dumped 207½ cubic yards. The greatest amount was dumped by the Empire Carting Company, with 2,459½ yards.

"A combination of conditions unprecedented in the city's history due to frigid weather, an ice bound river and harbor, a shortage of tugs due to the commandeering of steam craft for war purposes, and a shortage of labor, caused the suggestion that the Court House site be used for the dumping of ashes," Commissioner Whalen continued. "The records disclose that this suggestion emanated from the firm of Dailey & Ivins, a concern which had a contract with the city for the final disposal of ashes and rubbish."

An affidavit of John J. Kiernan, Superintendent of the Street Cleaning Department in charge of the Court House operation, was produced by Mr. Whalen. It was dated Nov. 26, 1920. Kiernan swore that ashes were dumped into the site from Jan. 4 or 5, 1918, to the second week of February, and not for several months, as charged by Mr. Untermyer. The affidavit was corroborated by an order of General Superintendent A. A. Taylor, dated Feb. 6, 1918. The order, said Mr. Whalen, referred to the fact that the fill was nearly complete at that time, and instructed Mr. Kiernan to take immediate action to have no more than a layer of one foot of ashes spread evenly over the entire fill.

Continuing his letter, Mr. Whalen said:

"A false impression was sought to be created by the counsel for the Lockwood Committee that the Court House site had been excavated to the point where it was only necessary to install the foundations prior to the erection of the building. The actual facts are that no excavation was made at any time prior to the dumping of ashes; the old buildings formerly o nthe site were razed or demolished to the point where only the cellars remained, and the cellar walls of these old buildings were still standing at the time the ashes were dumped there.

"The foregoing statements are sufficiently corroborated by public records so as to prove beyond all question that Holland & Co. was not responsible for the filling in of the Court House site with ashes, or that Holland & Co. or any concern was responsible for foisting upon the city an obligation amounting to $400,000.

"Since testifying as a witness I have conferred with Edward Holland, who was associated with me in the firm of Holland & Co. prior to the time I severed my oonnection with it. He calls my attention to the fact that the time when our relations were severed by oral agreement was about the middle of October, 1917, and that the agreement was made at my office, 50 East Forty-second Street, New York City. He also advises me since my testimony was given that a certificate dated Dec. 31, 1917, was executed and filed by him in the County Clerk's office and published in The New York Law Journal certifying that he was continuing the business of Holland & Co. solely in his name. This certificate was duly acknowledged before Charles J. Vannie, a notary public, on the 7th day of August, 1918.

"I was in no way interested directly or indirectly in the firm of Holland & Co. after I severed my connection with it in October, 1917. That concern went out of business in July, 1920, upon the termination of its contract with the New York Railways Company, which covered a period of five years beginning July, 1915."

FIRE resisting, reinforced concrete houses and walls for low buildings of factory type, can now be erected at a first cost much lower than brick or monolithic concrete.

The CONCRETE FRAME and STUCCO SYSTEM eliminates expensive wood forms.

The new one-story warehouse covering 4½ acres, for the Victor Talking Machine Co., in Camden, has been erected by this new method of construction.

This system while under my exclusive control, covered by U. S. and Foreign Patents, can be employed by anyone at slight expense.

It is especially suitable for industrial housing projects.

A conference in regard to its use on your proposed buildings, may result in a cost saving of material and labor.

THESE garments are not available in every styles—but they are in every size—all the way from 34 to 40. If we had them in every style we would still be citing them at their former figures—we can assure you of that. For these figures represent all that is left of previous price parings—the solid core—in other words—of the actual cost of the garments themselves. These suits and coats are what you might rightfully call the "tail ends" of certain lines—lines which take up space that could be more profitably used for the showing of more complete varieties, and we want to get rid of them. The sooner the better. And the reductions we have here attached, we think, will not fail to make every one step along lively.

Increase 90%

How can property owners pay taxes, due to-morrow, when many millions of their rents are deposited with the Municipal Courts, and may remain there several months?

REAL ESTATE Ownership is a business. It is entitled to a fair return upon the investment.

This fair return depends upon the surplus of revenue above operating cost. During the last few years the cost of operating apartment buildings has increased tremendously.

Take Taxes, for example: the six typical cases cited herewith show an increase of 90%. Both the tax rate and assessment valuations are being increased continually.

Obviously, rentals had to be increased materially, and must be maintained now to meet increased cost.

We submit these facts for the serious consideration of the public. In subsequent articles we shall present other incontrovertible facts explaining increased cost.

THIEVES' RUSE GETS DOCTORS' CLOTHING

Complete Outfits Obtained at Physicians' Homes on Telephone Notice of Accidents.

SPECIAL MESSENGERS USED

Instances Reported in Which Plot Failed—Trap Set to Catch the Culprits.

A new method of thievery, in which the victims are prominent physicians, has just come to light. The plan is to represent to the household of the physician that he is in a predicament which requires that a complete outfit of clothing be sent to him by a special messenger, who will call for it.

Just how this works out was explained yesterday by Dr. De Witt Stetten of 115 West Eighty-seventh Street, who ruefully admitted that he was minus a new suit and overcoat, "worth a lot of money these days," as a result of the activities of these thieves.

"It hapepned one night last week," he said. "The telephone rang, and a man giving the name of Dr. George asked the nurse who answered, in the absence of the family, if I were home. She told him that possibly I might be reached at the Academy of Medicine. A half hour later the telephone rang again, and this time a man said that I had met with an accident and needed a suit, overcoat, collar and tie. He told her a messenger was on the way for the articles.

"About fifteen minutes later a taxicab drove up, and the chauffeur rang the bell. He said he had been sent for the clothing and the nurse gave it to him."

An unsuccessful attempt was made to victimize Dr. S. Thorek of 1,021 Madison Avenue, and Dr. Einhorn of 2 East Sixty-third Street in the same way. Dr. Einhorn was represented as being in need of a change of clothing at the Metropolitan Opera House. Dr. Einhorn's quick-witted butler, who suspected that some sort of a plot was being attempted, told the "friend" to bring Dr. Einhorn home in the latter's automobile. Dr. Thorek's daughter talked with the conspirator over the telephone but became suspicious and hung up.

Attempts to steal the clothing of physicians in the Lenox Hill section by the same methods have resulted in plans being made to trap the thieves, should they be daring enough to continue their operations.

Detective Porter Holdt and Anderson of the West Twentieth Street Station yesterday prevented an attempt made by two men to carry away four bundles containing furs worth $5,000 which had been removed from the loft of Lowell, Lamb & Co., 163 West Twenty-fifth Street. The two gave their names as Pincus Weinstein, 20 years old, of 441 East Eighty-first Street, and Moe Sidwets, 19, of 84 Ridge Street. Weinstein and Sidwets were held in $10,000 bail each for examination today.

Herbert Reillier, 30 years old, of 61 West 108th Street, was sentenced yesterday to thirty days in the workhouse by Magistrate Schwab in the Jefferson Market Court on a plea of guilty to a charge of disorderly conduct. That he was not held on a more serious charge was due to the fact that Miss Rhoda Speeden, 22 years old, had to return at once to her home in Baltimore. According to the testimony of the girl, Reillier snatched her handbag, containing $65, early Saturday morning as she was passing Fifth Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street. Patrolman Thomas Duane heard her cries and arrested Reillier.

New England Company Will Not Change Schedule for Present.

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—Wages of the employes of the New England Telephone Company will not be reduced at the present time, according to the report today of a committee representing the workers which had been in conference with company officials.

At the conference, held at the invitation of the company, the committee said it learned that, although wages would not be reduced under present industrial conditions, the unsettled situation made the time inopportune for any change in the existing wage schedule.

A Collection of XVII and XVIII Century Italian Furniture in Walnut---Au Quatrieme

The Italian steamers that arrived last week brought in their holds an interesting collection of old walnut furniture for Au Quatrieme. This has been arranged and will be on exhibition today.

There is a XVII Century Sala di Pranzo or dining room, the key notes being a fine XVII Century Tuscan refectory table in walnut and two buffets, one of which is shown in the illustration.

Very interesting, also, is a set of four flower pictures, charming in color. They have what is rare in most flower pictures—a great deal of blue.

The collection of twelve old Venetian prints mounted on wood and varnished, framed in old Venetian blue and gold frames, is the nucleus for a charming Italian breakfast room or boudoir.

The Stucco Rooms, Au Quatrieme, are also filled with other delightful antiques from Italy. Among them is a painted Venetian secretary with the decorations done in masks after Longhi pictures. There is a fine little Louis XV walnut secretary and a small Louis XVI writing desk for a lady which are as fine in quality as if they were French. One of the interesting things is a man's large writing table desk in tulip wood and walnut. It has two writing slides, which draw out.

There are sets of dining room chairs, long walnut benches, commodes and four pairs of Tuscan consoles which, put together, make round and oval tables.

Sale of 10,500 Operatic Records Continues

Because of the very large crowds who came Saturday, it was physically impossible for many to make selections, as much as we tried to serve everybody. Some of the visitors asked whether the sale would continue today and we told them that it would, and they said they would come back again when it would be more convenient to try out the records and get the ones they wanted. There are duplicates of nearly all of the well-known artists represented, and there will be plenty of records here today and tomorrow, unless we are overwhelmed again as we were Saturday.

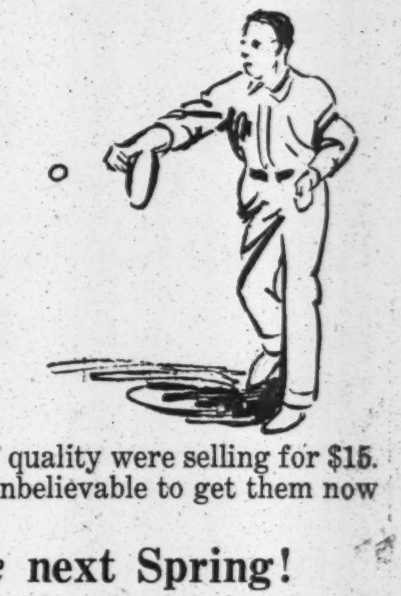
White Sports Trousers of English Flannel

—genuine English flannel in a great sale, beginning today, of 4,000 pairs fresh from the tailors, at .... $7.35 and $8.75

Less than Pre-War Prices

—today trousers of the cheapest American flannels are selling at $12 a pair and of other American flannels for more than double these prices.



Yes, before the war, as most men remember, white flannel trousers of quality were selling for $15. During the war they went up to $22. Today they are still up. It is almost unbelievable to get them now at so little as $7.35 and $8.75.

Flannel trousers will cost as much wholesale next Spring!

The flannel in these trousers was made in England, where we purchased it; it is soap shrunk, which means it can be dry-cleaned without the finish coming off, and it is of a firm, solid quality that makes the grade top-notch.

The trousers, themselves, were made by the largest trousers manufacturer in America—cut one pair at a time, sewed with silk, and lined, trimmed and made in keeping with the quality of the flannel. Pockets are hand-turned and stayed as a custom tailor would make them; the inside of the pockets is double faced so the ends won't ravel. When finished the trousers were hand-shrunk and hand-pressed into the form of the body.

Buy for present or future needs —for indoor sports now, for Winter travel in the Southland, for wear next Summer; yes, buy ahead in half dozen pair lots—we do not believe an opportunity such as this will be repeated.

GOMPERS WARNS UNIONS OF DANGER

Declares Hostility to Labor Has Been Encouraged by Election Result.

FEARS WAR FOR OPEN SHOP

Attacks Employers' Groups Like That of Which He Says Harding Is a Member.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, in a leading article in the American Federationist entitled "Reaction in the Saddle," reviews the election results and points to movements to break down collective bargaining and force an open shop.

The article renews the assertion that organized labor won a victory in the November election in that fifty members hostile to labor were defeated and fifteen members holding union labor cards will appear in the Sixty-seventh Congress.

Mr. Gompers sees a return of reactionary influences and hostility toward organized labor and declares that several movements and organizations have already shown evidence of a desire to break down principles held dear by labor. Of these, he says:

"The movement begun some months ago by associations of employers, similar to that of which President-elect Harding is a member in Marion, Ohio, to destroy collective bargaining and to break down trade unions, has found great encouragement in the election results in general. Whether there is real justification for the view that this optimism in reactionary circles is to be given official encouragement remains to be seen, but fears may be expressed properly."

Says Labor Standards Face Attack.

After quoting an article in The Wall Street Journal, in which it is held that organized labor, which supported Cox, was repudiated in the election, and other writers who predict that some of the class legislation will be repealed, Mr. Gompers, says:

"These are but a few citations from a collection of indications of what it may be assumed is the plan and the scheme of reaction. Much may be read between the lines by those who give study to the plunging and swaying of the great markets—much about manipulation and rigging by those who find always something to gain out of the discomfort and losses of their victims.

"There is evidence enough of the intention of the hostile and the unfair and the unthinking to destroy the standards that have been built up by American labor, to break down the system of conference and agreement that has given American industry a higher standard and a better organization than exists in any other country. There is every indication of a wanton and shocking blindness on the part of those employers who are typified by Judge Gary and in their organized capacity by the United States Chamber of Commerce, the National Industrial Conference Board, the National Association of Manufacturers, the National Erectors' Association and kindred associations that go to make up the group of bitterly individualist employers.

"It was because organized labor was fully aware of the reactionary, autocratic and tyrannical policies of the hostile forces of the United States that it took so active a part in the political campaign and election. Recognition of the condition which existed and of the policies laid for the future—policies rooted in reaction and avarice—made it necessary to make the best and most effective protest possible.

"However, it is one thing to plan, another to execute. The dream of a great oligarchy of employers long has been in the minds of those who now speak exultingly. They have long hoped for a day in which the workers would be helpless and without organization of their own. Despite this hope the workers have constantly increased their strength, constantly enlarged their organizations, constantly advanced the concept of democracy in industry.

"This is not the hour for turning backward. This is not the hour for autocratic triumph. This is not the hour for destruction of progress.

"If great employers, bereft of their better judgment by the sweep of reactionary political victory, estimate this to be the hour for a similar assault upon the democracy already achieved in industry, they are gravely mistaken. This is not the hour—nor will that hour ever come.

"Labor in America threw its full strength without reserve into the great war for the overthrow of autocracy. It gave a pledge and it kept the pledge. But labor in America has given another pledge, a pledge of humanity to strive with its full strength for a better life for all, for a more democratic industrial world for all, for constant progress, constant progressive achievement.

"It is almost beyond understanding, almost too weird for comprehension, that there should be any who would wish to turn backward the tide of progress, but if there must be a development of the effort that seems to be in prospect to that end, then labor in America will be bound by its sacred pledge to humanity and by the very nature of its being to resist that effort at all costs and with full strength."

Socialist Showing Decried.

Discussing the so-called radical vote, Mr. Gompers says:

"The Socialist Party, whose leaders have always preached and practiced treachery to the labor movement, finds itself in a particularly embarrassing position at this time. While the complete Socialist vote still is unknown, it seems certain that no increase in the percentage of Socialist votes has been shown over 1912, the banner Socialist year. For an organization that persistently charges the labor movement with political unwisdom and failure, this is a peculiarly humiliating result. It is quite evident that large numbers of pro-German voters preferred to put their strength where there was a greater chance of winning something tangible.

"The Farmer-Labor Party experiment, which was neither farmer nor labor, but merely a combination of foolishness and presumption, also failed to arrive. The little coterie of "intellectuals" who furnished the inspiration for the movement and who sang its simple songs during the campaign, continue to sing post-defeat ditties about just beginning to fight and about what they will do next time, just as the Socialists have been doing for years and years until they have the habit firmly fixed.

"Perhaps 3,000,000 votes went into one or another of the minority movements. There is practically nothing to show for this effort, a situation foreseen by all except those who never see another thing."

AN ENGLISH WIFE IN BERLIN

The Boston Transcript says: "It is so far the most revealing and absorbing personal record. These pages are filled with personal touches that flash with a vivid and realistic impression of the experience."

Critic after critic credits the book with "extraordinary interest."

"To begin is to be lured on and on in growing excitement and sympathy to the very last page . . . one sees the war from an angle entirely new. . . . In solid contribution to the history of the war, the book is scarcely less important than it is interesting. . . . If originality, poise, dramatic interest, a compelling style and historical importance were the components of a "best-seller" it would be discussed this winter in every drawing room. It is certainly one of the most fascinating books of the year."

$2,000,000 HELD IN RESERVE

Two Universities Will Get $25,000 Each in 1920-21 From Its Interest.

A preliminary apportionment of the $5,000,000 fund set aside by the Rockefeller Foundation at Mr. Rockefeller's request for the aid of medical education in Canada was announced yesterday by George E. Vincent, Vice President of the foundation. The apportionment is based on eight months' investigation, which included visits to the principal medical centres of the Dominion.

"The appropriations now made are of two classes," said Mr. Vincent. "These are first, contributions toward increasing the permanent resources in buildings and endowment of schools already well established, and, second, contributions to annual income of institutions which are undergoing reorganization."

These are the allotments to established schools:

McGill University, Montreal	$1,000,000
University of Toronto	1,000,000
Dalhousie University, Halifax	500,000
University of Manitoba, Winnepeg	500,000

The remaining $2,000,000 is reserved for future distribution and schools in process of reorganization are to receive aid from the income from the reserve. These allotments have been made:

Universite de Montreal, for the year 1920-1921	$25,000
University of Alberta, Edmonton, for 1920-1921	25,000

Applications from these schools for further aid will be considered.

"Initiation of plans in aid of Canadian medical schools now being carried out," said the announcement, "was due to John D. Rockefeller, who, in connection with the gifts of $50,000,000 to the foundation on Dec. 24, 1919, and of $20,000,000 to the General Education Board, said:

"'My attention has been called to the needs of some of the medical schools in Canada, but as the activities of the General Education Board are by its charter limited to the United States, I understand that my gift may not be used for Canadian schools. The Canadian people are our near neighbors. They are closely bound to us by ties of race, language and international friendship, and they have without stint sacrificed themselves, their youth and their resources to the end that democracy might be saved and extended. For those reasons, if your board should see fit to use any part of this new gift in promoting medical education in Canada, such action would meet with my cordial approval.'"

In explanation of the purposes of the reserve fund, Mr. Vincent said: "Of the $5,000,000 Canadian fund, there has been reserved for future distribution $2,000,000, the income from which is to be used for gifts to current expenses, fellowships and other forms of aid to medical education."

In each case, according to the announcement, the apportionments now announced represent contributions to plans of development, worked out by the institutions concerned, and which involve substantial sums from other sources.

BARONET'S WIFE TO ACT.

Lady Maxwell-Willshire to Make Debut at $40 a Week.

There is in New York the wife of an English Baronet who is looking forward with excitement and no little anxiety to her first appearance on the stage tonight. She is Lady Maxwell-Willshire, who arrived here on Sept. 1, and she will make her theatrical début at the Central in a part that carries with it a salary of $40 a week.

Lady Willshire's husband is Sir Gerard Maxwell-Willshire, the third holder of the title, which was created in 1840, and he is at present going through the bankruptcy court in England. His wife, who was Miss Lilian Birtles, married him in 1912, and the war was responsible for the financial difficulties of the couple.

This unusual recruit to the stage is "under 40," of medium height and has red hair. "I could have lived at home with my parents," she said yesterday, "but I thought that I might try out on my own hook, and as I am fond of acting I decided to go on the stage. I am determined not to go back to England and I want to make America my home."

Joseph A. Boyle, sacristan of St. Patrick's Cathedral, has received word from Ireland that $100,000 is waiting for him in Cork, it having been willed to him by Dennis Cassidy, who died six months ago. Mr. Cassidy was an uncle of Mr. Boyle.

COAL CAN BE SAVED

"We've got to cut down our coal bill this winter!"

You've said it often, but how to do it is a problem. Yet coal can be saved, and without sacrificing comfort either.

Get the most out of your heating plant. Make every pound of coal deliver its full measure of heat at the time when heat is needed, and with this saving have real comfort with

The "MINNEAPOLIS" HEAT REGULATOR
"THE HEART OF THE HEATING PLANT"

This little device does a big work. It maintains an even temperature in the house by controlling the drafts of the furnace. It works automatically, operated by a thermostat placed on the wall of your living-room.

There's no chance for the furnace to go on a "rampage". No heat is wasted. No more coal is burned than is necessary for comfort. This means a positive saving in your fuel bill.

The "Minneapolis" has been used successfully for 35 years on every type of heating plant burning coal, gas or oil—lasts a lifetime.

THE STEINWAY DUO-ART
REPRODUCING PIANO

Price Guarantee

THE prices of the Duo-Art Pianos are guaranteed until July 1, 1921. Should they be reduced by us before that date, we will refund the full amount of such reduction.

THE Steinway Duo-Art Reproducing Piano reflects the skill, experience and resources of the two leading houses of the music industry. It is a pianoforte of highest standing, and a Duo-Art Pianola—the supreme achievement of The Aeolian Company.

As a piano for hand-playing, it is the superb product of Messrs. Steinway & Sons. Further comment as to the artistic quality of the instrument as a piano would be superfluous.

It is, in addition, a Pianola of the most advanced type with all the advantages for artistic self-playing and interpretation that this is recognized as implying.

This instrument's latest and most impressive function, however, is its ability to reproduce the actual performances of pianists with absolute and startling fidelity.

The greatest pianists of the world are collaborating with The Aeolian Company in developing this extraordinary feature. Paderewski, Hofmann, Busoni, Grainger, Novaes, Ganz, Gabrilowitsch, Alfred Cortot, the great French pianist, Cyril Scott, the noted English composer-pianist, are among the host of masters of the keyboard who record their art exclusively for the Duo-Art.

Dance music, popular piano pieces and accompaniments are also recorded by specialists in these lines for the Duo-Art music libraries.

To possess a Duo-Art Pianola Piano is to enjoy the privilege of listening at will to the most brilliant piano playing of the present age.

You are sincerely invited to hear the Steinway or other models of the Duo-Art at any time. It is our pleasure to demonstrate the marvels of this great instrument to every lover of music.

The Duo-Art is also presented in the Steck, the Wheelock, the Stroud and famous Weber Duo-Art Pianos—Grands and Uprights

STARVATION GROWS IN NORTHERN CHINA

Millions in Many Provinces Will Be Unable to Survive Winter.

BABIES SOLD IN TIEN TSIN

Americans and Europeans Who Are Leading Relief Work Get Little Help From Peking.

Copyright, 1920, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

MANILA, Nov. 28.—Do not imagine that Chi-li is the only starving province in the famine-stricken zone of North China. Chi-li has received the most attention because it is the most populous and the most accessible of the famine districts.

Take Shansi, for example, which lies west of the Peking-Hankow Railway. The Rev. James Watson, an English Baptist missionary, writes that there has been no rain for seven months there.

In seventeen counties, having 3,300,000 population, 2,700,000 are in dire distress, and of these only an infinitely small fraction can be saved. They are subsisting on roots, leaves, elm tree seeds and the like. Now the frosts have shriveled and cast off the last leaf and and no sustenance remains.

In Ping-Tyng-Hien, for example, 15,300 men, women and children actually are starving today, while 70,000 cannot outlast the Winter. The Church of the Brethren can take care of only 2,000, and it is the sole mission there.

The greatest distress is found in the counties around Wei Hwei Fu. Many families have sold their stock, roofs, doors, windows and furniture and have migrated with the proceeds. Thousands of boys have been taken to Hankow and Shanghai to work in the factories. Elm and willow trees have been stripped for food. Suicides of whole families, murders and desertion are reported from Honan, as they are in Chi Hil. Hollow cheeked, emaciated bodies scratch at the barren earth in hope of food or fuel.

In the nine affected Honan counties the population of the six most badly off is 900,000. Of these 241,000 are reported absolutely destitute and hopeless, having no land. Another 809,000 have thirty acres or less and are regarded as having little better than a chance at survival.

Carefully checked reports for the twenty stricken counties in the Pao Tine Ful sections of Chi Hil show approximately 3,000,000 persons to be virtually without grain, and a vast proportion of these will be unable to survive the Winter. The Union Christian Famine Relief Society, comprised of eight separate organizations, including Chinese, American and French, and the Y. M. C. A. raised $17,000 and is actively aiding 20,000 farmer with wheat seed for next year's crops. The funds come from the American Red Cross and the Liang Shi Yi at Peking.

The Magistrate of Chi Hil County received $10,000 from the Peking Government for famine relief, and has already spent $1,000, with nothing done. He now seeks to buy coppers to cart through the country, distributing them pro rata. As there are 150 coppers to each dollar and the county population is 305,500, it is easy to figure out what each person would receive if as much as $8,000 was distributed.

J. E. Baker, Superintendent of the Red Cross, is now in Techow inspecting the organization for relief work in Shantung. The United States Army transport Merritt is due in less than ten days at Darien, to take on a food supply for the Red Cross. Grain will be brought to Tien-tsin from Tacua, and thence by railway to Techow under a United States military escort, where distribution will begin in return for road building. The Standard Oil Company gave $25,000 to the Red Cross for this purpose.

In the meantime the refugee colonies in Tien Tsin and elsewhere grow amazingly. In Tientsin twenty babies were born on a single day. Already babies are being hawked for sale openly on the Tientsin streets. Girl babies fetch $10 and upward, while boys fetch $2 or less. A dreadful sermon is revealed in these figures, for usually girl babies are despised in China.

When asked the best means of American aid, Dr. Douglas Gray of the British Legation, who is the active head of the Peking International Commission, suggested that it take the form, proportionately, of 10,000 pounds of sorghum, 10,000 pounds of millet, 10,000 pounds of No. 5 flour containing bran, 10,000 pounds of soya bean or peanut residue and 200 pounds of salt. This would enable a balanced ration.

Virtually no help is expected from the Chinese Government, owing to political manoeuvring. All official China is busy holding jobs or trying to get more power. Instances of injustice and lack of sympathy for the starving people are uncovered daily. On lower Hsi en Hsien a railway has been surveyed which, if speedily built, would go a long way toward making relief possible in the worst famine stricken area. The Peking Government made a great show of beginning the work, thus giving employment to many starving people. Imagine their amazement to find the contractors bringing in by droves laborers from Tientsin, Tsan Chow Yensa and elsewhere to add to the food demands of the stricken district The magistrate at Wagh Sun Ti already is in hot water with the Peking Government and probable will lose his fat office for trying to insist that half the labor in his county be locally recruited. Thousands will die in sight of the building og the railway.

American and European onlookers restrain their feelings with much difficulty at seeing millions wilfully doomed to die while opulent, scheming mandarins add more concubines and buy new palaces while they connive with oily tongues at getting their greedy hands on the dollars offered by sympathetic Americans for the starving people.

The waste of money in utter indifference to the dying is seen on every street. Only last Sunday a funeral passed the door of your correspondent's hotel in Tientsin. It was that of General Li Shun, who willed $500,000 to the famine suffers through the Chi Hil Commission, which deems $280,000 sufficient, and so far has done nothing toward accounting for the balance.

The pageant was a mile long and more than 1,000 hired paraders in gorgeous costumes carried paper horses and dozens of great paper palaces, signifying the great wealth of the deceased, with sheaves of imitation gold and silver money.

The catafalque, containing the body in a huge coffin, was borne on the shoulders of 100 men dressed in scarlet and gold. In the rear were six carriages containing the self-assumed beneficiaries of the famine bequest. But between them and the catafalque were fifty hired wailers, who cared not for whom they mourned so long as they were paid.

And at the very same corner that same morning was found the corpse of a refugee who died of starvation in the night.

WANT ODD AUTO LICENSES.

Historian Asks for 1776 on His—Others Would Match House Number.

Curious and various were the requests made of the office of William R. Dill, Motor Vehicle Commissioner, of New Jersey, by motorists with fanciful ideas as to license numbers they would like to have for their cars in 1921. Mr. Dill said yesterday that he had about $20,000 in license fees which he would have to return to applicants for new numbers because his department could not possibly accede to the suggestions.

One man wrote in detail how gratifying it would be to have an automobile number that corresponded with the license number of his pet dog. Mr. Dill was deeply touched, but he had to send back the man's money.

Here are some of the other requests made by automobile owners:

A historian wanted the number 1776 for sentiment which he cherishes about his ancestors of Revolutionary days.

Several college graduates wanted numbers to correspond with their year of graduation.

A host of people wanted numbers to correspond with their telephone or house numbers.

Several firms wanted numbers which represented an arithmetical progression.

The new numbers for Jerseyites will be ready on Wednesday. They will be painted Kelly green with white numerals.

PICKED MEN FOR TROLLEYS.

Commissioner Whalen Selects Safe Motormen for Staten Island.

Only experienced motormen without accident records were selected for the operation of the Staten Island Municipal Trolley Line at an oral examination held in the offices at Concord yesterday by Commissioner Grover A. Whalen and Deputy Commissioner William Wirt Wills of the Department of Plant and Structures. Out of a list of 100 applicants, Commissioner Whalen made 75 appointments of operators for the new one-man safety cars which are to be put into operation Dec. 1.

A request of the citizens of Staten Island that they be permitted to decorate with flowers the first car to be run on Wednesday, and which will be operated by Mayor Hylan, was granted. Trolley service has been suspended since Jan. 1. It has been found necessary to set a gang to work pruning away trees which have overgrown the old Midland Railway lines since the suspension.

Salvation Army Again to the Fore!

AFTER the conflict, during which the Salvation Army lassies, through their cheeriness and doughnuts, became the idols of our fighting boys, and the Salvation Army men earned our admiration by their earnest and unassuming endeavors, there has come a lull in the field of activities.

This lull is intensified by the apparent effectiveness of the Eighteenth Amendment, which has robbed the psychopathic wards and the park benches of so many tenants.

Looking for New York.

A short time ago the Salvation Army was looking to broaden its field of usefulness and discover new directions in which to carry on its splendid work. At this opportune moment Raymond C. Schindler, Vice-Chairman of the Boys' Work Committee of the New York Rotary Club, conferred with Colonel W. A. McIntyre of the Salvation Army and outlined to him a wonderful service which could be rendered in the great work of Americanization by lending the Salvation Army's valuable aid in the campaign started for the uplift of the under-privileged boy and his training toward better citizenship.

Engineers of the Work.

Many conferences were held by members of the Boys' Work Committee and attended by C. J. Atkinson, Chairman; Raymond Schindler, Arthur Woodward and Alexander Campbell, who have worked conscientiously with Colonel McIntyre, with the result that Rome, N. Y., has become the first city in the country to open a Boys' Club under the auspices of the Salvation Army, Captain J. T. Seddon in charge.

The half century's experience which the Salvation Army has had in changing the characters of irresponsible peoples, so that they became worthy members of society, will prove a splendid foundation upon which to build the business of molding the character of wayward youth till it becomes a model of patriotism and loyalty.

Lend Your Enthusiasm.

Rotary asks all patriotic citizens to give three cheers and a tiger for the Salvation Army in its great work—and, if it lies within their power to help a bit, to do that, too!

THE germ of inspiration is the leaven of all business triumphs. A man cannot be time-clocked on inspiration. It comes to him at out-of-the-way moments.

Higher freight rates offset by new-found economies

How certain manufacturers are counteracting the effects of increased charges

A 40% advance in freight rates! Yet it has been accepted by the majority of manufacturers as necessary in justice to the railroads.

Nevertheless, the higher rates have created a most serious problem for every shipper in America. A decreasing margin of profit makes it impossible for manufacturers to bear any additional burdens themselves. A declining market makes it equally impossible to counteract the rate increase by advancing prices.

The solution of the problem is to be found only in new economies—in reduced costs of operation, in equipment that will simplify production, and in more economical packing and shipping methods.

Official Government test indicates solution of many shipping problems

In an overseas shipment of 983 cases of canned tomatoes to the Army of Occupation on the Rhine, the U. S. Government made an official test of standard fibre and corrugated-containers. In comparing this shipment with shipments made in wooden containers, the subsequent report of the expert in charge showed a reduction of 10 to 15% in the number of cases set aside because of damaged condition; a reduction of 10% in the weight of shipments; and a saving of 17% in shiproom and storage.

Scores of progressive manufacturers are profiting from just such savings by modernizing their packing and shipping methods in co-operation with the Robert Gair Company.

In such factories the costly shipping-room—a veritable carpenter shop with its expensive personnel—is replaced by a single clerk, who seals all shipments automatically. Conspicuous savings in time, wages and storage space are thus secured.

Lower transportation charges are assured on every shipment because of the difference in weight between fibre and wood. Additional cuts in freight costs can often be secured by rearranging the units within the case.

Quicker and more careful handling is the rule — both at the factory and in transit — for fibre cases, unlike wooden cases, have no splinters or sharp edges to invite rough treatment.

We can decide without prejudice whether goods should be carried in corrugated or solid fibre cases —for we manufacture both. Experts study each individual problem, and design cases which in weight, strength, and dimensions exactly fill the shipper's needs.

With our fifty-five years of printing experience, we can reproduce your identifying trade mark in colors on each case — thus adding advertising value and affording extra protection against loss in transit. And the cases which we design for you will meet even abnormal strains safely, and minimize delivery failures.

We serve the greatest package merchandisers of the country.

BLAMES DEPRESSION ON LACK OF RELIGION

O. M. Fisher Says Cancellation of Contracts Is Due to Low Standard of Business Ethics.

ASSERTS GREED RULES NOW

Shoe Dealer Urges Unitarians to Spend Their $3,000,000 Fund to Promote Religion.

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—"There is an international crisis attributable to a new disease, 'cancelitis,' which has been spreading to every corner of the world until we see its effect in stagnation of business and the closing of our mills, workshops and the market for our goods," Oliver M. Fisher, President of the Boston Boot and Shoe Club, said today at the morning service in the Chestnut Hill Church, Brighton. He declared that a responsibility rests upon the Unitarian denomination to spend its $3,000,000 campaign fund to meet the need of the hour, "a deeper religious conviction underlying every walk of life."

"I would not venture to suggest here the crying need of this background of a religious life," said Mr. Fisher, "except from the viewpoint of a business man who sees in it our only hope for the future. We are becoming an irreligious people, which means an irresponsible people, responsible to neither God nor man.

"We are still following the same tactics as we did in the war, but for personal greed. The spirit of warfare overseas prompted men to take everything movable for their use, and their fellows here at home were doing the same thing. We are doing it still for selfish ends. No thoughts of the rights of the other fellow enter our minds or responsibility to God or obligation to our fellow man.

"Up to November, 1919, there was no trouble about business contracts. They were more often by word of mouth, generally faithfully executed. After the armistice was signed our Government started cancellation of orders, and 'cancelitis' has been spreading to every corner of the world.

"The British Board of Trade has sent to the United States Chamber of Commerce for their action more than $20,000,000 worth of contracts which have been broken by American business men, and other foreign Governments have complained to our State Department in similar cases.

"In this critical readjustment period it is most essential to preserve the highest standard of business ethics in foreign trade as in domestic commerce. Our whole commercial structure rests upon the sanctity of contracts, and they in turn upon solemn, moral and religious obligations. If our country is to endure it must rest upon the eternal principles of justice, truth and simple honesty in our dealings with other nations.

"The background of a religious life will make our contracts sacred, all obligations binding. We can talk about prosperity, but prosperity is of little account and cannot exist without a fine sense of honor and an enduring respect for our obligations—in other words, the maintenance of good faith. We all want prosperity, but our honor is more important. Indeed, real permanent prosperity is impossible without honor."

All the heat you want at less cost
—a simple problem in arithmetic

Last year perhaps you burned ten tons of coal in a ten radiator steam system. Suppose, by changing the inefficient air valves this year you'd only burn nine. Suppose if in burning these nine tons you could obtain better results from your heating system—would it pay?

Let's assume coal costs you fifteen dollars per ton. That's the average price throughout the country.

Let's suppose, again, that you put No. 1 Hoffman Air Valves on your radiators. They cost $2.15 each or $21.50 for the entire system plus labor of installing.

You would save at least one ton of coal this year and another next year and the valves would have paid for themselves. That's 50% a year on your investment.

Then another point, the Manufacturer guarantees the satisfactory operation of these Hoffman Valves for 5 years. He allows himself a big factor of safety in making such a guarantee. You can therefore assume that the life of these all-metal valves is at least ten years—and all this time they pay you dividends in coal saving and heat comfort.

Take a tip—they're the best "buy" in the market today.

Your local heating contractor is your stock broker—he can deliver and put on this dividend payer for you today.

If he can't let us know.

This illustration shows the No. 1 Hoffman Air Valve—the watchman. If your heating contractor cannot supply you, send $2.15 to us for one sample valve and test it out. Write to New York office for a full-of-facts-booklet regarding steam heating systems

The No. 1 HOFFMAN VALVE

Is noiseless in operation—vents all air freely. Does not hiss steam or drip water. Is automatic in all its functions. Requires no adjustment. Has lots of other features that make it the Perfect Air Valve for ordinary one-pipe steam systems.

The Foundation of Bigger Business
—the Rand McNally Commercial Atlas of America

The RAND McNALLY COMMERCIAL ATLAS OF AMERICA is the foundation on which the selling and promotional campaigns of every progressive business organization are built.

It has so many uses—such profitable uses, in fact—that the phrase "Let's see what RAND McNALLY says about it" has become the business slogan of the Nation.

The 1921 New Census Edition is the one for which the entire business world is waiting—bigger, better and more complete than ever.

Ready for delivery in January. The most important edition in ten years. Not another Federal census until 1930. Subscriptions filled in order of receipt. If your order is not among the many thousand now on file, order at once to insure delivery.

RAND McNALLY

The RAND McNALLY COMMERCIAL ATLAS OF AMERICA is as much a part of the modern office equipment as the telephone directory or the office dictionary. Whether you purchase the Atlas every year, or every other year, or merely "once in a while", the 1921 Edition is the one you will not care to miss because of new Census population statistics. There will not be another Federal Census until 1930.

Distance (rail mileage) between towns is shown on special Black and White Mileage Maps prepared for this purpose in the 1921 edition.

Edition limited. Price $35, net. Orders will be accepted prior to December 31, 1920 at the pre-publication price of $30 net, transportation prepaid.

DESPISED APPROPRIATION BILLS.

The public is warned to expect little from the coming short session of Congress. Senator LODGE explains that it will have time for only "routine" work. For the minority, Senator UNDERWOOD predicts that it will be fully occupied with the appropriation bills. The big projects will have to wait. An ambitious program of legislation is talked of by the Republicans, but it must be adjourned, they say, the country must be kept from enjoying the blessings instantly to be conferred by new laws, until Mr. HARDING is President and the next Congress buckles down to the job of making us all prosperous and happy. The session that opens next week will be tame, plodding, dull, from beginning to end.

This is a strangely low estimate of what ought to be highly important work. Nothing but the appropriation bills! That is as much as to say nothing but the carrying on of the Government! The money bills lie closer than anything else to the true authority and usefulness of Congress. It exercises much more than "the power of the purse." In giving or withholding supplies, it has the right to dictate how they shall be laid out. Every appropriation bill carries with it, express or implied, legislation to direct and control multifarious activities which touch every citizen and every interest. This is the real public business of the country. Here is the field in which the ablest and most hard-working Representatives and Senators accomplish most for the general good. Yet we have come to speak contemptuously of the appropriation bills as stale, flat and unprofitable.

Pause a moment to think of the chief grounds of complaint just now in the public mind. Nearly all of them link up, in one way or another, with the despised appropriation bills. Is it waste of public funds? This was tolerated or made possible or even invited by acts of Congress. Do we talk of the shameful overmanning of the departments, the plethora of Federal employés? Look into the various appropriation bills, and you will find the Congressional authorization for every lazy or superfluous clerk, for every sinecure, for all duplications of officials. Without the consent, or the order, of Congress, none of these abuses could exist. Take the shipping scandals, so prominent just now. Millions were lavishly spent. But who made the extravagance possible? Congress. Who countenanced the ramshackle organization of the Shipping Board, passed its loose accounts, paid its swollen bills? Why, Congress.

To say this is not to excuse executive laxness. It is not to palliate the want of administrative skill and vigor. But we cannot get away from the fact that the ultimate power of examination and control resides in Congress. People see this, more or less vaguely, in connection with the bills providing the money for the army and navy. They seem less aware of it in connection with the other branches of the Government. The question with which the Congressional committees, and the House and Senate as a whole, ought to busy themselves is not how much money has to be voted, but how it is spent, how it is justified, how each item in the appropriation for the Department of Justice, to take an instance, relates itself to the due enforcement of the law. It is a case for scrutinizing and combing the official estimates, to be sure, but it is also, and more importantly, a case for going behind the estimates to the actual functions and services. Are these necessary? Are they efficiently and economically organized? How closely is each Cabinet member familiar with the work done under him? These and a thousand other matters of the kind ought to be food and drink for alert and patriotic Congressmen as they seize upon the dry details of the appropriation bills and transform them into the vivid realities of Government. Shall we call this labor a soul-destroying drudgery? It ought to be thought of as exciting, almost romantic. EDMUND BURKE found public finance of thrilling interest. GLADSTONE could make a budget speech as absorbing as a novel. And there have always been some men in Congress with the insight and the imagination to see in drab appropriation bills the whole panorama of a democratic Government at work. It could be wished that there were more such men at Washington. Their genius in taking infinite pains with small matters is the kind most needed this Winter.

OF WHAT GERMANY REPENTS.

That parting guest whom the United States speeded in 1915, Dr. BERNARD DERNBURG, has written a long letter to a delegate in the Assembly of the League of Nations, declaring that "we Germans neither seek excuse nor ask forgiveness." They were "no more criminal" in the war than other nations. And the thing by which the German people are "deeply hurt" is, not the loss of territory, or the financial burdens, imposed upon them by the Versailles Treaty, but the fact that it branded them with "the stigma of moral unworthiness." This is all wrong, according to the worthy Dr. DERNBURG. He asserts that there has been a veritable propaganda of "German hate"—he means hatred of Germany, not that hatred of other nations of which Germany made a boast early in the war—and points out that he himself was a victim of it. He was driven from his noble work in New York, after the sinking of the Lusitania, "which I could not condemn without disloyalty to my country."

Dr. DERNBURG is thus sad but unrepentant. A famous fellow-countryman of his, General FRIEDRICH VON BERNHARDI, is of a somewhat different mind. He, too, is of a sorrowful countenance, but he admits that Germany ought to be penitent for many mistakes. He has recently published a volume, "Eine Weltreise," actually written before 1914, but only now given to the press with supplementary matter relating to the war. In this he brings out the things which he thinks ought to cause Germany to repent. What are they? Why, that she allowed her foreign policy to display such "weakness"; that she was only "half-ready" for war; that "the German people were never seriously enlightened as to the meaning of this war"; that "the nation "was not spiritually equal to the "magnitude events." All these faults, believes BERNHARDI, will be corrected by the nation which is "the bearer of all human progress," and the time will come when "the German people will rise up again, "stronger than today," and when "men will be forthcoming to lead it to victory."

From the older—and tougher—Germans, nothing but this haughty spirit ought, perhaps, to be expected. The younger generation may read the facts differently. But of neither old nor young is it demanded that they stand in a white sheet loudly confessing that they have been miserable sinners. All that is asked is that they bring forth works meet for repentance. Until they do that, it is vain for them to hope that the world will forget, or that they can be admitted as respectable members of international society.

MONT BLANC'S AVALANCHE.

By a dispatch from Paris that "the "top of Mont Blanc fell off three "days ago and started an enormous "avalanche," the impression made is that the highest mountain in Europe has suffered a catastrophic change and may in future look truncated, shorn of its splendors. But it cannot be so bad as all that. Mont Blanc is a mass, not a symmetrical peak like the Matterhorn. JOHN TYNDALL, who climbed Mont Blanc twice, says: "The "summit of the mountain is an elon"gated ridge, which has been com"pared to the back of an ass." COLERIDGE would have been shocked by the comparison, but the poet never climbed Mont Blanc. TYNDALL was alive to the majesty of the lordliest Alp, but the simile occurred to him, and he wrote it down. "It was perfectly manifest," said he once, with the great mountain beneath his feet, "that we were dominant over all "other mountains; as far as the eye "could reach Mont Blanc had no "competitor."

Winter is now in possession of the ridge, and it would be impossible to determine, even with a powerful telescope, just what part of the summit, and how much of it, has fallen. Mountaineers, who seek Chamonix every Summer, will be inclined to scoff at the report that the "top," that is to say the area of highest elevation, has plunged down into the valley as far as Italy. Avalanches are not uncommon in the high Alps, and Mont Blanc has had its share of them. That accomplished Alpinist, GEORGE D. ABRAHAM, speaking of the Summit Observatory, built by Dr. JANSSEN in 1895, has said:

> The depth of the icecap on Mont Blanc is so great that the energetic constructors failed to find rock upon which to build the foundations, despite prolonged tunneling. Consequently, the building is gradually moving down the side of the mountain, with the vast annual accumulation of snow, in the direction of Chamonix. Ere long this lofty monument to misdirected energy will topple over the ice precipice below the summit to be swallowed up in some useful and convenient crevasse.

Whatever part of the ridge gave way and started the echoes thundering, an enormous mass of snow, ice and rock must have been dislodged, to rend the side of the mountain for ten miles and tear out the forest of Pourtud. Nevertheless, it will probably be found when measurements are taken that Mont Blanc is almost as high as ever. There are few convulsions of nature in Europe that could cause more talk and speculation than the toppling over of a part of the Mont Blanc ridge. The excitement of the guides can be imagined. The guild of Alpinists, whose name is legion, will long for the return of Summer to try the passes and brave the perils of the summit as altered by the avalanche. LESLIE STEPHEN, who professed himself "a "loyal adherent of the ancient Mon"arch of mountains," once said that "he can show a longer list of killed "than any other mountain in the "Alps." If the avalanche reported is on an extraordinary scale, Mont Blanc will command more respect than ever from the adventurous.

THE RAILWAY INJUNCTIONS.

National interests are not the care of State courts, and it is natural that they should assert local interests vigorously. The New York Central Railway is running second and third sections to accommodate the passenger travel attracted by a fare to Buffalo $1.11 less than its competitors can charge because they must obey the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission fixing fares on a national schedule. Including Pullman fare, the discrimination in favor of the Central is $2.36. If these conditions continue, there is no such thing as a national scale of passenger fares or hope of prosperity for the railways as a whole.

The argument is the same regarding freight rates, although only passenger fares are involved in the injunctions to be appealed from. They seek rather to compel than permit the New York Central to accept the discrimination in its favor. Hitherto it has been the railways which have claimed such discriminations, but now the Central is defendant in proceedings compelling it to charge the lower rates which are attracting traffic so generously. The reason is that it will lose more on the national business which it does than it can gain on the local business which the New York laws would compel it to take from competitors. The lawyers are ready to fight it all over again, but the railways and the Interstate Commerce Commission have learned that there are more profits in peace than in war.

The freight rates have gone into effect without protest from the shippers, and there are no signs that the passengers feel so outraged as the officials who are prosecuting the Central. According to the figures for the first seven months, there were 51,398,024 more passengers this year than last, and they paid the railways $35,684,198 more. In the New York case the commission found that the railways of this State need the $11,000,000 or $12,000,000 which the commission rates would give them as a whole. Departures from the commission rates prejudice commerce. States have avowed their intention to "protect" their residents and give them advantages over those of other States. State officials have put that theory into practice over the head of the Interstate Commerce Commission, but Congress has given the commission power to assert its judgment. It will be a surprise if the New York officials are not overruled when the case gets before the Federal courts.

PRESIDENT BUTLER'S REPORT.

Columbia has become a great university, keeping pace with the growth of the city and maintaining steadily and splendidly the things of the mind in the midst of a material prosperity barren and meaningless without them. President BUTLER's annual report registers the work and progress of this congeries of schools "so excellent in art and still so rising." Old friends of the mother college, still remembered downtown by College Place, the nucleus of so ample a development, will be glad to see that it has over 400 more undergraduates than in the previous scholastic year—1,900 in all. This speaks well for interest in humane letters, in the recorded experience of mankind, in a wide preparation for the duties of citizenship and of life.

Gratifying from essentially the same point of view is the fact that, of the more than 6,500 graduate and professional students, nearly one-fifth are studying political science, philosophy and pure science. The teaching staff of the university has risen to 901 persons, a number hard for those of us to comprehend who can remember in our green, unknowing youth "large" and famous universities without so many students. The "salariat" of Morningside had a sorely needed relief last January, when academic wages, small enough at their highest, were classified and raised at a cost of about $500,000. Tuition fees had to be increased, as at so many other institutions, but simultaneously the fund to aid poor students deserving it was enlarged. The university property has a lump valuation of $72,000,000, an annual budget of about $6,500,000, "a sum greater "than that raised and spent annually "by any one of twenty States." Imposing figures, but there is no "rich" college. The purplest seeming plutocrat among them is a charity school, doling out education far below cost and always in need of money. Thus Columbia requires $30,000,000 more of capital.

We have to pass over a number of Columbian undertakings and achievements, but they are written in Dr. BUTLER's report, a document sure to be read, because it is highly readable.

It contains, as usual, some marrowy and muscular criticisms, opinions and attacks. Especially refreshing is his excursus on the misuse of the word "liberal." This is now applied to or assumed by persons whose theories mean the destruction of liberty, of free government, the establishment of industrial and political oligarchy or autocracy. It is "liberal," too, to deride ancient and sacred beliefs and institutions, marriage, the family, religion. To assail the material and the immaterial possessions of the majority, to be intolerant, violent, extreme—that is to be "liberal."

Among undergraduates, even among instructors, there is too much of this spurious "liberalism." There is pose and affectation of superiority in it. Much of it is doubtless due to propaganda. Among youths especially it seems to come from generous sympathies misled, from doctrines swallowed but not digested, from imitativeness, from that rash, credulous vitulinity so easy to be gulled and so eager to set the foolish elder world right. "The truly liberal man," as Dr. BUTLER says, "will be self-dis"ciplined, and will aim to make "knowledge the foundation of wis"dom, to base conduct upon fixed "character and to maintain an even "temper at difficult times."

THE BUDGET OF REPARATIONS.

The French cannot be blamed for their tenacity in insisting that Germany be held to the Treaty in the matter of paying for "all damage "done to the civilian population of "the Allied and Associated Powers and "to their property." This is not, with France, the pride of victors. It is a matter of national necessity. The devastated regions cannot wait. While still looking to Germany to make compensation, as she has agreed, the French Government must needs provide the funds for rebuilding the waste places. In the budget for the current year a sum of no less than twenty billion francs was set aside for that purpose. The budget of 1921, recently laid before the Chamber, allocates more than sixteen billions to this national service.

These great amounts are duly set down as "recoverable through the "payments to be received in execution "of the Treaty of Peace." Meanwhile, they necessarily tend to disorder French public finance. The money has to be raised by either taxes or loans. It is placed in a "special budget" of more than fifty "chapters." The reading of some of these is a poignant enough reminder of the vandal work of destruction, of which the Germans allege that it is unkind in the French to keep alive the memory. But can they forget, to say nothing of roads and bridges and factories and farms and houses, the churches leveled with the ground, the municipal buildings bombarded into fragments, and the 750 "historical monuments," besides works of art innumerable, ruined or stolen in the war?

To the work of repair France is setting her hand with energy and hope. But part of the hope is based on the just expectation that Germany will ultimately be compelled to make good her ravages on French soil. This is now the chief thing meant by "executing the Treaty." Marshal FOCH has just asked America to help in that righteous work. No President, no Secretary of State, at Washington will venture openly to refuse.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Bolshevism Seen by an Artist. With the conclusion—all too soon—of the diary kept by Mrs. CLARE SHERIDAN while in Moscow, there is something between need and opportunity for expressing appreciation of the fact that this record of a strange experience gave to THE TIMES readers a knowledge of Bolshevism and its leaders that was equally new and interesting. Other observers, of course, have seen more of present-day Russia than did Mrs. SHERIDAN, and have told us more about its general characteristics, operations, results and prospects. None has enabled us to see as clearly the personalities of the men who have seized upon the wreck of a great empire and now, to use Mr. WELLS's happily found figure, are trying to get the derelict in motion again and to carry it into the harbor of communism.

That Mrs. SHERIDAN's errand or mission was to model in clay, for later reproduction in marble or bronze, the heads of Russia's latest autocrats is in itself a revelation that among their peculiarities is what may be called, according to the point of view, either vanity or a sincere belief in their own importance. Mrs. SHERIDAN herself evidently inclined to the second of these explanations, partly because those whom she had heard described as beasts of prey treated her in a way which, contrasted with the warnings she had received at home, seemed more than ordinarily kind and courteous, and partly because she felt around her in Moscow the going on of something which, whatever its nature, was larger and more vehement than previously had come to her notice as a society woman with a turn for art.

It was this that made her write of the Bolsheviki with a close approach to sympathy and more than a trace of admiration.

Sympathetic, but Not Converted. While Mrs. SHERIDAN's diary showed that she was considerably impressed by the more eminent Bolsheviki whom she met, it does not indicate that she really was deceived by them or was converted to their doctrines. That she felt a longing to remain longer in Russia, and even to live there, in spite of the hardships—much mitigated, by the way, from those suffered by Russian men and women of her own class—only means that she found existence there intensely interesting, not least because of its perils.

She wrote, almost explicitly, that she regarded Bolshevism as incompatible with reason, and reason she had no intention of abandoning. Not infrequently she was amused by the agitated solemnity of these much discussed and much denounced personages, and at no time did she take seriously their threats to overturn the world as she knew it.

That she painted them in lighter colors than they deserve is unquestionable, but she painted what she saw—the truth as far as she knew it. That is what gives her diary its evidential value and makes her a trustworthy witness.

What the Bolsheviki will think of her picture remains to be learned after they have examined it. It is possible that they will think it a veracious portrait and be pleased.

A Request Wisely Refused. To the reasons given by Secretary BAKER for refusing to bring back from France an unidentified American soldier for interring or enshrining in the Victory Hall to be built here in New York there can be no denial of adequacy.

Of course, the intentions of those proposing the plan were admirable. It was to pay honor where honor is due, in the same way that it has been paid in England and France, but New York does not bear the same relation to the United States as does London to England and Paris to France, and we have neither a Westminster Abbey nor a monument as truly national in its associations as is the Arch of Triumph.

As the Secretary wrote, were he to grant the request from New York, like requests, equally well based, would come from dozens or scores of American cities, and there would be a regrettable dispersion of the bodies that now sleep so quietly and well where their great sacrifice was made. One can imagine our unidentified dead preferring to remain where they are, because only there can they remain together; it is not so easy to imagine them consenting to a separation that would scatter them in loneliness all over this great land, each almost inevitably hundreds or thousands of miles from what was once his home town.

Grievance Never Was Stronger. According to one of The World's correspondents, people in Dublin are asking if the funeral honors paid in London to the victims of Sinn Fein assassins were for the purpose of inflaming the British public and so bringing it to approve of more severely repressive measures in the distracted island.

The question truly is astonishing, and strange, indeed, must be the minds that could find a grievance—a new basis for accusation against the British—in the fact that the officers so cruelly slain were not hurried to their graves in secrecy and silence.

That last rites for some of these men were performed in Westminster Abbey and for some in Westminster Cathedral is a fact that well might cause a different sort of questioning in Dublin. Does it mean nothing there that in both edifices these dead were treated with like respect and with equal sorrow—that in both their taking off received the same judgment?

The General Hawkins Bequest.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On the editorial page of your issue of Nov. 19, referring again to General Rush Hawkins's bequest to the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, you repeat an error which occurred in your issue of Nov. 18 and in other newspapers of that same date.

You say, as to this bequest of $100,000: "The money to be used, as he (General Hawkins) put it, 'to abate the wicked horrors of vivisection,' " &c.

The terms of the bequest from which you quote (in part only) in fact preclude entirely the use of the principal of this fund for any such object, and also in express terms relieve the society from any "obligation or compulsion, legal or equitable," in respect to the application of the income. The language and context of the bequest which you do not quote further show that the testator's suggestion as to the use of the income —"the whole or in part."—is directed, not against vivisection per se, but against abuses and useless cruelties in the actual practice of it which he believed to exist.

ALFRED WAGSTAFF,
President American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

AN OPEN LETTER TO ATHENS.

O City of the Violet Crown—so known,
You are the same as in your golden
In one respect, at least, who may deny?
A certain mobile way you had, you have—
That aptitude to change—to veer away—
Tear out from ennuied hearts a one-time
love,
And get a new—to worship greatness, then
Cast off, as childish hands discard the toy!

I need not cite you, Athens, to that court
In which your Thirty, "good and true," ruled death:
Too avid was your sage to drink that cup—
Whose gift the Great King might in vain desire—
Of long night's sleep, Elysian dreams—or none!
And fine old Phocion, who some drachmas gave (Your stock of poison run too low to serve
At once himself and those you doomed with him)—
I need not Phocion cite, who toiled for you,
And found you ingrate, in his eightieth year!
The tale is old about the oyster-shell—
Our schoolboys nod to Aristides Just!
Trite, too, the case of your Miltiades,
Who won at Marathon—at Paros failed—
Was certain talents fined—defaulted these. . . .
And out his spirit burned, through prison-walls!
I savor bitterly the thing you did
To him who saved you from the Persian's grip—
Whose "Strike-but-hear-me" still so clearly rings!
That bravery from exile saved him not,
When high your "envy" rose! His hour had struck:
To Argos, first; and, last (I like to think!),
A generous foe gave honored length-of-

But further instances why multiply?
O Athens, what your citizens once did,
Your latest children, true to type, repeat.
Else, answer where is now your Best—
That one whom rugged Crete gave to the State—
Like a proud pine, to be her steering-mast,
Who brought her safely, when so small and weak,
To happy ports of greatness scarcely dreamed.
Quick—answer make, O you the Violet-crowned:
What have you done with Venizelos, say?

THE FIFTH AVENUE RIOT.

Thanksgiving Day's Outbreak of Lawlessness Is Strongly Condemned by Many.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Irishmen may be delightful because they are so witty, but they are often very incalculable and irritating owing to a lamentable lack of a sense of humor. What people possessing a sense of humor could have staged a situation so ludicrous as that of the attack upon the Union Club? There was a mob of aliens, or citizens of foreign birth and affiliations, carrying their Irish flag in procession and yet stoning a club of American citizens for displaying the flag of a great friendly nation on a most appropriate occasion. Perhaps this outbreak of Irish lawlessness in our midst will help many Americans to a new appreciation of the difficulties facing the British people in trying to adjust their Irish relations wisely and equitably.

If we are honest in our determination not to let even a world league of nations interfere with our internal national affairs how can we consistently permit America to be used by extreme Irish agitators in order to foment rebellion and assassination in a country with which we are on terms of friendship? The fact that the British Government and people have preserved a dignified silence under great provocation from this country, where our cities extend their freedom to the President of the alleged Irish Republic, money is raised for a campaign of murder in Ireland and legislative bodies pass resolutions favoring Irish independence, should move moderate opinion in this country to insist upon a decent respect for international courtesy and fair dealing. Especially should this sympathetic attitude exist toward a country which has so recently been our stanch ally in the great World War. If we are willing to forget the pro-Germanism of Irish radicals and their treason in a day of crisis for world civilization, let us not forget the million graves of British soldiers who died fighting for that civilization. Let us give the British people sincere sympathy in their very evident purpose to bring peace and order to distracted Ireland and to grant the largest measure of self-government to the people of that country.

FREDERIC J. GAULD.

For How Long?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why are we and for how long are we going to be at the mercy of a few hyphenated Americans who seek to impose their policies and sentiments upon the unhyphenated citizens of this city?

Why do we stand by and for how long will we stand by and submit to the dictates of a minority which demanded the lowering of one of our allies' flags as it floated from a flagstaff of one of our most prominent clubs on Fifth Avenue?

Why have we allowed and for how long shall we continue to allow our friendship for England, which more than all other nations represents and upholds those Anglo-Saxon ideals and principles which we also have striven for, to be imperiled and menaced by those few who set allegiance to their forsworn country above loyalty to their adopted one, and who seek to make of one of England's admittedly difficult national problems a subject of international embarrassment?

If any protest was in order it should have been one against allowing an American soldier in uniform to carry the flag of a non-existing republic alongside of an American flag in the church across the street, but no protest should have been admitted which interfered with the flag of Great Britain flying alongside of our own and that of France.

Why should the feeling of the pro-Ally and loyal citizens of New York be sacrificed to those of the pro-Irish and the disloyal ones? L. W. v. H.

Mr. Sweeney Blames the Club.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Returning to the Grand Central from a business engagement uptown today, I witnessed the inception and progress of the riot occasioned by the unfurling of a British flag from the Union Club while thousands of persons were attending a memorial service for the late Lord Mayor of Cork in the Cathedral next door. As a result of my observations I trust you will accord me space to express my contempt for the cheapness of the affront to the MacSwiney mourners by this act of Union Club members. I cannot believe the club as a whole would accept responsibility for it. Previous to the mass the club was informed of the nature of the service that had attracted such a throng to the Cathedral, and had the good taste to withdraw the flag. It was while the service was being held and while I was walking down Fifth Avenue that the flag reappeared.

Had it been a British holiday, had there been any connection between the glory of the Union Jack and the day of thanksgiving for the safe arrival in America of the people who had put Britain behind them, or had there been any tangible reason for unfurling the flag whatever, I should not complain. But with thousands of earnest and devoted Irish men and women on their knees in prayer next door in memory of one who to them is a martyr and hero the sudden reappearance of the British emblem constituted an insult and must have been calculated to produce just such a storm of indignation as was aroused among the worshippers when they emerged from the church.

Gratuitous attacks on the English flag, like that at the Capitol Theatre recently, could find no apologist in me, although I sympathize with the aspirations of the Irish and all other peoples seeking freedom to govern themselves. Moreover, I am not unkindly disposed toward the English people. I learned to know them during the war, and frankly like them. The English flag couldn't offend me, except when it should be employed deliberately to offend, as it was most certainly employed by the American gentlemen of wealth and good breeding in the Union Club today.

CHARLES P. SWEENEY.

The American Flag in Cork.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As pictured in your newspaper this morning, the venerable figure of Dr. Lavelle appealing to the mob who had so lately bowed their heads for his blessing must have been a moving one. Perhaps it would have been more effective in restraining the members of his flock, had not his words in addressing Mr. De Valera as "President" and his absurdity in speaking of America as "Greater Ireland" seemed to give the approval of his Church to the spirit that moved them to the attack on the Union League Club. The members of that club will be obliged to console themselves with the thought that the Stars and Stripes were no more popular in Queenstown and Cork during the great war than our ally's flag is today in New York.

It might be questioned whether the day appointed by the civil authorities as one of thanksgiving was the fitting time for a public service to pray for the soul's repose of a man who died in prison, where he was incarcerated for complicity in a murder plot. To be sure, Mr. De Valera declares such murders justified (herein he differs from the Roman Catholic prelates in Ireland), but his opinion will weigh little with Americans.

Not a Country for Riots.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If the Irish want to get any sympathy they are making a big mistake in their recent rowdyism at the Capitol Theatre and at the Union Club Thanksgiving Day. If they are so Irish, and hate England so much, they would do well to take their de Valera and go back; and if they are Americans they should be Americans and behave like civilized people. Riots are to be expected in Russia and wherever there is ignorance, but for any band of people to smash windows and tear down flags is entirely inconsistent with Americanism. No true American has any particular hate for England, and if any one cares to display the English flag or any other it is his privilege to do so, and the Irish most assuredly have no right to tear down the Union Jack in the United States any more than they have to tear down the Stars and Stripes in England—or here, for that matter.

One of our deepest principles is freedom for all, and that cannot by any means be interpreted to mean that the Irish have any special privilege or rights and can tear down British flags because they happen to hate them.

Shows Lawlessness.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The disturbance outside the Union Club on Thanksgiving Day is a sample of what the British Government has contended with for generations. It should prove to Americans, who were beginning to feel a little soft on "Ireland's woes," that the Irish are absolutely lawless and irresponsible.

The Sinn Fein outrage on our sacred holiday will doubtless meet with the approval and encouragement from the self-appointed President of the "Irish Republic," which will assuredly destroy the last vestige of American sympathy.

The City of "New Cork."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It might be well in considering the Thanksgiving Day riot to change the name of our city to New Cork. In 1866 the Fenians tried to conquer Canada to make it an Irish republic. Today their descendants are after bigger game. If the United States tamely submits to their disregard for law and order the time may come when the Stars and Stripes may be treated in the same way as the Union Jack.

Lost Sympathy.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Believing in Home Rule, I have jeered at the Protestant Irish in their fear of Southern Ireland, but now I sympathize and understand their position. The Germans in Belgium, soldiers in uniform, were gentlemen in comparison with these assassins.

From an Irishman.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am Irish. I was born in Dublin, so were my father and mother. I have a lot in my heart that's for Ireland, but the sooner she gets rid of this Sinn Fein idea the better it will be for her and all the rest of the world. Let's play fair, win or lose.

PATRICK KEENAN.

Sinn Fein in Fifth Avenue.

From The World.

Sinn Feiners are not the only inhabitants of New York subject to irritation by what they see and hear in public places. A population vastly more numerous is annoyed every hour of the day by persons and things quite as offensive to them as the British flag can be to a supporter of the Irish Republic. For example, nothing is better calculated to arouse the ire of many thousands of our fellow-citizens than the Sinn Fein standard, and yet in that case, as in scores of others, violence is practically unknown.

We are indebted to Sinn Fein, marching with its provocative emblems and banners as it pleases, always under the protection of law, for the idea that a difference of opinion or taste in regard to decorations is an offense to be punished by them with riotous assault. They find no impropriety in flaunting their banners in the faces of better Americans who dislike them, but a Fifth Avenue clubhouse displaying the colors of the allied nations which Sinn Fein sought to betray finds its windows smashed and is made the scene of shameful disorder.

Most New Yorkers will admit, no doubt, that the ill-tempered persons who disgraced themselves and the city on Thanksgiving Day might be admirable patriots—in Ireland. It is possible that if they were to descend upon London, where there are many British flags and a natural disposition to defend them, they might be regarded as desperate heroes. But an overwhelming majority of our people, tolerant, well behaved and, above all else, American, will ask to be excused from sympathizing with an organization, operating so far from any real danger, which affronts only its neighbors and denies rights to others which it vociferously claims for itself.

Irish Inquiry Misunderstood.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I notice in your paper of this morning a letter with reference to the so-called American Commission on Conditions in Ireland. I feel as do, I believe, the great majority of Americans, that the proceedings of this commission are most unfortunate and calculated seriously to impair our relations with friendly nations. I am glad of an opportunity to protest against the form which this so-called investigation has taken. Whether intentionally or not, the name assumed by the individuals conducting it, their methods and place of procedure, inevitably convey to foreigners, and to many ignorant Americans, the impression that the investigation is being conducted by official representatives of this country.

The commission is self-created, purely voluntary, and absolutely without any public authority to conduct the so-called investigation which it has under way; its use of the word "American" and the selection of Washington as the place in which to carry on its purely voluntary proceedings is exceedingly discreditable to its members and lays them open to the charge of endeavoring to create a false impression in foreign countries. The only thing that it has accomplished has been to irritate many of the citizens of Great Britain, and to a certain extent impair friendly relations with them.

BAKER SEES NEED OF A STRONG ARMY

Must Have Adequate Force While We Try to Make World What It Should Be.

DRAWS LESSON OF THE WAR

Tribute to the Work of Women—Cost of the War Is Figured at $13,730,395,576.73.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The post-war reorganization of the army marks a new era in the military history of the country, Secretary Baker declares in his annual report, made public today, as it provides an effective model on which great armies could be swiftly built in times of emergency.

Reviewing the military activities of the nation since 1776, Secretary Baker says that, although the United States was "the most peace-loving of all nations," it had been engaged in major domestic or foreign wars about one out of every four years during that period and that the military power of the country had been in active use in war or military operations of some kind about three out of every four years.

"It is apparent, therefore, that while we do not need a great standing army we must live in the world as it is while we struggle to make it what it should be," Mr. Baker says. "We must have a body of trained men large enough in numbers to be an effective working model upon which great armies can be swiftly built in event of emergency.

"A justice-loving people may be forced by tragic necessity to resort to war, but it has no right to ask its sons to fight its battles outarmed and outshielded by an adversary."

In studying the lessons of the World War the War Department had proceeded on the accepted theory that the infantry remained the backbone of the army, the report said, although the importance of other arms of the service had been greatly increased by the swift developments of war.

"Profound and fundamental changes in armament were introduced and many of the instrumentalities devised are apparently only at the beginning of their development," said the War Secretary. "The infantry itself is no longer the foot-soldier armed with the musket, but the foot-soldier with the long-range, high-power repeating rifle, the automatic rifle and the machine gun, which, in some of its uses, is analagous to light artillery. The advance of the infantry is no longer merely covered by protecting artillery fire, but the path of the advance must be cleared of obstructions, and its position, once attained, must be protected by artillery of great power and extreme mobility."

Mr. Baker makes no comment on universal military training, a plan rejected by Congress in enacting the new Army Reorganization bill, but in reviewing the provisions of the new military law he says that one of the most important features of the legislation is the provision for a "constant and systematic relationship between the National Guard and the regular army."

This provision, Mr. Baker declares, will do much to "prevent antagonisms which have in the past been the not unnatural but nevertheless unhappy characteristic of the relationships of the two forces."

"The army is essentially a new army," Mr. Baker continues, "not merely another army than that which existed prior to the war, but new in its attitude toward the country and the country's attitude toward it. The extent to which a new era has dawned for the army is shown by recruiting. The difficulty in securing the necessary enlistments for our small pre-war army has in a large part disappeared, and although the stimulus of active operations has now entirely disappeared the total strength of the army Nov. 3, 1920, was 213,067."

Mr. Baker declares that the one-year enlistment period authorized by Congress has not justified itself and asserts that "from the point of view of the efficiency of the army one-year enlistment periods are of little value."

The report reviews at length the new educational and recreational program established since the war and declares that "the time will come soon when the peace-time army will be throughout an educational institution from which men will graduate better equipped to enter civilian pursuits and with a larger and firmer grasp on citizenship and its responsibilities and privileges."

Mr. Baker says:

"A particular feature of the recreational program has been the association of women as librarians, canteen workers, hostesses, and social guides. This lesson, too, arose out of the war. We had in France an army of more than 2,000,000 men. Fine women came eagerly to serve with the various agencies built up around the soldier and his needs. All over France during the war it was possible to find these serene, dignified, and helpful women, and I know no more knightly fact than that from the beginning to the end of that great experiment there is no recorded instance of an indignity or an incivility from a soldier to a woman. An entirely unsentimental but wholesome and affectionate relationship grew up. The woman, whether she was young or old, was like sister or mother to the man, and that soldier was protector and friend to those who had come to minister to his comfort and his loneliness."

The total cost of the war through the War Department is placed by the Secretary at about $13,730,300,500, and it is stated that in the liquidation of claims and contracts the Department saved the Government 87 per cent. of the outstanding obligation at the end of the war.

Discussing the disposal of surplus war stocks, Secretary Baker recommends that in the future the department's plans keep in mind an effort to have on hand at the termination of a war supplies of a character, so far as consistent with army needs, that could readily and quickly be absorbed into the country's commerce.

Declaring that he is happy to leave to his successors in the War Department the assurance that "in any national emergency they have but to use and direct the limitless capacity and willingness of the American people which spontaneously offers itself when a crisis comes," Mr. Baker concludes his report with a tribute to the navy and civilian war organizations for co-operation during and after the war, and declares that:

"In equipment, personnel and spirit the army of the United States today is an object of just pride to the country."

BENNETT DIRECTORS MEET.

Elect Henry Watterson and Samuel Untermyer Honorary Members.

Colonel Henry Watterson, editor Emeritus of the Louisville Courier Journal and Samuel Untermyer were yesterday elected honorary members of the James Gordon Bennett Association, Inc., at the first meeting of its Board of Directors, held in the Waldorf. Mr. Untermyer is counsel for the association.

The Board of Directors includes Robert E. Livingston, President of the association, Harry C. Silver, George W. Bonte, Martin Petry and Miss Martha Coleman. An Executive Committee composed of Mr. Livingston, Wellington Wright, Mr. Silver, Mr. Bonte and Mr. Petry was appointed.

WORLD CONGRESS TO AID ALL JEWRY

To Consider Anti-Semitism, War Relief and Re-establishment of Palestine.

DR. DRACHMAN AGAINST IT

Would Be "Putting Water on the Mill of Henry Ford," He Declares.

The formation of a Jewish World Congress, which shall act upon questions affecting Jewry throughout the world, was discussed last night at the second meeting of a committee which had decided upon such a project. The need for a world congress was declared to be imperative, especially to take up the question of anti-Semitism.

Some of the other matters to be taken up by a body representative of the 14,000,000 Jews in the world are "to render aid and constructive relief to the Jews in the war-stricken countries, to do everything necessary by and with the approval of the proper authorities of Great Britain for the re-establishment of the Jewish National Homeland in Palestine and to promote the progress of Jewish culture."

At the outset of last evening's meeting, which was held in the McAlpin Annex, Dr. Bernard Drachman, a leading orthodox rabbi in New York and President of the Sabbath Alliance of America, arose at the invitation of Abraham S. Schomer, Chairman of the committee, to tell why he was opposed to the World Congress.

Dr. Drachman declared that he realized something must be done to improve the lot of the Jew. He is suffering more now than ever within the last 2,000 years, Dr. Drachman said, and the treatment he was accorded at the time of the downfall of Jerusalem and the Holy Temple was mild compared with his present plight. No one, he said, can deny the intensity and severity of the problem. But a poor remedy or a wrong remedy is worse than no remedy, he asserted.

While he believes in some kind of a world congress, Dr. Drachman said the kind just formed was "aggravating the disease from which we all suffer," inasmuch as it aims to create a Jewish world State or a universal Jewish nation, with a leader and administrative body. This action, he went on, was just "putting water on the mill of Henry Ford."

"He is accusing us of trying to rule the world and forming an international organization seeking world dominion. We know how false that is. But if we form an international Jewish State of this kind, we are just playing the game of anti-Semites like Ford. They'll take advantage of us and prove by us that what they have been saying is true."

Dr. Drachman said he would favor a religious organization of Jews, with a Chief Rabbi and a Sanhedrin, as of old, but the Jews are not united enough in their religious views to be able to form such an organization, he stated.

The national aspirations of the Jews is what is causing most of the present-day troubles, Dr. Drachman said. If the Jews in Poland and other countries in Europe, where they are being persecuted, were to say they were just a religious group, they would be more desirable in those places, he said. The claim of Jewish nationalism is bringing them all their trouble, he declared.

A few of the members present answered Dr. Drachman, among whom was Mr. Schomer, the Chairman, who declared that the need for a world congress of Jews is imperative.

The following officers have been elected: Abraham S. Schomer, Chairman; Judge Louis D. Gibbs, Rueben Brainin, Meyer Greenberg and Miss Sadie American, Vice Presidents; Harry Fischel, Treasurer, and Leo Wolfson, Secretary.

APPEAL TO JEWS HERE FOR FREE PALESTINE

Speakers at Close of Zionist Convention Ask for Moral and Financial Aid.

BUFFALO, Nov. 28.—With appeals to American Jewry for the moral and financial aid which will make Palestine the home of the Jews of the world and the centre of Jewish thought and culture, the Zionist organization of America closed its twenty-third annual convention here tonight with a mass meeting.

In speeches which pictured the misery of the Jews throughout the centuries since their expulsion from Palestine, speakers warned that the period of trial for the Jews was not yet over. It was for the American Jews, they said, to give the aid which would make a free Palestine possible and which would give the Jews their rightful place among the nations of the world.

Those who spoke were Judge Hugo Pam of Chicago, Rabbi Abba Hillett Silver of Cleveland and Judge Julian W. Mack of Cleveland.

Officers for the coming year were elected as follows: Honorary President, Justice Louis D. Brandeis; Honorary Vice President, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise; President, Judge Julian W. Mack; Vice Presidents, Dr. Harry Friedenwald and Nathan Straus; Treasurer, Peter J. Schweitzer.

After an all-night and all-day session which began on Saturday night and which ended at 8 o'clock tonight, the report of the Organization Committee was received and adopted. Ten resolutions were adopted which in many respects brings about a reorganization of Zionist activities.

Great powers are placed in the hands of the National Executive Committee, which will determine the functions of the Palestine Department, which will have full charge of Palestine activities. The committee will also organize groups of Zionist districts, which will not be entitled to recognition by the organization unless they fulfill such requirements as the committee shall prescribe. The National Executive Committee, states the tenth resolution, shall be the final authority on all matters, subject to the constitution and the resolutions adopted.

Season's Supper Dances Open.

The Pall Mall Supper Dances had their first meeting on Saturday evening at the MacDowell Club, 108 West Fifty-fifth Street, which has been taken for Saturday evenings through the season. The dances are for young married people and the older girls and men, although several débutantes are also subscribers. Mrs. James T. Terry and Mrs. Joseph Bourne acted as hostesses, and there are to be different ones each Saturday evening, Mrs. George Gould being listed as one for next Saturday. The subscribers include Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. Carroll L. Wainwright, Mrs. James T. Terry and the Misses Pauline Bourne, Olga Serdobin, Grace Hendricks, Faith and Ruth Hayden and Muriel Vanderbilt. The clubhouse is arranged for these affairs like a private house and the buffet suppers are extremely simple. Miss Maude Burnside is the Secretary.

Old Salem Custom House Burns.

SALEM, Mass., Nov. 28.—The old Salem Custom House, built in 1805, was destroyed by fire of undetermined origin today. An adjacent business block was also damaged. The total damage was estimated at $75,000. Five firemen were slightly injured by broken glass. The Custom House, a three-story brick building, had been used as a business block for about fifty years.

SOCIAL NOTES

New York.

Herman Livingston Rogers and Mrs. Rogers (Miss Katherine Moore Bigelow), whose marriage took place Saturday, have gone to the Pacific Slope, and, after visiting the latter's aunt, Mrs. Warner M. Leeds, in California, will go on to Honolulu to spend several weeks before returning to live in New York.

REBELS SEIZE TABASCO.

Followers of Deposed Governor Set Up New Officials.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 27.—Supporters of General Carlos Green, who recently was deposed as Governor of the State of Tabasco, forcibly disarmed the police at Villa Hermosa, the State capital, today, and appointed Tomas Garrido as Governor.

The seizure of power was carried out without loss of life.

After an entirely new official personnel of Green supporters had been named, a letter was directed to the State Senate stating that the seizure was in retaliation for General Green's deposition.

General Green was deposed several weeks ago after soldiers, alleged to be acting upon his orders, killed two members of the Chamber of Deputies and wounded several spectators, while attempting to arrest Deputy Lascano, who had fled into the Chamber after shooting an army captain.

General Green is now in a Mexico City prison awaiting trial. Minister of War Calles, in announcing the new overturn, asserted it was the result of delay by the National Senate in confirming the appointment of Aguilar Suarez as Provisional Governor. Suarez had been serving in that capacity since General Green's arrest.

BOND FOR CARS TO MEXICO.

Special to The New York Times.

LAREDO, Texas, Nov. 28.—When an attempt was made last night to take the special train which was conveying Governor W. P. Hobby of Texas and a number of other high officials of different States across the border for the journey to the City of Mexico, the International & Great Northern Railroad refused to permit the dining car and baggage car to enter Mexico. The reason given was that there was danger of the cars falling into the hands of bandits.

The railroad company finally demanded $60,000 cash as a guarantee against possible loss of the cars. It refused to accept an indemnity bond for the amount. While there were some rich men on the train, none happened to have $60,000 cash.

After three hours' delay M. T. Cogley, a banker of Laredo, was communicated with and he gave the railroad a cashier's check for $60,000. The train then pulled out for the Mexican capital.

OFFER A PROGRAM OF MEXICAN REFORM

Refugees Prominent in Former Governments Issue a Manifesto on Reconstruction.

WOULD LIMIT ELECTORATE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Nine members of a group of Mexican political refugees now in the United States, headed by Manuel Calero, who was Minister of Foreign Affairs and later Ambassador to the United States, and Francisco S. Carbajal, Chief Justice of the Mexican Supreme Court under the Madero Administration as well as President of Mexico for a brief interval after the overthrow of Huerta, have prepared and signed a remarkable document dealing with the present Mexican situation.

The document, which has been sent to Mexico as an appeal to the Mexican people, contains an analysis of the major problems now confronting Mexico, together with a constructive program for the solution of the problems. The signers of the document are men who gained prominence in former Mexican Administrations and who profess to be seriously working for the reconstruction of Mexico on a basis that would permit of their return. Several of them were members of the progressive group that sought by peaceful means to bring about reforms in the Administration of Porfirio Diaz, some were identified with the Madero Government, though not with the revolution, and some with the Administration of Victoriano Huerta. The signers besides Manuel Calero and Francisco S. Carbajal are Juan B. Castelazo, who was prominent in several reform movements in Mexico; Torbio Esquibel Obregon, Minister of Finance in Huerta's Cabinet and now a professor of economics in Columbia University; Jesus Flores Magon, Minister of the Interior in Madero's Cabinet and former Senator of the republic; Tomas Macmanus, formerly a member of the Mexican Senate; Rafael Martinez Carrillo, former member of the Senate; Miguel Ruelas, formerly a General in the Federal Army, and Jorge Vera Estanol, Minister of Education in the Cabinets of Diaz and of Huerta.

Would Limit the Electorate.

Fifteen topics are discussed in the document, which is being spread broadcast in Mexico, the principal one being the means of making effective a real democratic form of government in Mexico, international relations, the educational problem, the land problem, labor legislation and financial rehabilitation of the country.

As one means of trying to make real democracy effective in Mexico they advocate limiting the ballot for Federal and State electoral offices to Mexican citizen 21 years old or more who have a means of livelihood and can read and write the Spanish language. This would eliminate the great mass of illiterate Indians until they shall have been educated, but it is proposed to let them have a voice in the elections of municipal officials.

Under the heading of the educational problem it is pointed out that approximately 12,000,000 of the 15,000,000 or 16,000,000 population of Mexico, can neither read nor write, and that the evil of illiteracy is one of the gravest of the national problems. The sponsors of this document condemn the Carranza plan for limiting private initiative in education and urge utter freedom of education without restrictions. They assert that there should be 60,000 grade schools established in the republic, and that because of the extent of the proposal and the imperative need of it this movement should receive Federal aid, as it would be too great a task for the States and municipalities to handle alone. This would quickly educate the great mass of illiterate Indians to a point where they would enjoy the rights of the electorate.

In considering foreign relations of the country, the signers of the appeal say that Mexico should adopt a frank and open international policy, particularly with the United States, with which country, they assert, "our diplomacy should be based on the fact that with no other country in the world are we bound by closer ties of propinquity, by trade intercourse, and in general by countless relations of an economical and moral nature." They recommend immediate covenants with the United States settling all boundary questions and for making the interchange of commodities freer. They advocate a close railway convention, practically a common system to govern international traffic across the border; a claims commission before which foreigners may voluntarily appear and also a mixed claims commission, and the payment of damages to Mexican citizens as well as foreigners for losses incurred by the revolution.

Carranza Doctrines Condemned.

Their discussion of the land problem includes a carefully worked out plan taking into account the various factors of this complicated subject. They condemn the Carranza doctrine as embodied in the Constitution of 1917 as "anti-capitalistic" and wholly unrealizable. They recognize the imperative need of capital for agricultural development.

In considering the labor problem they recognize the rights of strike and collective bargaining, as well as the right of the open shop for non-union workmen and the right of employers to close their shops when not in violation of any labor contracts. They advocate the eight-hour law, but consider that this and other details of the operation of the labor sections of the present Constitution should form a separate body of laws, which should also include such features as the suppression of company shops and the payment of wages in any other form than currency. Special efforts should be made, they say, to develop thrift by the establishment of popular savings banks.

They point out, in the discussion of financial rehabilitation, that in August of this year the public debt and other obligations guaranteed by the Government, such as railway bonds, &c., were calculated to amount to 1,200,000,000 pesos ($600,000,000). They admit that those figures are not complete, as all statistics are not available, but they are the best obtainable, and do not include the amount of claims, rolling stock, properties seized from foreigners and nationals which cannot be fixed until some attempt has been made to examine them. In the reconstruction of the country, they say, foreign capital is absolutely indispensable and every encouragement must be given to foreign investors; but they advise that this come through private channels with no Government connection. They therefore condemn the Carranza constitutional theory "inspired in hostility to foreign capital and to everything foreign." With these investments, they say, and the natural resources of the country Mexico may satisfy all obligations now pending.

They contend that payments of Mexico's debts should be made by a special bond issue and express the hope that the Governments interested will accept this plan. Long-term bonds, without interest for a limited period, should be issued, they urge, and special arrangements should be made with regard to the railways, as it is deemed most advisable that the Government should be freed from the enormous burden of the national lines. Special consideration is urged for the foreign banks that have been despoiled and that they be reimbursed.

COLBY SAYS HE SEEKS CONGRESS AID ON JAPAN

Tells Arizona Governor He Will Confer With Committeemen on Treaty Action.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Nov. 28.—The negotiations between Japan and the United States will be discussed informally with members of Senate and House committees before any action is taken, according to a telegram to Governor Thomas E. Campbell from Secretary of State Colby received at the State House yesterday. The Secretary's telegram was in reply to one from Governor Campbell in protest against the reported execution of a new treaty with Japan.

Secretary Colby's message read:

"Replying to your telegram based upon press dispatches relative to negotiations with Japan, it is, of course, apparent to you that the subject is one that does not admit of free and open discussion by telegram.

"The views reflected in your telegram are well understood, and I can assure you that they are receiving the most studious and open-minded consideration. It is our intention to avail ourselves of the aid of informal discussion with members of the Senate and House committees who are charged with responsibilities in this connection.

"The negotiations, which are informal and tentative, have not, however, as yet reached the point of discussion and of formal consideration."

Governor Campbell's protest had cited what were said to be Japanese efforts to control the production of foodstuffs on the Pacific Coast.

MORE RAIDS IN CHICAGO.

New Police Chief Takes in 200 More in Attempt to Check Crime.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—Another series of raids on criminals and gambling houses, directed personally by Chief of Police Fitzmorris, netted more than 200 prisoners today. Squads from every police station co-operated with a flying detail from the Detective Bureau.

"We've got them on the run," said the Chief tonight, "and we are going to keep them going."

The most spectacular raid was at a three-story mansion at 3,427 South Michigan Avenue. Seven men were arrested, among them "Nick the Greek" Dandolos, whose smartly tailored person yielded $81,000. The police had to demolish the doors of the house to gain admittance. They found seven men at a sumptuous banquet on the first floor. On the second floor a quantity of dice was seized. A woman who said she had retired for the night was on the third floor; also crap tables and roulette wheels.

"This is an outrage," said a man who described himself as Charles Wilson. "I live here. It's my home."

He and Charles Wagoner, "Nick the Greek" and four other men whose identity is unknown were conveyed to the police station. They obtained their release on bonds.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Nov. 28.—The will of Ruth Livingston Mills, wife of Ogden Mills of Staatsburg, who died in Paris on Oct. 13, was admitted to probate by Surrogate Daniel J. Gleason in Poughkeepsie on Saturday. The petition for the probate of the instrument gives the value of the estate at more than $50,000. While the exact value of the estate will not be established until an appraisal is made, it is known that the estate will amount to several hundred thousand dollars. Ogden Mills, the husband, is named as sole executor and the will specifies that he shall not be required to give bond.

Gifts of property and jewelry are made to Mrs. Mills's daughters, Beatrice, Countess of Granard of London, and Gladys Mills Phipps, also of London, and to Mrs. Mills's son, Ogden I. Mills. Bequests are also made to the servants. In addition, the children get the residue of the estate at the death of their father. Mr. Mills, the husband, gets the estate at Staatsburg and the New York home, 2 East Sixty-ninth Street, for his use during his lifetime. Mrs. Cavendish Bentinck, sister of Mrs. Mills, is provided with an income of $40,000 a year. Mrs. Bentinck, who lives in London, also gets considerable jewelry.

GET COUNTERFEIT OUTFIT.

Cincinnati Police Arrest Two Men Said to Be Making $10 Bills.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 28.—Following information given by a woman, three policemen entered a room here today and arrested two men who were drying the ink on more than $3,000 worth of $10 bank notes which had been printed from copper plates.

The counterfeiting outfit was seized and the police say it is one of the most complete which has ever been found in Cincinnati. The prisoners were registered as Martin Hamman, 47 years old, Cincinnati, and Charles Schwilbe, 25 years old, Vincennes, Ind.

The men had evidently made many experiments, for several $10 notes which Hamman said were "too thick," were scattered on the table. The paper used was of the best grade and an artificial toughness was added with a glue. Many books on photographic methods, engraving, chemicals and coloring were found in the room.

Police say Hamman was sentenced to serve five years in the Federal Prison at Leavenworth, Kan., after he had been convicted of counterfeiting in Oklahoma. He was recently released. Schwilbe told the police that he served nine months in prison for robbing a safe in an Indiana town.

"CRANK" BEGINS LIFE TERM.

Kidnapper of Coughlin Baby Is Taken to Penitentiary.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—August Pascal, the "crank," convicted recently in the Montgomery County Court of kidnapping twelve months old Blakely Coughlin, was brought to the Eastern Penitentiary today from Norristown and began serving his life sentence.

Pascal also confessed, according to the police, that he had smothered the child and cast its body into the Schuylkill River, but as no trace of the body could be found the authorities decided there was no chance of a conviction on the murder charge.

SAYS CANDY MAKERS FACE SHARP LOSSES

Sudden Drop in Raw Materials and Influx of Investors Blamed by J. J. Klein.

SUDDEN PROSPERITY ENDS

Cut in Sugar Found Many Stocked, but Forced to Reduce Finished Product.

Confectioners are facing financial stringency due to the sudden drop in price of raw materials, the influx of inexperienced investors in the industry and other economic hardships, according to Julius J. Klein, General Manager of the Confectioners' Mercantile Agency, 438 Broadway. Candy export has fallen off, the manufacturer is facing cancellation of orders on perishable goods, and many of those who after prohibition invested in the manufacture of sweets have "burned their fingers," Mr. Klein said yesterday.

Mr. Klein pointed out that the average layman has no conception of what a far reaching trade is that of the purveyor of sweets. Every tenth store in the United States handles or sells candy. The capital investment in the manufacture of candy exceeds several hundred million dollars and a number of manufacturers are rated at over $1,000,000. The industry ranks sixth among the industries of the world. About 500,000 persons are directly or indirectly interested in the sale and manufacture of candy.

"The candy business had enjoyed a period of prosperity, but like all other trades it has been unnatural and it is now in a sort of transitory stage," Mr. Klein said.

"When prohibition looked like a certainty it became common talk that the best business to go into was candy. This brought to the trade a great many people who knew absolutely nothing about the business, but they took a chance nevertheless, and capital was readily obtainable for a candy enterprise.

"The influx of newcomers and inexperienced men caused a disturbance which is still a factor that hurts the candy business. While this was quite bad, the candy manufacturer was confronted with another serious proposition, that of co-ordinating the steadily increasing cost of raw material with the price he could obtain for his product.

"The penny goods man had first tried to make his piece smaller, and did so by degrees, until it got to a point where he could not consistently ask 1 cent for it. Then he turned to the problem of placing it at 2 cents, but the kiddies would not pay it.

"The package goods manufacturer was also in a peculiar position. At one time, not so long ago, you could buy a nice package of chocolates at 80 cents a pound. In fact, the firm which manufactured the 80-cent chocolates was looked upon as making a high-class candy. This went up to $1 and then $1.20 and then to a point where the average man could not buy a decent box of chocolates for less than $2 or $2.50.

"Sugar, the most important item, dropped from 20 cents in August to 8½ cents, the price announced by the Federal Sugar Refining Company last week. The result is that a great many candy manufacturers have large inventories, purchased in anticipation, and they cannot consistently sell their goods at a price based upon the cost of these materials.

"The candy manufacturer has another difficulty, and that is the cancellation practice. When an order of silks or cotton goods is cancelled the goods can be put away, but not so with candy, which is perishable.

"The candy business is bound to reach its normal level in time, but I hardly believe that this will be fully developed for one year."

SALVATION ARMY PRAISED.

Noted Men at Mass Meeting in Honor of Gen. Bramwell Booth.

General Bramwell Booth, British Salvation Army leader, was the guest and chief speaker at a mass meeting in the Lexington Theatre yesterday afternoon. Major Gen. Charles F. Summerall, commander of the First Division, U. S. A., acting as Chairman, praised the Salvation Army for the work it did in the World War, and other tributes were paid by the Prime Minister of Newfoundland, Richard A. Squires, who said he had two Salvation Army members in his Cabinet, and by George Gordon Battle.

General Booth said that the Salvation Army now operates in sixty-four countries and in thirty-eight languages.

"We now have 2,300 officers," he said, "and are working in over 1,600 places. Our greatest field now is in the non-Christian countries. One of the last wishes of my father, William Booth [founder of the Salvation Army], was that we establish ourselves in China, and that has been done during the last two years."

William G. McAdoo, former Secretary of the Treasury, was on the platform and shook hands cordially with General Booth as the latter left for an overflow meeting in the Swedish Methodist Church near by. Others on the platform were Commander Evangeline Booth, leader of the American Salvation Army; the Rev. William T. Manning, rector of Trinity Church; Federal Judge John C. Knox, Rabbi Joseph Silverman, the French Consul General, Gaston Liebert, Supreme Court Justice Mitchell L. Erlanger, Commander W. S. Bainbridge, U. S. N.; Lieut. Col. Reginald S. Barlow and Sheriff David H. Knott.

ICE BREAKS IN MISSOURI.

Within an Hour Stream Rises Five feet and Does Considerable Damage.

BISMARCK, N. D., Nov. 28.—The ice broke in the Missouri River here today and within an hour the stream had risen 5 feet 8 inches, carrying out a large portion of a temporary bridge used while a new bridge is being built. Several workmen had narrow escapes from injury or death.

O. W. Roberts, weather observer, said it was the first time in the history of the local bureau that ice had broken up at this time of the year. The maximum thickness was about nine inches until a week ago, when a spell of unusually warm weather set in.

Fears were expressed that live stock herds in the river bottoms might be caught in the sudden rise.

Hose Wagon Sidewiped and Hurled Fifty Feet by Nostrand Avenue Street Car.

MOTORMAN IS ARRESTED

Lieut. C. J. Fagan Taken Unconscious to Hospital With Broken Ribs and Internal Hurts.

Six firemen were injured, two seriously, when a Nostrand Avenue trolley car sidewiped a hose wagon last night at Newkirk Avenue, Brooklyn, and hurled it more than fifty feet through the air. The fire apparatus was racing down Newkirk Avenue from the headquarters of Engine Company 255 at Rogers Avenue and Avenue F, and was supposed to have a clear roadway ahead of it so that it could reach a fire at 601 East Thirty-fourth Street.

Although William Neefus, the motorman of the trolley car, said he did not hear the gong on the fire wagon, he was held on a charge of felonious assault. His arrest was ordered by Assistant District Attorney Reuben Wilson.

Lieutenant Cornelius J. Fagan, a fire fighter of more than twenty years' experience, was hurled from his seat with the chauffeur and seriously injured. Unconscious, he was taken to the Kings County Hospital, where surgeons said he had several fractured ribs and probable internal injuries. William Halpin, chauffeur of the apparatus, also was seriously injured, suffering a fractured shoulder and possible internal injuries. The other firemen were William H. Dodge of 550 DeKalb Avenue, Brooklyn; John F. Ladden, 284 East Second Street, Brooklyn; Thomas Clifford, 1,630 Eleventh Avenue, Brooklyn, and a fireman named Russell, whose first name and address the police did not take.

According to the story of the motorman, he stopped his car at Newkirk Avenue, where there is a subway station, and had not travelled more than twenty feet after starting again when the hose wagon shot out of Newkirk Avenue at high speed. Some witnesses denied this version, and said that the car was travelling at high speed on the straight stretch of track and had not stopped for several blocks. Firemen also believed that the car had not stopped at Newkirk Avenue.

The driver swerved the hose wagon to avoid the car, and his action made the accident less serious because the trolley did not strike the apparatus squarely. Instead the heavy wagon was hurled into the air, and some witnesses said that it turned end and end around twice before it flopped down again on its wheels on the northwest corner of the street intersection, more than fifty feet away.

Lieutenant Fagan and the chauffeur were dashed to the pavement, but the other firemen managed to fall off in the roadway, so that their injuries were less serious. Three ambulances were called from the Kings County Hospital because the first report was that several persons had been killed.

Hundreds of persons were attracted by the sound of the impact, and among them were priests from the Roman Catholic Church of St. Jerome. They helped to care for the wounded until the ambulances arrived. Windows were smashed in the car, but none of the passengers was hurt. The fire was a slight blaze behind a furnace.

LAWES PRAISED BY BOARD.

Prison Commission Reports Improved Conditions at Sing Sing.

The State Prison Commission yesterday made public its report on the conditions at Sing Sing Prison since Major Lewis E. Lawes became warden at the beginning of the year. The Commission is headed by John S. Kennedy, and the inspection was carried out by Commissioner Charles S. Rogers and Secretary John F. Tremain. The report commends Major Lawes and states that many improvements and desirable changes have been made in the prison. It says:

"The exterior and interior of the buildings have been repainted, several old shacks have been pulled down and various obsolete buildings have been or are in process of being removed. The north end of the yard is being cleaned up for the athletic field. A new fire escape has been put on the hospital and chapel, and in the washroom eight shower baths have been installed. The part of the cell block from which 300 cells were torn down is being used for vocational school purposes. The schools include automobile, barber, art, telegraph and tailoring classes. In the hospital a new electric elevator has been installed.

"The inmates are at work on a concrete road, sixteen feet wide, from the Secor Road in the village to the prison. The net earnings of the industrial departments for the recent year showed a gain of $50,000, and among the industries are shoes, brushes, mattresses, printing and sheet metal. Night classes are held three times a week and all illiterates are compelled to attend school."

POACHING PLOT EXPOSED.

New Jersey Fire Warden and Four Companions Arrested.

Special to The New York Times.

CHATSWORTH, N. J., Nov. 28.—Charged with wholesale violation of game laws, George Inman, a State Fire Warden in Shamong Township, and four companions involved in the killing of deer out of season have been arrested by State Game Warden Charles C. Morton. Venison from five deer hidden in beds, under wood piles and haystacks was found by Morton, and the defendants, confronted with this and other evidence collected by detectives in an investigation covering nearly a year, paid fines of $100 and costs each for having the venison in their possession, while charges that would increase the fines from $400 to $600 each are still pending.

Game authorities say the poaching was the boldest that has come to their notice in recent years, and they allege that Inman as a Fire Warden used his knowledge of the woods and runs of the deer to lead parties on deer killing expeditions out of season.

With George Inman in the violations was William Inman, a constable, also arrested and fined. Other defendants who admitted their guilt and were fined at the hearing conducted by Justice of the Peace John Throckmorton were Edward Ford, Elmer Inman and Frank Inman.

OBSERVE POLICE MEMORIAL.

400 Jewish Members of Force Hear Dr. Silverman's Address.

Religion was pictured as the foundation stone upon which rests civilized society by the Rev. Dr. Joseph Silverman, rabbi of Temple Emanu-el, in his sermon yesterday at the annual memorial service in the temple for deceased Jewish members of the Police Department. Acting Commissioner John A. Leach was at the head of 400 members of the department who attended.

Rabbi A. Blum, Jewish police chaplain, delivered an address; the Rev. Dr. S. Schlager chanted the prayer for the dead, and the congregation sang "The Star-Spangled Banner."

"Civilization is born of education and religion," said Dr. Silverman. "Law and order depend absolutely for their enforcement upon religion. If the great bulk of the people were not law-abiding 10,000 police could not control six millions."

Red Terror and Green
By RICHARD DAWSON

A study of the growth of the society which under the control of an anarchist labor element has become a wealthy international revolutionary organization, the western wing of Leninism. It is a story of vital interest to those Americans who want the truth about Ireland of to-day. The Boston Transcript calls it "a timely, excellent guide book to the present meaning and purpose of Sinn Fein." The Detroit Sunday News says: "Upon the questions that are agitating Ireland it sheds a light that brings out facts in an astonishing way." $2.50

BUTLER MAKES PLEA FOR SANE EDUCATION

CITES LACK OF GREAT POET

HAS NO FLOATING DEBT

But Needs an Additional Capital Sum of $30,000,000 to Do Its Work Well, Report Says.

A call to education "to get back upon the path of constructive progress" is sounded by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler in the President's annual report to the trustees of Columbia University, made public yesterday. He analyzes causes for the oft-expressed opinion that higher education, as well as education in general, is not fulfilling its mission at present.

Man has become an egotist, denying God and thinking himself his own god, President Butler asserts, so that unrest, dissatisfaction and disorder have followed. He asserts that it is time to abandon these new-found, fallacious doctrines and get back to the observance of everlasting doctrines, and that it is the duty of the schools and universities to lead the way back to sanity.

Telling of Columbia's plans for following "the path of constructive progress," President Butler says that Columbia University is "in a more satisfactory condition that ever before in its history," and that "the corporation, for the first time in many years, is without floating debt." Rapid progress has been made toward solution of educational problems, and no "vexatious questions of discipline" have arisen, he says.

"A reserve fund is being accumulated at the rate of $100,000 annually to liquidate at maturity the bonded indebtedness incurred in the purchase and development of the site on Morningside Heights," continues the report. "The several corporations included in the university's educational system hold and administer property that may be conservatively valued at $72,000,000, $35,000,000 of which has been added by gift or bequest during the last twenty years. The annual budget appropriations now amount to approximately $6,500,000, a sum greater than that raised and spent annually by any one of twenty States.

Calls Columbia "A Giant in Bonds."

"Though a giant, Columbia University is a giant in bonds. It is now doing everything which its present resources make possible. To provide needed buildings for classrooms, for laboratories and for residence, to make possible the plans for the Medical School, to care properly for the buildings and grounds, and to undertake those well-matured projects which have been described in previous years, an additional capital sum of not less than $30,000,000 is required. * * *

"Building costs remain excessive and are not likely to decline suddenly, or indeed greatly, for some time to come. The practical problem becomes, therefore, almost insolvable. It is highly injudicious to erect non-commercial buildings at present high costs, and yet the University's urgent needs must somehow be met. An irresistible force seems to have met an immovable body, despite the logicians."

Telling of the establishment of the Students' Commons and of the plans of the University medical officer for overseeing the health of officers and students, the report says:

"Columbia has gotten far away from the notion that its only responsibility toward its students is to provide them with scholarly instruction. Mental and physical health, comfortable housing and good food come before either text books or laboratories as educational instrumentalities."

The report points to the record attendance at Columbia and to the fact that the largest increases in the last few years have been in the Summer session and the department of extension teaching, each of which comprises about one-third of the total attendance.

Turning from a discussion of Columbia to education in general, President Butler writes:

Results of Present-Day Education.

"It would be idle to ignore the fact that there is widespread public dissatisfaction with the results of present-day education. Horace Greeley's famous classification of college graduates with horned cattle is too often quoted with approving sarcasm. The mounting cost of education, both tax-supported and other, and its diverse competing forms, are increasingly attracting unfavorable public attention and increasingly arousing sharp public criticism.

"The qualifications of those who teach are not always spoken of with approbation. In the past it has been usual to assume that whatever is done in the name of education, like that which is done in the name of philanthropy or religion, is of necessity well and deservingly done and is to be supported without murmur. There are, however, too many signs that education does not satisfactorily educate to justify or even to insure a longer continuance of this uncritical acquiescence.

"The ruling passion just now is not to know and to understand, but to get ahead, to overturn something, to apply in ways that bring material advantage some bit of informtion or some acquired skill. Both school and college have in large part taken their minds off the true business of education, which is to prepare youth to live, and have fixed upon them something which is very subordinate, namely, how to prepare youth to make a living.

"We are doubtless passing through a period of reaction in education which will spend itself, as periods of reaction have so often spent themselves before. For a quarter of a century past American educational practice has been steadily losing its hold upon guiding principle and has therefore increasingly come to float and drift about upon the tide of mere opinion, without standards, without purpose and without insight.

"The little red schoolhouse of the generation that followed the Civil War, with its wretchedly poor equipment but with an earnest and devoted teacher who laid stress upon character-building and upon the fundamentals of intellectual training, did more for the American people than does many a costly and well-equipped educational palace such as may be seen in any part of the United States today. It is as discouraging as it is startling to find Henry James as late as 1913 describing the college town which he knew best as 'utterly arid and vacuous.'

Great Voices of the Spirit Stilled.

"The decline in educational power is primarily the result of a widely influential and wholly false philosophy of education which has operated to destroy the excellence of the American school and college, as these existed a generation ago, without putting anything in its place. It has been dinned into our ears that all subjects are of equal educational value, and that it matters not what one studies, but only how he studies it. This doctrine has destroyed the standard of value in education, and its practical application is making us a widely instructed but an uncultivated and undisciplined people.

"Under such conditions the mob spirit becomes increasingly powerful. The demagogue, the persistent and plausible self-seeker and those who possess or can command the large sums of money needed to advertise themselves throughout the land occupy the largest place in the public eye and actually come to think of themselves and be thought of as representative Americans. It is not surprising that at least three-fourths of the best ability and character in the United States remains in hiding so far as public knowledge and public service are concerned.

"It is significant, too, that in this period of vigorous and able-bodied reaction the world should be without a poet, without a philosopher and without a notable religious leader. The great voices of the spirit are all stilled just now, while the mad passion for gain and for power endeavors to gratify itself through the odd device of destroying what has already been gained or accomplished.

Dr. Butler asserts that the grade schools have been seized by "all sorts of enterprises that have their origin in emotionalism, in ignorance or in mere vanity," and that "the secondary schools and the colleges have very largely abdicated their places as leaders in modern life and have become the plaything of whatever temporary and passing influences may operate upon them."

Ineffectiveness of Teaching.

"Throughout, elementary school, high school and college teachers are too often not teachers at all, but preachers or propagandists for some doctrine of their own liking," he continues. "One would think that the business of teaching was sufficiently simple and sufficiently important to be kept unconfused with other forms of influence; but such has not been the case. Very many teachers are preachers or propagandists first and teachers afterward.

"It is in conditions like these that one must look for an explanation of the costly ineffectiveness which is so sharply charged against present-day education in the United States. We are told that boys and girls, young men and young women, spend years apparently in study and then leave school or college without a trained intelligence, without any standards of appreciation in art or in morals, with wretched manners, with slovenly speech, and without capacity to approach a new problem dispassionately or to reason about it clearly.

"It is asserted that we devote untold skill and labor to the teaching of French, of Spanish and of German, and yet the high school or college graduate who can speak or write any one of these languages correctly and freely, or read them save with difficulty, is rare indeed; that for fifty years we have poured out money without stint for the teaching of the natural and experimental sciences, and have provided costly laboratories and collections to make that teaching practical, yet the result, so far as giving a general command of scientific method or general knowledge of scientific facts is concerned, is quite negligible; that school and college students spend years upon the study of history and yet few really know any history; that these students are uniformly taught to read and are guided toward reading that which is worth while, yet it is clear that the greater part of their reading is of that which is unworthy to be read.

"More criticism than was ever leveled against the study of Latin, Greek and mathematics based upon the meagre practical results obtained, can be repeated with equal force against those newer subjects of school and college study which have so largely displaced Latin, Greek and mathematics."

Mine Sweeper Goes Ashore; Crew of 62 Is Saved

PLYMOUTH, Mass., Nov. 28.—The United States mine sweeper Swan went ashore late today one-half mile north of Coast Guard Station No. 30, near Gunet Light. The crew of sixty-two men was landed safely by breeches buoy. A northeast gale with very heavy seas prevailed.

The Swan was sent here from Portsmouth, N. H., to attempt salvage operations on an oil barge which went ashore near here last week. Lieutenant Joseph K. Konieczhy was in command, and the engineering officer aboard was Ensign H. L. Duffy.

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—The destroyer Mahan was ordered tonight to go to the assistance of the mine sweeper Swan, which went ashore near Plymouth late today.

ALLIED WAR VETERANS FORM WORLD COUNCIL

Body Formed in Paris Is to Preserve Battle Comradeship—United States in It.

PARIS, Nov. 28 (Associated Press).—An international council binding together the war veterans' associations of the allied countries was organized here today by delegations representing France, Great Britain, the United States, Italy, Belgium, Greece, Jugoslavia and Czechoslovakia, and was joined later by Portugal, Poland and Rumania. The council will be composed of one member from each country and will probably meet in Paris as often as necessary.

The organization contemplates membership of all national veterans' associations. The underlying idea is to preserve, particularly in time of stress, the unity that existed among the Allies during the war and carry on the comradeship in various ways, notably by international membership cards, an international Decoration Day and the exchange of information respecting disabled soldiers and the widows and children of soldiers.

It is expected that the American Decoration Day will be adopted generally.

The plan of organization, which will be submitted for approval at a full meeting tomorrow, specifies that the council will be directly represented in each allied country by two veterans of that country appointed by the council and approved by the veteran organization of that country, one of these veterans to be accredited to the Government of that country and the other to the press. They will simply be channels for the transmission of memorials formulated by the council. Such memorials must be approved by the veterans' association of that particular country and must be of a friendly nature, never threatening.

The veterans of the United States were represented today by seven members of the American Legion posts in Paris and London chosen by the national commander. They included Colonel O. N. Solbert, Military Attaché at London.

The Greek delegation was unable to take any active part in the proceedings, two of its members being Venizelists and the other two royalists. They were unable to agree.

BRITISH WON'T LET GREEKS CUT ARMY

Also Insist That Their Cabinet Include No Enemies of the Allies.

VIEWS IMPARTED TO FRANCE

Curzon Hands Memorandum Embodying Them to Leygues, Who Leaves London Today.

LONDON, Nov. 28 (Associated Press).—The British Government will insist that the Greek Army shall be maintained at its present strength, and that the Rhallis Cabinet shall not include men viewed with disfavor by the Allies.

The foregoing views are set forth in a memorandum which Earl Curzon, Secretary for Foreign Affairs, has handed to the French Premier, M. Leygues, for perusal by the French Cabinet when M. Leygues returns to Paris tomorrow.

Great Britain disapproves the return of Constantine to the Greek throne being made the subject of a formal protest, but, nevertheless, wishes that the British views shall be emphasized to the new Greek Government. This is a firmer attitude than the British Government held a few days ago, and it is believed in conference circles that it will be agreeable to the French Government. It is further interpreted as meaning that Great Britain at present does not favor revision of the Turkish Peace Treaty.

It is expected now that Premier Leygues will return to London on Thursday for a resumption of the conferences.

The Italian Foreign Minister, Count Sforza, arrived in London this evening. He was met at the station by Earl Curzon and the Italian Ambassador.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—Count Sforza, the Italian Foreign Minister, who left Rome Friday evening for London to take part in the consultations which have been begun by Premier Leygues of France and Premier Lloyd George of Great Britain, arrived in Paris at 11 o'clock this morning. He went directly to the Elysée Palace, where he had a long talk with President Millerand. When this was concluded the Count resumed his journey to London, leaving here at 1 o'clock this afternoon.

In an interview with the Temps Count Sforza remarked that he had vainly argued alone at Spa for easier and more just peace terms for the Turks, not only in the interest of world peace, but in the interest of Greece. He added that he was going to London in the same frame of mind.

ATHENS, Nov. 27.—The Government has dispatched a regiment of infantry to Crete. It is officially stated that no troubles have broken out in Crete, but that a slight effervescence exists in some villages, and that the troops have been sent merely as a matter of precaution.

FRENCH ARE OPTIMISTIC.

Correspondents Report Leygues Pleased With London Conferences.

By WALTER DURANTY.

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—A curious feature of all the allied conferences that have been held this year has been the marked optimism of French newspaper correspondents during and immediately after the conferences which has been in contrast with the equally marked pessimism of French comment a few weeks later. This was the case at San Remo, Brussels, Hythe, Boulogne and even at Spa.

It is so again in London. Premier Leygues is declared to be very well satisfied with his reception and the conversations to date. A captious critic might wonder why. So far there has been no decision reached at all in London, except about the Upper Silesian plebiscite.

There, it is true, the French have obtained the superficial concession that Germans of Silesian origin not now inhabiting the Province shall not invade it en masse—they are said to number more than 200,000—on the day the natives vote. Perhaps they will come later, but more probably they will vote in various German centres to be specified subsequently. This is no real satisfaction to the French, who wanted to prohibit them from voting altogether, and whose plea that their invasion en masse might cause disorder was only directed to that end. Allowing them to vote puts Polish defeat in Silesia beyond question, which is no feather in the cap of French diplomacy.

Regarding Greece nothing has been done save the transmission to the French of Earl Curzon's note rebutting the French arguments for the revision of the Turkish treaty to Greek disadvantage in favor of the Turkish Nationalists. The British are determined to "wait and see" before they decide on a course of action in the Near East.

Although the Temps tonight prints a statement by the Italian Foreign Minister, Count Sforza, made when he was on his way through Paris—where he was received by President Millerand today—to the effect that he has always been in favor of negotiations with Mustapha Kemal, it is common knowledge that Italy is opposed to Venizelos and for Constantine and most unlikely to favor the French attempt to throw Greece overboard in Kemal's favor before the new Greek régime has had a chance to show what it can do.

Even more important general questions, notably those of reparations and Russia, have not been touched upon in London, despite the keen desire of France to reachin an understanding with Great Britain about both.

It is announced tonight that M. Leygues will return to Paris Monday for twenty-four hours to take part in the Chamber debate on relations with the Vatican; but even if he spends the rest of the week in London it is hard to see how anything more than the Greco-Turkish question can be settled.

The only real basis for the optimism of the French correspondents appears to be that there is a tone of cordiality in the present Franco-British conversations which was painfully lacking during the last months of the relations between Premier Lloyd George and Premier Millerand.

The gifts announced yesterday were:

Mr. and Mrs. James Speyer, $5,000; Hallgarten & Co., National Sugar Refining Company, each $1,500; James H. Post, John T. Pratt, George D. Pratt, Mrs. John T. Pratt, Mrs. John Stewart Kennedy, American Exchange National Bank, Walter Jennings, Cornelius N. Bliss Jr. and John Sloane, $1,000 each.

KING RECEIVES LEWIS NIXON.

Albert of Belgium Gives Him a Special Audience in Brussels.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 27.—Lewis Nixon, former Public Service Commissioner of New York, was received by King Albert at the palace this afternoon, having a special audience of three-quarters of an hour.

Mr. Nixon was presented by Brand Whitlock, the American Minister.

Harding Sails from Cristobal for Norfolk; Due to Arrive Saturday; Will Visit Capital

CRISTOBAL, Canal Zone, Nov. 28.—President-elect Harding left the Canal Zone for the United States this afternoon after a week's visit in which he included an intimate study of the commercial and military advantages and needs of the waterway and exchanged assurances of friendly relations with the Republic of Panama.

The steamer Pastores, bound for Norfolk by way of Kingston, Jamaica, left Cristobal late today with the President-elect and members of his party aboard. The vessel will reach Norfolk Saturday. Senator Harding will proceed to Washington before his return to Marion.

His last day in the Canal Zone was spent quietly resting. Mr. Harding completed yesterday his inspection of the canal with a visit to the fortifications at its eastern entrance. As in the examination of the defenses at the Pacific end of the canal, the President-elect took great interest in small details, asking many questions to familiarize himself with the strategic situation.

During a visit to the naval air station at Cocosolo, Mrs. Harding accepted an invitation to make a flight in a seaplane, spending fifteen minutes over Limon Bay in one of the largest NC type planes used by the navy. The plane attained a height of about one thousand feet, and though it was her first experience at flying, Mrs. Harding appeared to enjoy it immensely.

Last night the President-elect was the guest of honor at a dinner given by the merchants of Colon and Cristobal. The affair was the occasion for renewal of expressions of comity between the United States and Panama and pledges of co-operation to promote particularly the commercial value of the canal.

D'ANNUNZIO PUTS COUNCILS IN CHARGE

Replaces High Fiume Army Commanders With Younger Officers.

CALLS IT DEMOCRATIZATION

All Councilors Have Equal Rank, but All Decisions Are Subject to His Veto.

FIUME, Nov. 27 (Associated Press).—Gabriele d'Annunzio has effected a drastic reorganization of the Fiuman Army administration, abolishing the high commands and substituting "councils" for them.

"This new plan, which is a product of the imagination of our commander, will democratize the entire army system," said one of d'Annunzio's staff to the correspondent tonight. "It is not Bolshevist," he added.

D'Annunzio, under the new plan, retains the title of "Commandante," and the councils will be subordinate to him. There are councils, respectively, of operations, provisioning, recreation, engineering tactics and other army affairs. All members of the councils will be equal in rank, although retaining the grades they were entitled to in the regular Italian Army when in the field. All the members of the councils are chosen by d'Annunzio and all their actions must be sanctioned by him.

It was the insistence of d'Annunzio on the adoption of this latest scheme of his which caused his disagreement with General Cecherini, his Commander in Chief, who deserted the soldier-poet Friday together with a number of officers of the higher grades. The d'Annunzian army's leading places are now filled with Captains and Lieutenants, who are manifesting extreme pride in their new responsibilities as directors of operations, planners of field movements and originators of new tactics.

In consequence the guns are thundering daily from both the land and sea batteries, where the youthful commanders are trying out their own systems of warfare and experimenting in handling troops and warships.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Nov. 27.—The Chamber's almost unanimous approval of the Treaty of Rapallo has apparently closed the discussion of the Adriatic question. The Chamber, like the public, realized the impossibility of obtaining larger concessions for Italy.

The Tribuna, commenting on the ratification of the treaty, says:

"It is not a case of asking Italians to climb the Capitoline Hill to thank the gods, as in the time of the Romans, because the gods no longer inhabit the once sacred summit; but it would be well for Italians to interrupt for a few minutes the feverish round of life to ponder the five years which have passed and compare the map of the Italy of 1866 with that of today, after the Treaty of Rapallo. On the eve of war Italy was exposed to all invasions. Today, unless new means of warfare are invented which can destroy mountains, the danger of invasion exists no longer.

"Before the war the Alps were split up to the north and east; today they are solid, and Italy is protected from the Brenner Pass to Mount Nevoso. Those Italians who for centuries were under foreign rule re-enter their family. The Italian State, secure within its boundaries, no longer needs in its political and economic life aid from other States which up to the eve of war dictated terms through the threat of invasion. Italy has regained her complete liberty and independence. Italy need no longer fear any one except herself. If she is not her own enemy she need fear no external enemy. Her fate rests in her own hands."

EARTHQUAKE ON COAST.

It Is Felt in Various Degrees From Portland, Ore., to Spokane, Wash.

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 28.—An earthquake felt in various degrees of mildness from here to Spokane, Wash., was experienced early today. At Hood River, Ore., it was strong enough to awaken sleepers and to cause alarm to the villagers.

At Spokane it was said to have been a "pronounced earthquake" of a duration of ten minutes.

SPOKANE, Wash., Nov. 28.—An earthquake which rocked houses and awakened sleepers was experienced here at 3:30 to 3:40 o'clock this morning. The seismograph at Gonzaga University reported the radius of the shock to be about 300 miles.

So forceful was it that patients at a local hospital were awakened when the beds and picture frames were jarred. Reports from Leavenworth, Yakima, Colfax and other inland cities tell of shocks of various degrees of mildness.

Pay Tribute to Magellan.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Nov. 28.—Tribute was paid last night to Fernando Magellan, the discoverer of the Straits of Magellan, in the Municipal Theatre. The occasion was the celebration of the fourth centenary of the discovery of the straits. The Minister of Public Instruction, Lorenzo Montt, and the Portuguese Ambassador, Senhor d'Olivera, extolled the exploits of Magellan. The services today included a Te Deum at the cathedral.

GERMAN CABINET ACCUSED OF WASTE

HUGE SUMS TO KAISER

Extra Pay Given to His Revolutionary Troops by Kapp Continued by Defense Minister.

By GEORGE RENWICK.

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—Discussion on the budgets of various departments reveals astounding information regarding the way in which the German Government has been throwing, is throwing and intends to throw its money away.

The Admiralty, for instance, is going to spend 120,000,000 marks on the building of a small cruiser. Die Freiheit asks the reason why. "You cannot even play at naval war with such a ship," it says. "Even the Republic of Liberia would not be afraid of it."

One hundred and ninety-one millions are to be spent on munitions, weapons and war material, according to the army budget. When yesterday a Socialist proposal was carried to cut down the figure, originally 256,000,000, there was, according to newspaper reports, a great sensation on the Government bench, and Gessler, the Defense Minister, said this economy would cause the War Department great trouble, but Gessler's department has curious ideas of economy and here is one of the most remarkable.

During the Kapp-Putsch days the soldiers received 7 marks extra pay per day to keep them on or bring them to the side of the revolutionaries. This payment was antedated by a fortnight as from March 1. It was also made to numerous "wild corps" of reactionary troops outside the constitutional establishment. The whole sum amounted to 1,700,000 marks daily. After the Kappists had gone, continuation of this extra pay to all troops who had sided with the Kappists and to others as well was sanctioned by General von Seeckt, Commander in Chief, and by Gessler. This payment continued till the end of June, so that this reactionary bribe to the troops cost the country over 200,000,000 marks.

At the end of June the work of drawing up budgets and of budget discussions will have to be faced. Gessler has now laconically announced that he regards it as reasonable to cease this extra payment.

The Army Budget Committee made an effort to reduce the number of army musicians, but in vain, said a worthy Prussian Baron.

"People are crying aloud for military music."

"No," replied a Socialist member, "they are crying aloud for bread."

As evidence of the democratic nature of the German Republic's 100,000 army, it may be stated that only 170 out of 4,000 officers are rankers.

But outside the budgets, expenditure and waste go on. It is officially stated that the ex-Kaiser already has received 52,250,000 marks, "while so many German children suffer from underfeeding and illness because there is no food and medicine for them, the ex-Kaiser leads a life of comfort and luxury," declares Freiheit bitterly.

To the ex-Crown Prince, as I have reported already, property of the value of many millions of marks has been given and every effort is being made to push through a bill which will ratify the ex-Kaiser's claim to property worth 1,100,000,000 marks.

In the midst of all this riot of waste and spending a new appeal has just been launched on behalf of the country's starving children. Heaven knows they need all the help that can be brought them during the Winter, which promises to be a severe one. Hundreds of thousands of families have no house to live in, the hospitals are next door to shutting down, food profiteering has reached even more scandalous proportions, but the Government has only thought for every scatter-brained extravagance.

KAISERIN FAILING AGAIN.

Bad Heart Attack and High Temperature Alarm Her Doctors.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 28.—A dispatch from Doorn says that although the doctors reported an improvement in the ex-Kaiserin's condition during the week they were greatly alarmed by a bad heart attack, with features of suffocation, last night and a temperature of 104 degrees this morning.

The Duke of Brunswick and Prince Oscar have been obliged to remain at Doorn. Prince Eitel Frederick and Prince Adalbert arrived late last night. The Governor of Utrecht called this morning.

DOORN, Holland, Nov. 28.—A turn for the worse in the condition of the former German Empress occurred late today, it was learned this evening.

ESCHERICH'S GUARDS BANNED IN PRUSSIA

BAVARIAN PREMIER'S PLEA

Von Kahr Says Farmers Founded the Einwohnerwehr to Protect Their Homes From Reds.

Copyright, 1920, by The New York Times Company.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—Von Kahr, the Bavarian Prime Minister, came to Berlin today on a flying visit to confer with Chancellor Fehrenbach and State Secretary Simons regarding disarmament of the so-called Einwohnerwehr, which the Bavarians themselves would translate "Home defenders." Civil guards is perhaps the most accurate interpretation, and as civil guards the Entente is demanding their dissolution.

There is besides this Einwohnerwehr another military organization in Bavaria named Orgesch, an abbreviation of the word "organization" and the name of its founder, Escherich, the Bavarian Master Forester and a doctor of law. While the Einwohnerwehr is confined to the Bavarian frontier, the Orgesch has been spreading to many parts of Germany, thanks to Dr. Escherich's energetic propaganda. Escherich is now on a propaganda trip in North Germany and after visiting Berlin journeyed to Dresden, trying to convince the authorities there that his organization's only task and purpose is to help the authorities maintain law and order and suppress any revolt, whether Radical or royalist.

However, the Berlin authorities do not trust Escherich, and have prohibited his organization in Prussia. In Dresden, State Secretary of the Home Office Kuehn told Escherich that, while not doubting his good intention, it was undeniable that in Saxony the Orgesch had the appearance of a secret league for the restitution of the monarchy, many members having already been compromised in the Kapp adventure, and that it was hardly likely that Escherich could prevent his organization making common cause with the monarchists, once the ball was started in that direction.

The Democratic and Socialist press has again denounced the Orgesch as a monarchist military instrument pure and simple, and its leader, Dr. Escherich, as an arch conspirator, who under the mask of patriotism, is preparing the return of a Hohenzollern or Wittelsbach. These same organs claim that the Bavarian Einwohnerwehr is another horse of the same color.

THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent met Von Kahr today just before his departure and asked him why the Bavarian Einwohnerwehr should not be abolished.

"The Bavarian Einwohnerwehr has absolutely no political character," replied the Prime Minister, "and cannot be abolished unless the country is to be delivered to Bolshevism and Spartacism. Our Einwohnerwehr originated during the terrible days of the Spartacide reign beginning in 1919. Bavaria has some 20,000 hamlets consisting of not more than two or three farm houses. Nineteen of these became the defenseless prey of the Spartacides, who would arrive in autos, surround the hamlet, take cattle, money, horses, and if resistance were offered even the lives of the farmer family and disappear. There was and is now no protection against such raids, and that is why our Bavarian farmers armed themselves, forming troops of defense pledged to come to each other's aid in all circumstances."

"But that cannot apply to Munich and other cities where you have military and other police, yet this in the cities that the Einwohnerwehr is strongest," it was argued.

"Nominally," answered Herr Kahr, "Bavaria is entitled to keep about 15,000 military police, but having only recently purged their ranks of more or less disguised Bolshevist and Sparticide elements there are only about 8,000 left. You will admit that this number is unable to resist any new anarchist onslaught.

"In consequence of Wrangel's defeat Bolshevism will again raise its head, the Polish-Russian war will revive under some pretense, and the Red danger will again knock at Germany's door, and in Bavaria at least, if not elsewhere in Germany, there will be those who would open the door wide for the Russian destroyer, especially since we must suffer a period of starvation caused by short supplies and ever-increasing lack of work. There will then be nothing to save Bavaria from utter destruction but the Einwohnerwehr."

"How many members are there in the Einwohnerwehr?"

"There are 190,000 and our Government is not powerful enough to disarm them even if France threatens to occupy the Ruhr district. We are simply powerless and cannot persuade the Bavarian peasant to surrender his rifle and be helplessly shot in the next outbreak."

"How about Dr. Escherich's organization, which originated and flourishes in Bavaria?"

"Dr. Escherich is a private person and his organization, so far as we know, has only the character of any ordinary singing society, or perhaps of Masonry. The Bavarian Government cannot interfere with him as long as he keeps within the law. The activity of Dr. Escherich or his organization outside Bavaria is no concern of ours."

Premier von Kahr refused to discuss whether Dr. Escherich was working in the interest of the Wittelsbachs or Hohenzollerns.

FRENCH HONOR PILGRIMS.

Protestant Historical Society Holds Celebration in Paris.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—The French Protestant Historical Society today celebrated the tercentenary of the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers in America. The ceremony was held in a Protestant church, which was decorated with the Stars and Stripes and the tricolor.

The speakers, who included Dr. O. W. Goodrich, pastor of the American Church in Paris, told of France's part in the early history of the American Republic through the pilgrimage of the Huguenots. The assemblage sang "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "The Marseillaise."

ADMIRAL MAYO WILL RETIRE.

Former Commander of Atlantic Fleet Reaches Age Limit on Dec. 8.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Rear Admiral Henry T. Mayo, former Commander in Chief of the Atlantic Fleet and now Chairman of the special naval board investigating the conduct of United States marines in Haiti, who goes on the retired list on Dec. 8, is being retired automatically for age in accordance with law. On that date Admiral Mayo will reach the age of 64 years.

His statutory retirement will result in the transfer of Rear Admiral Ashley H. Robertson, now holding temporary commission, to the list of permanent Rear Admirals.

READING IRON STRIKE ENDS.

Men Accept Offer and Plants Idle Five Months Will Reopen.

READING, Pa., Nov. 28.—The Reading Iron Company will resume operations in all its plants tomorrow after an idleness of five months. A majority of the strikers voted today to accept the company's offer of $16.25 per ton for puddling. Over 3,000 men employed in the plants in this city, Pottstown, Birdsboro, Columbia and Danville are affected.

The company has agreed to re-employ all the men, but will not dismiss any of those who remained at work during the long strike. The plants are expected to be in full operation within a week.

New Records Are Set In Pacific Coast Flight

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 28.—Eddie Rickenbacker, American ace, flew from Los Angeles to San Francisco today in 3 hours and 10 minutes, said to be a record for a northward flight over the 341 miles. He bucked a heavy wind all the way and made a forced landing at San José for gasoline.

A mark of 3 hours and 1 minute was set for the southward flight over the straight line distance yesterday by Lieutenant E. C. Batten, an army flier.

WOULD HALT TRAINS AND MAIL ON SUNDAY

Reformers Want Bill Prohibiting All Interstate Traffic on the Sabbath.

FAVOR HEAVY PENALTIES

For Full Day's Rest for All Federal Employes and All Corporations Under a Federal Charter.

Special to The New York Times.

"2. It shall be unlawful for any person or corporation to operate on Sunday any freight or passenger train or mail train, or any other train or part of a train, in the carrying on of interstate commerce, trade or traffic of any kind.

"3. It shall be unlawful for any post office to be open on Sunday or to deliver mail on Sunday; it shall be unlawful for any mail to be carried or delivered on Sunday by any employe of the United States, whether in city or country.

"4. It shall be unlawful for any newspaper or other paper or publication published or purporting to be published on Sunday to be received, carried or delivered as mail to any agency of the United States, in any post office or over any route under the jurisdiction of the United States.

"5. It shall be unlawful for any person or corporation engaged in interstate commerce or carrying on any business or vocation under the laws or with the permission or license from the United States or any of its agencies to do or carry on any ordinary vocation or business on Sunday, the purpose of this act being to express our national determination to honor the Sabbath day and keep it holy, as God commands, thereby securing for all that opportunity for spiritual and bodily refreshment decreed by our Lord for the happiness of all men and the safety of all nations.

"6. Any person who does any of the things above declared unlawful, or who procures or aids another in doing of the things above declared unlawful, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and punished upon conviction by due process of law by a fine not under $500 or over $10,000 for each offense and by imprisonment for not over six months, in the discretion of the court.

"7. And any corporation which does or aids in doing those forbidden things shall upon conviction be fined not less than $1,000 nor more than $100,000 for each offense, and upon conviction a second time for a like offense shall forfeit its charter and franchise and be enjoined from operating in interstate commerce; provided, however, that emergency instances of charity and necessity are not included nor punishable under the provision of this act.

"The Tennessee conference of Sabbath reformers sent this bill to Senator McKellar of Tennessee for introduction. He declined, explaining that the movement should win favor in the States before meriting Federal legislation.

"However, with the Democrats of the South virtually united for national legislation and such Republican leaders as Senators Wesley L. Jones, Washington; Arthur Capper, Kansas; Miles Poindexter, Washington; Governor William C. Sproul and former Governor Martin G. Brumbaugh, Pennsylvania; former Governor Charles S. Osborn, Michigan, and former Governor W. R. Stubbs of Kansas holding office in their organization the leaders of the blue law crusade are hopeful of success."

Methodist Church Bans Actors.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 28.—The theatrical profession falls under the same ban as dancing masters and are undesirable for membership in the Methodist Episcopal Church, asserted Bishop Joseph F. Berry, presiding here at the semi-annual meeting of the House of Bishops, commenting upon a communication received from the Actors' Equity Association of New York, which asked whether the recent edict barring dancing instructors applied to the amusement profession in general.

"Dancing and theatre-going are placed in the same category as games of chance, and both of them are specifically prohibited. Inasmuch as we prohibit these iniquities, we could scarcely be expected to admit to membership those who are responsible for their promotion," Bishop Berry declared.

The Actors' Equity Association, in a communication signed by Frank Gilmore, Executive Secretary, expressed "resentment" at the bishop's action in barring dancing masters. "Does this ban apply to all professional dancers including those on the stage? Are folks in the theatrical profession equally barred from your valued membership?" the communication asks. It adds:

"Dancing masters are our brothers and sisters in the amusement profession, hence injustice done them is also resented by those of the stage. In the name of the theatrical profession, as well as speaking for the dancing masters of the country, the Astors' Equity Association reiterates its indignation at what can only be termed as a Pharisac attitude on the part of any Christian denomination."

Bishop Berry said he considered the communication an "affront."

"The paper has received only silent contempt," asserted Bishop Berry. "No attention whatever has been paid to these people. If they are sane, they give no evidence of it by any of their public declarations. The fact that they would address a communication of this nature to a body like the House of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church would be regarded as very strong evidence, if an effort were made to prove a case of insanity.

"We desire neither advice nor dictation from such a source. Our silence upon the matter is the best evidence of the contempt with which we regard the alleged communication. I doubt if there is a dancing master or actor anywhere in the world who is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. We regard the institutions with which they are identified as directly inimical to the Christian life, and no dancing master or actor could get it without very sincere repentance."

BLUE LAWS OPPOSED BY TRINITY RECTOR

Revival of Puritan Sabbath Would Injure Religion, Says Dr. Manning.

GOD IS NEAR IN JOYS ALSO

Alliance Wants the Church to Be the Only Place to Go and Home the Only Place to Stay.

TO FIGHT SUNDAY BASEBALL

Dr. Bowlby Will Also Ask Transit Companies to Cut Sunday Traffic.

The Rev. Dr. William T. Manning, rector of Trinity Church, in his sermon yesterday took direct issue with the agitation of the Lord's Day Alliance for a restoration of the Puritan Sabbath in the United States. Dr. Manning asserted that the Puritan idea of Sunday was distorted and mistaken, and that its revival now would work a grave injury to religion. He ascribed much of the present laxity on Sunday to reaction from the excessive severity of earlier generations and pleaded that not only should the Church encourage wholesome sports and recreations on Sunday, but its pastors should participate whenever possible. Dr. Manning's sermon seemed to come with a little shock of surprise to some of the older parishioners, but was manifestly welcomed and approved by the younger ones.

"The proposed campaign for strict Sunday laws, if the announcements regarding it are correct," said the rector, "is one of those well-meant but misguided efforts which do harm instead of good to the cause which they are intended to serve. It is impracticable, wrong in principle and based on a narrow and imperfect conception of the Christian religion. Such a method of securing Sunday observance would do far more to drive religion out of the hearts of the people than to draw them toward it."

Would Not Force Religion.

Dr. Manning went on to concede the setting apart of one day in seven for worship and rest as one of the foundations of religion and of civilized life, but said "we have no right to try to compel the religious observance of the day by law." The law, he thought, should safeguard the right of all to freedom from their ordinary occupations and to opportunity for religious observance, if they wished so to use it, and should stop there.

Upon the resurrection of Christ, said Dr. Manning, Christians not only changed the Sabbath from Saturday to Sunday. They changed the idea of the day at the same time from one of severity and restraint to one of freedom and gladness. The Christian church, he said, never had laid down any rules as to Sunday recreations and amusements. It had given the great principle of the Lord's day and had left the application "to our consciences and the circumstances."

Dr. Manning thought that while it was not always easy to draw the line, two simple rules could be applied. Recreation should not be allowed to interfere with worship and there should be no encouragement of those amusements which are commercialized and which needlessly oblige large numbers of persons to work, thus depriving them of their right to Sunday.

"We must bring God near to the people in their pleasures and joys as well as in their sorrows," he concluded. "We must make it clear that the Christian religion does not stand for petty restraints and restrictions and gloom and severity, but for gladness and freedom and all that adds to the goodness of life. It is this which we need to help our young people and to bring them near to God, and not any revival of the Puritan Sunday."

Church and Home Their Aim.

No place to go but church, and no place to stay but home—that about sums up the new blue law program which the Lord's Day Alliance has in preparation, and which it hopes to make a Sunday reality in New York, partly through the enactment of new statutes, partly through more rigid enforcement of existing ones and to some extent through moral suasion.

The Rev. Dr. Harry L. Bowlby, Secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance of the United States, which boasts that after thirty-two years' existence it no longer is in its swaddling clothes, and which claims 16,000,000 members among church communicants and other millions among church adherents, outlined his organization's plans in an interview last night.

Among the things which are to go in this city, if his organization has its way, Dr. Bowlby said, are Sunday baseball, both amateur and professional, as long as it has any commercial aspect; "sacred concerts," which he described as camouflaged frauds; Sunday moving pictures, Sunday cabarets and all sorts of Sunday theatrical performances such as now are flourishing. Baseball and moving pictures, he said, only could be eliminated by enacting new laws. Cabarets, Sunday theatrical performances and sacred concerts would disappear if the present laws were enforced.

Dr. Bowlby said he would send communications at once to the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, the New York Railways and other transit corporations, asking them to curtail Sunday traffic to the limit required to transport the people to and from their legitimate Sunday occupations. Efforts of several years ago to induce the railroads to eliminate Sunday excursions would be renewed.

In ending his discussion, Dr. Bowlby said he wished to express a particular warning to the Jews. "The Jews should not do anything on the Sabbath which would be an offense to their Christian neighbors, as one of their own rabbis told them," said he. "The wise Jew will not attempt to get seven days' business while the Christian is content with six. If he does, he simply is going to kill the goose that laid the golden egg."

METHODISTS FOR BLUE LAWS.

House of Bishops Approves Jersey Lord's Day Alliance Plans.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 28.—A campaign about to be inaugurated by the Lord's Day Alliance of New Jersey for a Puritanical Sunday was approved today by the House of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The program in its tentative state was submitted to the Bishops in session here.

The campaign, if successful, would result in the closing of all stores on Sunday, prohibit the playing of all games, stop the running of trains and the publication of newspapers.

LANDIS DISCUSSES BASEBALL REFORM

Will Be Untiring in Effort to Eliminate Gambling, Says New Arbiter.

ASKS CO-OPERATION OF FANS

Noted Jurist Declares That Even Friendly Wagering at Parks Must Be Frowned Upon.

Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, the newly instituted court of last resort for organized baseball, who came to this city to watch the Army and Navy elevens fight it out at the Polo Grounds on Saturday, retreated to his previously prepared position in Chicago last evening. Before he departed, however, Judge Landis talked with newspaper men and told them something of his musings concerning the steps to be taken for the scraping off of any remaining baseball barnacles and the complete rehabilitation of the professional sport, which was badly bruised by recent revelations, but is now considered convalescent.

The Judge spoke generally rather than specifically of his plans, but his hearers gathered the clear-cut impression that his theories of baseball's needs would be converted into deeds. He said that thus far he was feeling his way along, gathering into his hands the strands of the somewhat disheveled situation.

Rid Game of Gambling.

"The keynote of the entire newly outlined plan," said Judge Landis, "is to rid our great national game of the sinister and oppressive burden of gambling. Untiring effort will certainly effect this, and untiring effort is what we propose to bring to bear. In this essential undertaking we hope and ask for the hearty co-operation of the fans as well as the players.

"In speaking of the fans, I do not refer to such professional gamblers as chance to be also fans. I mean the great army of real lovers of baseball, the hundreds of thousands whose support and confidence are utterly necessary to the success of the game.

"As for the gamblers, they will be attended to with a firm hand. Action as drastic as may be necessary will be taken to keep them away from the ball parks of all the leagues associated with us, and any other needed measures to prevent them from blighting the game in any way will also be adopted.

Against Small Wagers.

"In asking the fans for their aid in our cleansing campaign, I wish to suggest that even such little wagers as are at times laid between friends, who would by no means be catalogued as gamblers, may well be eliminated. I feel that such episodes at the parks, especially at a time when baseball is emerging from shadows cast by gambling, are to be adversely criticised, because of the appearance and the possible impressions gleaned by those observing them.

"Gambling by professionals, as I have stated, will be obliterated as far as the plants of our clubs are concerned. I have found in my judicial career that, in general, the 'honest gambler' is a myth. Professional gambling leads in its train about all the vices and all the crimes that exist. I say this in spite of the fact that I have known of one or two professionals in this field who seemed to have a genuine sense of honor.

"Having been, and still remaining, a fan myself, I share the deep regret of all baseball enthusiasts over that world's series affair of 1919. It will be our effort to operate so thoroughly that further infection will be prevented and that the recollection of that unhappy episode will seem only a bad dream.

To Invoke State Laws.

"Concerning the players implicated, suffice it to say that there is absolutely no chance for any of them to creep back into organized baseball. They will be and will remain outlaws. While it may be that no further fitting punishment will be found possible in certain cases, it is sure that the guilt of some of them at least will be proved.

"Most of the States already have anti-gambling statutes, of greater or less rigor, in effect. These will be invoked wherever needed to help us in our campaign. In other States, not provided with such laws, an effort will be made where it seems necessary to have them enacted."

AWARD TO KANSAS CITY.

A. A. Team Gets Two Players Who Had Been Sold to Columbus.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 28.—George Muehlebach, President of the local American Association Club, received word last night that Kansas City had been awarded E. S. Bennett and James Gross of the Dayton, Florida State League by the National Association. Muehlebach purchased the players last August, he said. Later, Daytona sold the players to the Columbus American Association team, according to Muehlebach, and he filed a protest.

Muehlebach tonight announced that the Cincinnati Nationals would play a training trip series here on April 2 and 3, and that the Chicago Nationals also would play here on April 9 and 10.

BURTSCHERS WINS WALK.

Leads Field of 112 Pedestrians in Ten-Mile Handicap Event.

William S. Burtschers of the home club showed the way to a field of 112 walkers yesterday in the ten-mile handicap walk held by the Long Island City Athletics, over a course in Astoria, L. I. Burtschers, allowed a handicap of twenty minutes, held the lead over the greater part of the journey until entering the last mile. At this point, Ernest Forslund, a clubmate, who was allowed a twenty-two-minute handicap, engaged the leader in a struggle for supremacy which lasted right up to the finish line, where Burtschers completed his journey one second ahead of his rival. The victor's time was 1 hour 28 minutes.

Joseph B. Pearman of the New York A. C., winner of second place for the United States in the Olympic 10,000-meter walk at Antwerp, made the fastest time, covering the distance of about ten miles in 1 hour 16 minutes. The Mercury Footer started from the scratch mark and finished tenth. Inasmuch as this was the first time the course had been traversed by walkers, Pearman's time will stand as a record. Kurt Zulch of the American Walkers Club scored the second fastest time, and Dick Remer, veteran member of the last Olympic team, returned the third fastest.

The conventional "old boys" feature was one of the interesting incidents of the race. The prizes for aged walkers attracted many gray-haired pedestrians. David Lynch of the Pastime A. C., a young "old boy," admitting to 48 years, won the premier prize, and M. Aggerholm, a clubmate, who blushingly owns up to the half century mark, was second. O. S. Weeks, the sturdy Hollywood Inn A. A. veteran, was third. The first novice prize went to J. J. Matthews of the Long Island City Athletics.

Astoria Increases Lead.

The Astoria Football Club strengthened its lead in the Metropolitan League yesterday by defeating the Red Star soccers by the score of 5 goals to 2 at Astoria. In the first half Kay scored for the home team and Winkleman for the visitors. After change of ends the tide of battle turned in favor of Astoria, Lee, Haughey and Frazer scoring. Warwick added another for the Red Stars.

Riddle's Other Horses Are Tails to the Man o' War Kite

How fickle are the fortunes of the turf has been aptly illustrated this year by the case of Samuel D. Riddle, who through the ownership of one great horse was able to become the second largest money winner of the season. Man o' War brought the earnings of the Riddle stable up to $186,087 though, except for the marvelous three-year-old king, the stable was exceptionally weak. Twenty-two horses were raced under the Riddle colors and the twenty-one besides Man o' War earned slightly more than $20,000.

SOUTHERN TRAINING CAMP FOR ELI NINE

Yale Baseball Team to Have Quarters in Dixie — Abandons Usual Playing Trip.

Yale's 1921 baseball team will mark a complete innovation in the management of college athletics by the establishment of a Southern training camp after the manner of big league baseball teams. According to the announcement which was made officially yesterday, the plan includes the abandonment of the usual Southern trip during the Easter holidays and the substitution of a Southern training period in its place.

At the present moment Captain Peters and Walter Mace, trainer of the team, are in the South looking over prospective sites for a training camp during the Spring vacation.

This revolutionizing policy is in line with the decision of Yale alumni and undergraduates to adopt a more aggressive attitude in future toward the development of athletic teams which will uphold the spirit and traditional Yale record of the past. Evidence of this was seen in the reception accorded by alumni and the student body last week to the football eleven, a reception which exceeded all the ovations given the most victorious pigskin team Yale has ever put on a gridiron.

Abandon Easter Tour.

Abandonment of the usual Southern trip for the baseball team was decided upon after a series of conferences during which the disadvantages of the present system were fully drawn out. Constant and excessive traveling, resulting in lack of rest, irregular and unsatisfactory meals, postponed games due to uncertain weather conditions during the Easter period, and the lack of opportunity during such a schedule to give adequate attention to individual faults, or to provide sufficient and regular practice hours, were the chief objections which led to the adoption of a new plan for the Spring workout.

All of these defects, it is hoped, will be remedied under the proposed course. A training camp will be selected in a satisfactory Southern city where a well-equipped field will be exclusively at the disposal of the Eli nine for daily morning practice. A schedule of practice games is now being prepared with major league teams during their training period, also with strong Southern college teams, and will be announced as soon as it is completed. These games will be played on the Yale training grounds and will afford the team opportunity for practice in actual contests without the wear and tear of constant traveling by rail.

The selection of a training site for the nine will depend in large measure upon the hotel accommodations that are found available. Inspection of quarters for the team will include an investigation of the culinary facilities essential to a training table and the opportunities for recreation and entertainment, consistent with training regulations, that will be open to members of the team during their free time.

Eager to Welcome Elis.

That entertainment will be available to the members of the team who make this trip is certain from the large number of Yale graduates located in the South. In addition, letters already received by Manager R. H. Paul Jr. from Chambers of Commerce in Southern cities to which inquiries have been addressed evidence a whoehearted desire to maintain the proverbial Southern reputation for hospitality toward the members of the Yale baseball squad in any community to which it is decided to take them.

From the managerial standpoint it has been pointed out that the new plan, eliminating, as it does, the one-night stand and constant jumps, will be much less costly than the former Spring schedule. By remaining in one locality the management will be able to save considerably on expenses, at the same time drawing gate receipts from games played.

It is anticipated that the new system will aid materially in the development of individual play and the molding of a fast team. Competition for the Yale nine is expected to be unusually keen this year because of the number of vacancies to be filled. Captain Peters, catcher Diamond, first baseman Aldrich, shortstop Murphy, Crane and Parsons, outfielders, and Selleck and Coxe, moundsmen, are veterans who will be available to the nine next year. The remaining positions will have to be filled from candidates from last year's squad, from last year's freshmen nine and from players who were ineligible last year.

More than fifty men turned out for the Fall practice this year, and from this squad, augmented by newcomers during the early Spring call, Coach Bill Lauder expects to develop a team fully up to the standard of Yale's former championship nines.

SHOOTS WELL IN WIND.

Hooker Makes High Score Over Larchmont Traps Despite Gale.

Twenty-five gunners, the largest field of the year, gathered at the traps of the Larchmont Yacht Club for the final shoot of the month yesterday. The program called for a shoot at 100 targets, with a prize for the high scratch and the high handicap gunner. Kenneth L. Hooker won the former trophy with a card of 90 out of a possible 100 targets. It was excellent shooting, as a high wind made it exceedingly difficult for the nimrods to hit the targets.

No less than five gunners tied for the high handicap prize with full scores of 100 targets. They were F. M. Wilson, S. P. Duffy, R. H. Stevens, E. M. Dalley and C. A. Krinckl. As it was dark when the last string of the regular shoot was trapped, the committee decided to postpone the shoot-off for the handicap prize until next Sunday.

The scores:

Celts Win From Franco-Swiss.

After making an even score in the first half the Franco-Swiss soccer team suffered defeat by 3 goals to 1 in the Metropolitan League game with Tyrconnel Celts at Taft's Oval yesterday. Fischer of the Franco-Swiss was the first to score, but Hackett soon equalized. Roddin and Cordner clinched matters for the Celts in the second half.

FAVORITES PROSPER AT HAVANA TRACK

Kewassa, Finishing Second at Long Odds, Supplies Big Surprise of Sunday Bill.

HAVANA, Cuba, Nov. 28.—The track was heavy at Oriental Park today and the weather a bit threatening. This had little effect upon the crowd, however, for the usual Sunday attendance was in evidence. There was no particularly bright feature unless it was the second event for youngsters, which was won by A. H. Taylor's Spugs after a stretch duel with Vic Munoz.

The closest finish of the afternoon was in the victory of Dolph over Clip, the former winning by a head. Favorites and second choices gathered the majority of the purses, with Dolph the outsider, quoted at 10 to 1. Old Billy Oliver's campaigner, Kewassa, was the big surprise, finishing second to Lady Ione at long odds. In the mutuels Kewassa paid more than 15 to 1 for the place. Atkinson and Crump were the popular jockeys of the day. Indications point to a heavy track for some time to come.

ERIE SOCCERS QUALIFY.

Defeat Shipyards Eleven and Advance in U. S. F. A. Race.

Defeating the Federal Shipyards soccer eleven by the score of 3 goals to 1 before 3,000 people at Harrison Field yesterday, the team of the Erie Athletic Association, favorite this year for national honors, qualified for the fourth round of the U. S. F. A. competition.

The Federals, who, by their good showing, earned the approval of the crowd, scored first after five minutes of play, when Richardson dribbled the ball down the field and passed to M. Jameson, who scored. From a mix-up, five minutes later, Heminsley tied the score. At half time the game was still even.

A fine exhibition was given by both teams in the second half until five minutes from the end, when Ford drove up on the right. The ball appeared to be out of bounds, but Rooney got possession and hooked it into the Federals' net. Two minutes further on the best goal of the game was shot by A. Stark with a fast rising shot. The same teams will meet for the A. F. A. Cup at Harrison next Sunday.

REST FOR CYCLE FANS.

Riders Start Intensive Training Today for Six-Day Garden Race.

Bicycle racing fans will have a week's rest after the grind which closed at the Twenty-second Regiment Armory Saturday night, before they are confronted with their next whirl of a week. The second six-day race with which Gotham residents will be afflicted will be held in Madison Square Garden, beginning next Sunday night and continuing until Dec. 11. This event has the official sanction of the National Cycling Association, the body controlling the sport in this country. It will differ from last week's grind, however, in that the field will be made up principally of foreigners. European riders dominate the field.

Maurice Brocco, sensational little Italian, is one of the headline attractions in the Garden race. Brocco was one of a party of eighteen riders who landed here last week after a stormy eleven-day voyage. The Italian rider probably will be teamed with Willie Coburn. A pair of Sicilians arrived in Orlando Piani and Gaetano Belloni. Oscar Egg, Swiss rider, was another in the group.

The foreigners will begin a week of intensive training today at the Newark Velodrome. The majority of them will participate Saturday night in the sprint races which always precede the Garden six-day grind. Bob Spears, Australian rider, and Frank Kramer, the veteran champion, will be among the prominent contestants in the sprints.

TAMSEY CAPTURES PIONEER A. C. RUN

Novice Athlete Wins Six and One-Half Mile Event Over New Jersey Roads.

Eugene Tamsey, a young novice runner of the Yonkers Y. M. C. A., made an auspicious entry into local athletics yesterday when he captured the premier prize in the invitation handicap road race of the Pioneer A. C. of Hoboken, held over a course of about six and one-half miles, starting and finishing in front of the Union Hill (N. J.) High School. Competing in his first race, he was allowed the limit handicap and made such good use of it that he finished well within himself, a comfortable distance in front of John Wiberg of the Mohawk A. C. The victor's time was 44:22. Wiberg finished second in the actual time of 42:05.

A field of seventy-two harriers started in quest of the prizes. The majority were novices, with the result that the greatest pack got away from the limit handicap mark. Tamsey was one of the more fortunate ones in the scramble and attained the lead practically at the start. He set a pace which killed off many of his rivals in the first two miles, and continued without decreasing his gait, discouraging the efforts of the backmarkers to overhaul him. At the finish line thirty-nine runners were checked up by the judges.

VANDERVEER MAKES BEST TRAP SHOWING

Wins Two Cups and Scores Leg on a Third in N. Y. A. C. November Week-End Shoots.

J. H. Vanderveer of Brooklyn was the principal winner of the Sunday shoots for November, which came to an end over the Travers Island traps of the New York Athletic Club yesterday. He took the Tournament Cup and the Byronel Cup for the month, each with two legs. In addition to winning two of the monthly prizes, Vanderveer, together with R. L. Spotts, scored a leg on the Buermeyer Cup. Each had 44 out of a possible 50 targets. J. Callahan won the President's Cup and R. B. Sloan the Lyon Cup for November.

The day was anything but ideal for shooting. A high wind blew into the faces of the nimrods, making it exceedingly difficult for them to "kill" the flying targets. The wind kicked up a nasty sea, which pounded on the breakwater in front of the traps, at times sending the spray up into the air and back on top of the gunners. Under the circumstances, it was only natural that the scores were among the lowest of the season.

George J. Corbett, President of the club, was the high scratch gunner, taking the event with a card of 89 out of a possible 100 blue rocks. The high handicap gunner was A. P. Palmer. He had the low total of 95 out of a possible 100 targets.

NAVY TEAM ELECTS LARSEN AS CAPTAIN

FOLWELL ACCEPTS OFFER

Will Continue as Coach Next Season—Eleven Receives Fine Ovation on Its Arrival Home.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 28.—Changing the custom of years by which the election of a football captain was delayed for some weeks after the Army game, the members of the Navy squad held an election on the train returning to Annapolis and named Emery E. Larsen of Minneapolis as captain for next season. He has played centre for two years. He is also a member of the lacrosse team and is one of the three members of the football team who will be first classmen next year, the others being King and Koehler.

Bob Folwell has accepted the offer to coach the team next year, though some of the details remain to be arranged.

In spite of the yelling which was so much in evidence at the Polo Grounds yesterday, the Midshipmen proved that they had something left when the victorious team arrived in Annapolis this evening. They were met by the regiment of midshipmen at the main gate of the academy and given a welcome which such a hard-fighting team deserved. It was generally agreed that no navy team had ever fought harder for victory or more richly deserved it.

The first of the four battalions arrived in Annapolis at 4:30 and the others at intervals. The last train did not arrive until 6:45 o'clock and the cars with the football squad were right behind it. The street between the station and the academy had been decorated and illuminated with red, white and blue lights, and at every point enthusiastic crowds welcomed the victorious warriors. At the main gate, the midshipmen and the band had assembled to the number of 2,000, and the great ovation of the evening was there extended Coach Folwell, Captain Ewen and the other players. Stretched across the top of the gateway was a piece of white canvas embellished by a painting depicting the navy goat butting the army mule into a river.

The players gave credit to the coaches, the coaches to the players and both to the loyal support they had received from the midshipmen throughout the year. All of the navy players came out of the fray in excellent shape.

ARMY IN QUIET RETURN.

Final Rally Is Held at West Point—Eleven May Remain Intact.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 28.—As it is expected here that there will be no graduation next June, it seems likely that the football team which played the Navy Saturday in New York will be intact next season.

The defeated army eleven returned to the post at noon today. There was an absence of the usual demonstration at the wharf upon its arrival. The corps of cadets, however, met the men at the mess hall, where there was a "rally." A few rounds of cheers brought to a close the Army's football season for 1920

The general feeling in the Army's camp is that the soldiers fought a better fight than they were expected to flash. Full credit is given to the Navy for its effectiveness in stopping French, something no other eleven has been able to do this season.

TO SEEK HONORS ON ICE.

Leading New York Skaters Will Enter Speed Races at Newburg.

Speed skaters from the Metropolitan district will be prominent contestants in the struggle between the East and the West, which, it is expected, will be one of the features of the national outdoor championships to be held on New Year's Day at Newburg, New York. The enthusiasm with which local masters of the steel blade are going at their preliminary training shows that they intend to make a determined effort to capture the titles.

Heading the field from New York will be Joe Moore, who showed his heels to his competitors in many of the events in both the nationals and the internationals last year. Moore, however, was unable to beat McGowan. In the races in which he has competed so far this season, Moore has shown that he is as speedy as ever.

As Newburg is so near New York, it is likely that this city will have a large entry. Among the stars who will be seen up the Hudson are Bobbie Hear, Leslie Boyd, Don Robinson, Irving Reiner, Al Leitch and William Murphy. All these entrants will have to contend with McGowan, the speed manufacturer from St. Paul. McGowan was the principal point-getter in the title events last year, with Joe Moore, Goodman and Jewstraw dividing the remainder of the honors. Whether Goodman will compete this year is not certain, but Jewstraw is expected to appear.

NO EASY ROAD FOR HOPPE.

Morningstar Says That Champion Must Fight for Laurels.

Ora Morningstar, the veteran billiardist, is responsible for the statement that Welker Cochran and Jake Schaefer will compel Willie Hoppe to play all the billiards he knows to retain the national balkline championship when they meet in the final round of the titular tournament at the Hotel Astor on next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Morningstar finished second to Hoppe in the tournament of a year ago. He was also one of the contestants in the preliminary round of this year's event staged at San Francisco. He played both Cochran and Schaefer and is in a position to know whereof he speaks. "Cochran and Schaefer are playing better than ever before," said Morningstar after the Frisco event. "I do not predict that either of them will defeat Hoppe, because I understand he is showing greater speed than ever, but I am convinced that they will give him a real rub and that they have better than a mere fighting chance against the champion. One thing is certain, all of the games should be real billiard matches."

Hoppe today begins his final week of preparation for the defense of the crown which he has worn for fifteen years. He will play exhibition matches against Charley Peterson at the Fourteenth Street Academy today and tomorrow. They will meet in the afternoon and evening. Matinee and evening performances will also be staged by the champion at the Rational Recreation Academy in Brooklyn on Thursday and Friday. Special championship tables have been erected at both places, for Hoppe has elected to do his final practicing in public.

Holy Name Five Wins Easily.

The Holy Name Big Five won an easy basketball victory yesterday afternoon at the Manhattan Casino from the Chippewas of Yonkers, by a score of 33 to 14. The local players led all the way, having an advantage at half time of 13 to 8. McDermott, Driscoll and Wassner starred for the victors, and Mitchell played fast basketball for the Yonkers five.

Comment on Current Events in Sports.

The 1920 football season, great as it was in many respects, disclosed several dangerous tendencies and defects of play that should be checked as soon as possible. To a great extent Percy Haughton was right when he said the other day, while deploring the excessive use of the forward pass, that football is straying away from its fundamental aspects. Modern football certainly scaled new heights this year. But the pendulum seems to have reached the end of its swing, and more than one observer is now looking for a movement in the other direction: back to those fundamental aspects that Haughton mentioned in his statement.

The season just closed probably will go down in history as the year in which the art of punting reached its lowest stage. A fitting climax to the season was the exhibition of kicking in the Army-Navy game on Saturday. Before catching and throwing a forward pass became the great art, ambitious young men used to practice hours in kicking a football. They worked diligently in an effort to get distance, height and direction, and the fruit of their efforts was used by coaches as an effective weapon. But now a punt of more than forty-five yards is a thing to be marvelled at. The strategy of direction, too, has been overdone and we now see modern punters kicking weakly out of bounds in unnecessary attempts to place the ball in certain territory. Even our biggest games saw punting of mediocre quality, although Scheerer of Princeton was a shining exception.

While one may not agree with Haughton as to the remedy, he seems to have placed his finger on the weak spot. Moderately and intelligently used, the forward pass is spectacular and brilliant. It is a distinct addition to the game of football, and makes it a better game to watch and a better game to play. But it is coming more and more to be used as a last desperate gamble. Ohio State threw a forward pass in the last second of play, good fortune plus a certain amount of skill directed the ball into the arms of an Ohio State player, and the Western Conference championship was decided. Yale, six points behind Harvard in the last quarter, filled the air with forward passes which had no skill or cunning or deception behind them. But if one of them had found its mark, Yale would have had six and probably seven points to its credit.

Modern football is a good idol to worship, even though coaches and players are beginning to discover that it has clay feet. No one wants a return to the old days of smashing and battering. But neither does any one want such a heavy diet of the new football that the fundamentals of the old shall be neglected. A lot of the so-called science and strategy and fluff of ultra-modern football might be removed without great loss.

BASEBALL

The assurances of Judge Landis to the great army of American baseball fans that their favorite sport will absolutely be cleansed and will not be allowed to serve as pasture for a slimy herd of professional gamblers will please all the genuine lovers of the game, but will surprise none of them. At the very moment when both of the major leagues assented to the change in control, with a man of the attainments and energy of this notable jurist in command of the situation, all perturbation regarding baseball's future practically vanished. The fans emitted one huge sigh of relief and cast their burdens with supreme confidence upon him who is now the nation's leading fan. They knew that it was a man's sized task that was being assumed, but they knew also that a full-sized man was undertaking it, and were and are assured of his ultimate success.

The job will not be done in a week or a month or perhaps a season, even though the infection brought upon the game by the professional gambling microbes is neither deep seated nor probably widespread. There will be spasmodic eruptions upon baseball's cuticle, but it is evident that the cure has been compiled and will be applied unflinchingly.

The adjuration of Judge Landis to the tremendous freemasonry of baseball lovers, in whose membership exceedingly few real gamblers are found, that they shall aid in the cleansing process by refraining even from such little wagers as friends are prone to make between themselves in moments of excitement or disagreement during sporting events, is likely to bear some fruit, even if not the complete harvest which is the ideal. Genuine fans are interested in the game itself and hardly at all in the opportunities for laying wagers which it offers.

TENNIS

A good work was accomplished when the ranking of the first ten lawn tennis players in the metropolitan district was announced last week. New York thus for the first time adopted the custom of other leading cities, and in so doing contributed a new incentive to local players in seasons to follow. Ranking lawn tennis players is always a delicate and often an ungrateful undertaking. It is bound to result in disagreements. No ranking committee is conceivable that could satisfy every opinion. But the work adds to the interest in the sport and if, as was the case with the committee of the local association, the judgments are rendered with an obvious attempt at fairness, nothing but benefit can follow.

The ranking of the local experts, announced by the committee of which Embree H. Henderson is Chairman, seems to have been based in general upon sound judgment. The committee is to be congratulated upon its wisdom in adopting the old system of making the most careful possible examinations of the records and then reaching conclusions by the application of common sense, rather than using the complicated mathematical system now employed by the national association, which, in its initial working out last year, gave anything but satisfaction.

There can be no possible quarrel with the local committee in its choice of method, but there will be a good deal of regret expressed that it elected to limit its decisions so strictly to performances within the metropolitan area. This, however, worked injustice only in the case of Vincent Richards, who received no ranking at all because of "insufficient data." Yet everybody knows that Richards belongs among the first five players of the district. In the list announced last week, he should have been rated fourth, next to Kumagae, Voshell and Washburn. But Richards was not in the best of health in the early part of last season and entered few tournaments. He made an excellent showing in the tournament for the Eastern New York championship, especially in the match which he lost to Kumagae. But there were practically no other performances upon which to base a ranking for him unless one went outside the district. Accordingly, Richards's numerous fine performances elsewhere went for naught.

Exclusion from consideration of tournaments outside the district may have been the most practicable way of operating, but it worked an injustice in Richards's case so glaring that it will be worth while another year for the committee to reconsider it. Here again the element of common sense should be allowed to enter in. The youthful Fordham star has been particularly unfortunate in the rankings, for the mathematically compiled national list of a year ago failed signally to do him justice. It is to be hoped that Richards will not allow this apparent, though naturally unintentional discrimination, to discourage him. A player of his achievements, no less than of his youth and promise, certainly deserves the utmost of encouragement or at the very least a proper acknowledgment of his deserts.

In comment in these columns upon the rankings last Saturday, the identities of Fred and Frank Anderson were inadvertently exchanged. The names of these Brooklyn brothers are as hard to keep distinctly in the mind as the images of the two Dromios.

The showing made by Alfredo De Oro in the preliminary round of the national three-cushion billiard championship tournament, in progress in Chicago, has been one of the outstanding features of the event. After nearly two years' retirement from competitive play the veteran Cuban has come back with a display of skill which has convincingly proved that his game has suffered very little from his long layoff. While he has been defeated once in seven matches and, while Clarence Jackson has met defeat but once in eight games, the famous Alfredo stands an excellent chance of coming through on top.

De Oro still has four matches to play in the preliminaries and is virtually sure to be one of the finalists. Under the rules governing the tournament the men who finish first, second and third in the preliminaries will meet Robert Cannefax, the champion, in the title round to be staged in Chicago immediately after the conclusion of the preliminary round. De Oro has succeeded in gaining such a strategic position in the standing at this advanced stage in the playing that he seems reasonably sure of finishing first or second, with Augie Kieckhefer and John Layton fighting it out for third position. Clarence Jackson undoubtedly will be the other finalist.

During De Oro's long career as a billiard player one of the strongest features of his playing has been his safety work. This has been particularly true of his three-cushion game. There have been few billiardists during the Cuban's time who have approached his standard in safety play. More than one opponent, who may have been a more brilliant shot maker than De Oro, has been forced to acknowledge defeat because of De Oro's superior generalship. This is still true of his work at the table. In the current tournament he is showing that he is still a master of safety, and his iron nerve has enabled him to persevere at this style of play where others have failed under the strain.

Before leaving this city to go to Chicago to take part in the championship quest De Oro said that he would like nothing better than to be able to defeat Cannefax and win back the crown. It will be recalled that it was after Cannefax won the title from De Oro at the Friars Club in this city that the Cuban hung up his cue and announced his retirement from competitive billiards. This action was taken by him following a ruling against him in a protest over a point during his match with Cannefax. The veteran, who is now 58 years old, could not longer deny the call of the game, however, and, after submitting himself to a test match against Ralph Greenleaf, took his cue to Chicago determined to try to regain his lost laurels.

Busy days are these for the college basketball teams, which will have the centre of the intercollegiate stage for several months, now that football has passed into the realm of the past. Many of the gridiron stars have merely changed the style of their uniforms, and under the direction of a different coach are preparing with great zeal for the season that will begin within a few days. The floor game had its very best season last year. It shared with the other college sports the great popular revival of interest in athletics, and there were more games and bigger crowds than ever before.

The rules of the game have in general reached such a state of soundness and tested quality that few changes have been found necessary. But the Intercollegiate Basketball League decided on one change in the rules recently that will have a far-reaching effect on the sport and will undoubtedly work well in practice. Under the new rule players taken from the game for any reason except that making four personal fouls may be returned later. The purpose of the rule is to allow a coach to withdraw a tired player, give him the necessary rest and then send him back, much the same as is done in football when a player is injured or exhausted.

The strategy of the game will doubtless be affected by this new regulation. Heretofore a coach has been forced to lay his plans on the basis that five players will start the game and play as long as they can without being hurt or exhausted or banished for too much fouling. Under the new rule the shifting and substitution of players may easily become part of the coach's strategy. In certain crises strong reserve material may be rushed into the breach. Players with unique and limited gifts may be sent into the game and withdrawn after they have served the purpose of the coach, just as the drop kicker is used in football. There should be many interesting developments in the wake of this new rule.

The application of Harvard and Syracuse for admission to the intercollegiate league is another sign of the great interest that the colleges are taking in the floor game. Harvard, as a matter of fact, is reviving basketball this Winter after a lapse of many years. The Crimson has evidently felt the loss and is taking immediate steps to get back into its old place in the league. Syracuse has long been one of the basketball leaders in the upper part of New York State. If the two teams are admitted next year, as seems not improbable, the membership of the league will have been increased to eight, which would result in a longer schedule and new rivalries.

The prosperity of the intercollegiate league is mainly important as reflecting a similar condition among the other colleges not members. There is no monopoly of talent by any one organization or section, as witness the strong New York University five of last year, which made a vain effort to engage league champions in combat. From every angle the floor sport has a healthy outlook that presages another of those "greatest years."

BOXING TOURNEY DRAWS BIG ENTRY

Amateurs to Compete in Eight Classes in Two Nights of Battling at Garden.

Madison Square Garden, the scene of many famous ring battles, will be given over tonight and tomorrow night to the boxers, who follow the sport purely for the glory and exercise there is in it. The occasion will be the annual Metropolitan A. A. U. amateur championship tournament, which, for the first time in many years, will be conducted under conditions making the competition open to the general public. In the past it has been customary to hold this tournament in one of the exclusive clubs of the city holding membership in the Amateur Athletic Union. The popularity of boxing and the fact that the Walker law enables the amateur sports governing officials to charge admissions to their shows prompted Frederick W. Rubien, local A. A. U. president, to reach the decision to conduct the bouts for the general public.

In holding the bouts at the Garden, President Rubien expects to accomplish a double purpose. He anticipates extending the popular interest in the amateur boxing activities of the district and at the same time attracting funds to the local A. A. U. treasury. President Rubien is confident the tournament will attract large crowds, basing his confidence on a heavy advance sale of tickets.

The bouts will provide competition among the leading boxers of the district. Every youngster entertaining ring ambitions has entered for the opportunity to win one of the eight titles which will be decided. The weights range from 108 pounds up to the heavyweight division.

A total of seventy-nine entries has been received, representing seventy-eight individuals. One aspiring amateur Dan Shannon of the Bronxdale A. C., has entered for two classes. Shannon will compete in both the 158-pound and 175-pound divisions. The heaviest entry has been received for the 115-pound class. Nineteen boxers will strive for this title. The 108-pound division has 12 entries, the 125-pound class 13, the 135-pound class 9, the 145-pound class 11 and the heavyweight class 3.

Following is a complete list of the entries:

Jackson and Dundee to Box Tonight at the Manhattan A. C.

The Manhattan A. C. of Harlem, where Benny Leonard battered Freddie Welsh out of the lightweight championship three years ago, will throw open its doors as a pugilistic centre again this evening. A card comprising forty-one rounds of boxing, including a fifteen-round bout, two ten-round encounters and a six-round contest, has been arranged.

Willie Jackson, Bronx lightweight, and Johnny Dundee, the west side Italian, will be the principals in the feature bout. The contest promises to be one of the most interesting seen here since the revival of boxing. Both are reported in good condition. The ten-round bouts will bring together Charley Hayes and Earl Baird and Jimmy Sullivan and Jack Hazzard. With the requests for reservations indicating a capacity house, the club officials will open the doors at 7 o'clock. It is planned to send the principals in the first bout into the ring promptly at 8:30 o'clock.

Fletcher and Nable to Box.

Eddie Fletcher of the East Side, and Sammy Nable, former amateur champion, will clash in their return fifteen-round bout tonight at the Star Sporting Club. In the last meeting of the pair Fletcher gained the judges' verdict. A ten-round contest which will serve as a semi-final, will be between Jack Hausner and Mickey Brown.

RZESCHEWSKI BEATS 17 RIVALS IN CHESS

Boy Marvel Draws Two Other Matches and Loses One in Simultaneous Play.

Finishing the task of playing simultaneously against twenty opponents, representing ten different clubs, at the Lexington Theatre yesterday, Samuel Rzeschewski, Poland's chess prodigy, emerged with a score of seventeen victories, two draws and only one loss.

After winning fifteen games in succession, Rzeschewski ceased playing and the remaining five games were adjudicated by F. J. Marshall, the United States champion. Of these five games two were adjudged victories for the little master, two were declared to be draws and the one conducted by Sherman A. Clapp, Columbia '20, of East Orange, N. J., was decided in favor of the latter, who had held his famous adversary in check throughout the long session and established the superior position. F. E. Parker and Rudolf Smirka, both of the Marshall Chess Club, were the players who drew.

This performance was slightly better than the record made in the first exhibition, Thursday night, when Rzeschewski won fifteen, drew four and lost one.

A. E. F. CHAMP. MATCHED.

Bob Martin Is to Meet Gene Tunney or Charlie Weinert.

Bob Martin, A. E. F. heavyweight champion, will make his first metropolitan appearance in a twelve-round bout against either Gene Tunney, Greenwich Village boxer, or Charlie Weinert of Newark, at The Arena, of Jersey City, Dec. 7. Promoter Dave Driscoll has already signed Martin for the contest and is negotiating with Tunney and Weinert.

In addition to this contest Frank Cassidy and Sam Mosberg, former amateur champions, will clash in a twelve-round bout, and Mickey Shannon and Al Roberts will be opponents in a ten-round match.

Another Boxing Club to Open.

Another boxing club will throw open its doors Dec. 7 when the Starlight Sporting Club, 177th Street and Boston Road, begins fistic operations. Jimmy Kelly of the Bronx and Sammy Good, a San Francisco welterweight, have been engaged for the principal bout of ten rounds. In the semi-final ten-round encounter Jimmy Paul of Harlem will exchange thumps with Jack Sheldon. There will also be two six-round contests. In one of the latter bouts Irving Jampol, former amateur boxer, will oppose Harry Nelson. Officials of the new club declare the seating arrangement is capable of accommodating 5,000 persons.

MUSIC

By Richard Aldrich

The New York Symphony Orchestra.

At the fourth afternoon concert of the New York Symphony Society, given yesterday in Aeolian Hall, the program comprised Liszt's "Faust" symphony—the three instrumental movements without the final chorus for female voices—John Alden Carpenter's "Concertino" for piano and orchestra, the solo part played by Percy Grainger, and Tschaikowsky's "Nutcracker" suite, the last named being substituted for four movements of Dvorak's suite for orchestra, first announced for this concert.

Mr. Carpenter's "concertino"—he was a little modest in his title, for it might perfectly well have been a concerto, except, perhaps, for its light-mindedness—was played for the first time in New York, though the piece itself was written five years ago, and was revised as to its last movement a year ago. In a note as to its character the composer mentions its "light-heartedness," and compares it to a conversation between two friends, a little garrulous, in which rhythms, American, Oriental and other, are discussed; and there is youth in the air.

The music fits this account of it; it is gay and brilliant, for the most part, and not to be taken too seriously; sometimes a little extravagant, touched with the grotesque and highly colored; not without the stopped trumpets, the harp and piano glissandos, the glockenspiel and the castagnettes that add such an absorbing interest to so much of today's music. The piano part is likewise brilliant and is skilfully written for the instrument, and Mr. Grainger let none of its brilliancy be missed.

Mr. Carpenter is here, as he has shown himself to be so often before, fanciful, ingenious, full of invention, and speaks a language that is recognizably his own. The rhythms that he mentions are many and adeptly used. In the first movement two syncopations of "rag time" are unmistakably and cheerfully in evidence, and one still stronger in the slow movement, where the first theme has a character to correspond. The piano has a persistent figure long repeated, with the melody in the 'cellos. In the second theme Mr. Carpenter becomes more serious; he writes with a touch of passion and harmonizes richly. Once more the mirthful spirit returns in the last movement, and intensified. The rhythm is curious, as if in fine beats, and the melody is mischevious. A waltz tune intrudes gaily; there is a snatch of "Dixie" and a whirling end.

This music is of a kind to win sympathy even from the sternest; its spirit is insinuating, its brilliancy warming, and where Mr. Carpenter has let himself be a little serious, he has made it worth while. Mr. Grainger played the solo part with great gusto; he was much applauded and several times recalled. Mr. Carpenter sat in one of the boxes to hear the performance and was made to rise and accept applause for himself.

Liszt's "Faust" symphony is, at any rate, better music than his "Dante" symphony that was heard here earlier in the season. There might be dispute as to whether it is better than Tschaikowsky's "Nutcracker" suite, which followed the concerto, and carried on in some manner its vein.

FIVE ORCHESTRAS PLAY.

Marine Band Also Among Visiting Concert-Givers of a Day.

Leopold Godowsky was welcomed in one of his rare appearances yesterday at the Philharmonic's crowded matinee at Carnegie Hall. An all-Tschaikowsky program, comprising that master's fourth symphony, first pianoforte concerto and "Slavic March," recalled the great Russian who himself had stood on this stage at the hall's dedication. The present performance, in particular Mr. Godowsky's cool, crisp share in it, brought back something of that simpler time, an "age of innocence" before New York had yet learned to listen to five full orchestras and a nationally famous band all in one Sunday.

The Marine Band came from Washington to the Hippodrome yesterday, playing in aid of a building fund for Belleau Woods Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars. Anna Fitziu's singing of the French "Madelon" brought tears unashamed to more than one crippled veteran's eyes. The martial spirit of the house was let loose again when Lieutenant Santelman's players honored a former leader with Sousa's "Semper Fidelis," the official march of the Marine Corps, and a final "The Star-Spangled Banner" of stressed rhythm that brought the audience up standing.

Michel Piastro, a violinist, whose powerful tone had been marked in several recitals here, met his test with orchestra last night in the National Symphony's popular concert at the Hippodrome. Under Paul Eisler's direction he was heard in Lalo's so-called "Symphonie Espagnole," well suited to his calm style. Mana Zucca, a young song writer and pianist, appeared in her first large work, a piano concerto in one movement, and there were orchestral excerpts of Weber, Wagner and Tschaikowsky.

A pianoforte concerto in Madison Square Garden was a novelty to some 3,500 at last night's resumption of popular concerts there. With Nahan Franko's orchestra, Philip Gordon was greeted by a hushed audience as he played Saint-Saëns's work in G minor. Claudia Muzio, of the Opera, who has before appeared in these popular programs downtown, was heard in an "Aida" air, as was Percy Hemus in baritone songs of Bizet, Lieurance and Damrosch.

Harold Bauer, in Saint-Säens's C minor concerto, No. 4, gave double distinction to last night's Metropolitan bill, adding also Liszt's "Fantasie" with the orchestra under Hageman. Mme. Destinn sang airs from Mozart's "Don Giovanni" and Tschaikowsky's "Pique Dame"; there were two Puccini favorites by Miss Sparks and "Pagliacci" for Morgan Kingston.

Walter Gross, a lad of 11 years, without "prodigy" frills, played a Haydn sonata and other pieces at the Princess yesterday afternoon. He showed a frank liking for the picturesque "Indian Lodge" of MacDowell and a "Weeping Willow" by Koscak Yamada.

DELANO FUND TO SCHOOL.

Musical Art Society's Endowment to Pass to Institute.

The Musical Art Society, inactive for two seasons, will not resume its concerts by a paid professional chorus in music of the old Flemish and Italian schools, as given twice yearly since 1893. Secretary John S. Sheppard, in announcing the discontinuance of public activities, said yesterday that the society would still use its means to encourage the singing of choral music as an art.

In accordance with the "deed of gift" of an endowment fund raised by the late President Eugene Delano, this fund now passes to the Trustees of the Institute of Musical Art.

Madge Kennedy to Play Here.

Madge Kennedy, who has been appearing in motion pictures for the last three years, will return to the New York stage on Saturday night of this week, when she will begin an engagement at the Astor Theatre in "Cornered." The play, which is a melodrama by Dodson Mitchell, is being produced by Henry W. Savage, and has been on tour for a number of weeks. In it Miss Kennedy will play a dual rôle.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Florenz Ziegfeld's production of "Sally," with Marilynn Miller and Leon Errol as its stars, will have its first performance tonight at the Academy of Music in Baltimore.

Matinees of "Enter Madame" will be given daily at the Fulton Theatre during Christmas week.

Donald Gallaher will succeed Tom Powers in the leading male rôle of "Bab" tonight.

William Harris, according to a cable from London, has acquired the rights to John Drinkwater's play "Oliver Cromwell."

Edna Best, a young English actress, who will play the title rôle of "Peter Pan" in London at Christmas time, will be brought to America next season by Marc Klaw.

Phil Baker will be added to the Ziegfeld Midnight Frolic on Monday night of next week.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER ATTENDS CHURCH HERE

Fifth Avenue Baptists Welcome Him—Walks Home With Son to Dinner.

John D. Rockefeller came to town from his Pocantico Hills estate yesterday for the first time since election day and appeared in his pew at the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church. There he was welcomed warmly by the parishoners, who had not seen him for many months, since he seldom comes to the church, in which he and John D. Jr. long have taken a deep interest. The Rev. Dr. Cornelius Woelfkin, pastor of the church and a close friend of the eighty-one-year-old capitalist, was prevented from delivering the sermon because of a cold. Instead, the Rev. Dr. Eugene A. Carter, who recently became Dr. Woelfkin's assistant, preached. After the service Mr. Rockefeller sent his good wishes to the pastor.

When the service had ended, Mr. Rockefeller, who had appeared unescorted except for the attendant who usually follows him at a short distance, walked up Fifth Avenue between John D. Jr. and the son's wife. His overcoat was buttoned snugly and he seemed unmindful of the drizzling rain, though he carried no umbrella.

Many persons recognized the frail, familiar figure and the son was kept busy responding to greetings. At Fifty-first Street the elder Rockefeller took a long look at the Union Club, battle scarred as a result of the recent Irish resentment of its display of the British flag. He made a remark, accompanied by a gesture which some who watched him were sure was condemnatory of such violent interjection of foreign politics into American affairs.

The Rockefellers walked past the father's home in West Fifty-fourth Street, which has been unoccupied since the death of Mrs. Rockefeller, and entered the son's home, where they dined with the Rockefeller children.

SUGAR DROPS TO 10C A POUND AT RETAIL

Federal Refining Company Cuts Wholesale Price to 8 3-4c, Less Usual Discount.

With the reduction in the wholesale price of sugar last week by the Federal Sugar Refining Company to 8¾ cents a pound, less 2 per cent., the retail price dropped to 10 cents in chain stores and in most other groceries throughout the city. Here and there a grocer held out for 11 cents. One grocer offered to cut 1 cent off the total where five pounds were purchased at 11 cents a pound.

In reviewing the refined sugar market for the week, the American Sugar Bulletin says that the basic price of the American Sugar Refining Company and the Franklin Sugar Refining Company has been 9 cents, less 2 per cent., since Nov. 23. "Other refiners," the Bulletin continues, "generally name this figure, but one New York refiner is withdrawn and another quotes 8.75 cents. It will be recalled that the 9-cent price ruled during 1919 under the United States Sugar Equalization Board control. The demand for refined sugar continues quiet. The Java white sugars are still arriving.

"Most of the far Western beet sugar producers have withdrawn from the market east of the Mississippi River, including St. Louis, and several have withdrawn entirely. Those having sugar for sale are offering it at 8.80 cents, less 2 per cent., seaboard refinery basis. No change has been reported for Michigan and Ohio beet sugar below 9.40 cents."

The Bulletin says that the tone of the raw sugar market during the week was more steady, largely due to the fact that there were buyers for small lots offered at 5.76 cents, duty paid.

TUMULTY UNCERTAIN ON PLANS FOR FUTURE

Admits President Has Offered Him a Place on Customs Court Bench.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Joseph P. Tumulty, Secretary to the President, has received an offer from Mr. Wilson of an appointment to the Customs Court of Appeals, but has reached no decision with regard to its acceptance. This was disclosed tonight in a statement issued by Mr. Tumulty, prompted by various published reports as to what he planned to do when his duties at the White House cease next March. The statement also took notice of reports that Mr. Tumulty planned to enter a law partnership here with former Representative T. T. Ansberry of Ohio.

"I have made no definite plans for the future and have not under consideration a law partnership of any kind," Mr. Tumulty said. "It is true that the President has generously offered to me the judicial post made vacant by the death of Chief Justice Montgomery of the Customs Court of Appeals. I have this matter now under consideration, but have reached no decision regarding it."

ACTORS' SALARIES TO DROP.

Ziegfeld Predicts That There Will Be Fewer Productions.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 28.—Actors' salaries are going to drop, Florenz Ziegfeld said here today.

"The Follies' baggage bill in Washington recently was three times as big as it used to be," he declared. "The railroad fare of a Follies' company would stagger them. Musicians' salaries have jumped 50 per cent. Stage hands get more—everybody gets more. Yet the price of the shows have'nt gone up.

"What's the answer, you ask me? Actors' salaries have got to come down. They are coming down. Some of them who used to get $250 a week are now pulling $750 a week. It's all out of proportion.

"How are they going to come down? Producers are going to stop producing shows. They're already stopping. Forty or fifty shows closed up within the last two weeks. And when the crop of shows goes down there are fewer jobs for the actors and they'll take whatever they can get at whatever salary they are offered. That's the solution."

POLLOCK IS FRIARS' GUEST.

Playwright Sails Soon on a Year's Visit to Egypt.

Channing Pollock, the playwright, was the guest of honor at a dinner given by the Friars Club last night at the Hotel Astor. Mr. Pollock, who is the retiring Dean of the Friars, will sail in the near future for Egypt, where he expects to remain a year.

About 800 Friars and their friends were present. George M. Cohan attended his first Friars' function since rejoining the organization, and Marjorie Rambeau, Florence Reed, Wilton Lackaye and Raymond Hitchcock, all of whom have appeared in plays by Mr. Pollock, sat at the speakers' table. An address was made by Father Duffy, and other speakers included Augustus Thomas, William Collier, G. P. Huntley and Rennold Wolf. A vaudeville entertainment followed.

THE SCREEN

Douglas Fairbanks's latest motion picture, "The Mark of Zorro," is at the Capitol this week. The program says that it is "from" a story by Johnston McCulley, called "The Curse of Capistrano," but one who has not read Mr. McCulley's story imagines that it is pretty far from it. There's too much Fairbanks in it for any one to have written it without the athletic comedian definitely in mind. What is on the screen is probably "The Curse of Capistrano" spiced and speeded up to suit the taste of Douglas Fairbanks and the many who enjoy his gay and lively style of playing. This means that whatever plausibility there was in the original has been sacrificed for headlong action, that whatever consistency there was has given place to intermittent fun and thrills, that whatever of sentiment there was has become romantic nonsense. All of which may mean that "The Mark of Zorro" is more enjoyable than "The Curse of Capistrano" could ever hope to be.

Certainly there are moments in the motion picture which must delight anyone, no matter how preposterous they are. There is a duel scene, for example, which is something distinctly original in the history of mortal combat on the stage or screen, and there are spirited races and pursuits, sudden appearances, quick changes, and flashes of tempestuous love-making that are typically, and entertainingly, Fairbanksian.

But "The Mark of Zorro" is also different in some respects from the usual Fairbanks picture. It is somewhat tamer, for one thing, the scenery especially having more of the quality of inertia. There are no mountain slides or floods in it, and the hero himself actually appears sometimes as a constitutionally languid individual, wearied by the exertions of a carriage ride.

He is one Don Diego Vega, an aristocrat of Spanish California, who seems content to loaf through life in fancy clothes and rich surroundings, but is really so moved by the tyranny of his country's rulers that he originates for himself another role, that of Senor Zorro, an alert and mysterious avenger of the people's wrongs, who appears suddenly when least expected by the authorities, and disappears as suddenly when most desired by them, always in black mask and costume, with a sure sword, a swift horse and a sense of humor.

There may be those who will find "The Mark of Zorro" a little tedious in places because Fairbanks is not frolicking through every scene of it, and, as he never creates a character and will not confine himself to any possible plot or plan, his pictures must depend almost entirely upon his own athletics and absurdities, supplemented by those of scenery and cast. So, whenever "The Mark of Zorro" calms down, something seems to be missing.

The settings of the picture are picturesquely, and some of them magnificently, Spanish, and they often contract amusingly with the emphatically non-Spanish appearance of some of the players, including, of course, Fairbanks himself. Still, the cast does what is expected of it, and, as no one cares whether the story is consistently Spanish or just outlandish, there's no fault to find. Those who do the principal work are Noah Berry, Marguerite De La Motte and Robert McKim. The production was well-directed by Fred Niblo.

"Heliotrope," adapted from a story by Richard Washburn Child and directed by George D. Baker, who also wrote the scenario, is at the Rivoli this week. It is a melodrama which might have been a tragedy. It deals in mechanically contrived situations when it might have dealt in character.

The story, briefly, is of an imprisoned criminal who obtains a pardon in order to protect his daughter from an unscrupulous mother. The girl is about to make an advantageous marriage to a man who knows nothing of her antecedents, and the mother is preparing to blackmail the prospective husband. The father has given his word that he will not kill the woman, so, by an ingenious method of putting terror into her heart, he drives her to kill him. She is arrested for the murder, and, the girl's birth certificate having been destroyed by the father before his death, she is powerless. The last scene is of the girl's presumably happy wedding.

Herein the tragedy of the father's sacrifice, brightened by its success, and the irony of the daughter's unsuspecting happiness might have been developed if father and daughter had been made genuine characters. But they have not been, and so the story is simply a melodrama, interesting as such, and possibly destined to greater popularity than it would have had as a more human document.

William D. Mack, in the minor rôle of "Spike" Foley, a pal of the father, is the most lifelike person in the cast. Fred Burton, as the father, and Julia Swayne Gordon, as the mother, have flashes of genuineness, but, for the most part, follow the broad, exaggerated style of acting suited to melodrama. Diana Allen, as the girl, and Wilfred Lytell, as her fiancé, are just two young people. Thomas J. Findlay, as a prison warden, is satisfactory.

The direction of Mr. Baker has produced many scenes photographically excellent, but few of cinematographic distinction.

The Rivoli Pictorial includes, among other interesting subjects, amusing animal studies from the Urban studio, and a set of Marcus's entertaining drawings with movable whiskers.

"Dangerous Business," with Constance Talmadge, a John Emerson-Anita Loos production, directed by R. William Neill, is at the Strand.

E. M. Newman's second Traveltalk, "Damascus and Syria," was delivered at Carnegie Hall last night.

WANTED SUMMONS MAILED.

Yonkers Police Halted Mrs. Belknap's Car, Refusing Request.

Police of Yonkers reported yesterday that when they stopped the automobile owned and occupied by Mrs. William Belknap of Oscawanna she was in such haste to move on that she requested Policeman Patrick Whalen to mail her the summons. Mrs. Belknap was a national figure in the fight for woman suffrage.

Whalen stopped her car traveling, he alleges, thirty-five miles an hour on Warburton Avenue, Yonkers. Lieutenant Bryant Beatty was operating the car. "I'm in an awful hurry," protested Mrs. Balknap, "you can mail me the summons." The policeman told Mrs. Belknap that they would have to wait until he made out the slip for Beatty, or he would take them to the police station to get the driver's pedigree. Mrs. Belknap, according to the police, waited under protest. The case will be tried before Judge William Bleakley in court today.

SUFFRAGISTS SPENT $664,208 FOR VOTE

IS STILL RAISING FUNDS

Antis Deny They Seek Repeal of Amendment—Want Referendum on Future Changes.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The National Woman's Party, with which are identified the militant suffragists, spent $664,208.42 in its seven-year fight for the suffrage amendment to the Federal Constitution.

Alice Paul, Chairman of the party, tonight made public an itemized account of these expenditures showing what was spent for the "prison special," for picketing, demonstrations, propaganda, the famous "card index" on records of Congressmen and other activities. The $664,000 does not include the expense of protecting the suffrage amendment in the courts against the attacks that have been made on it since ratification. Nor does it include the cost of a legislative campaign now under way to obtain the passage during the coming short session of Congress of the necessary enforcement legislation, without which the militants think the right of women to vote is not secure. These funds are yet to be raised, as well as the $20,000 Woman's Memorial Fund for the presentation of statues of suffrage pioneers to the National Capital.

Picketing during the three years, 1917-1919, cost $7,421.31. Bail alone for pickets, later returned by the District, is an item of $3,080. More than $1,000 worth of banners and regalia were destroyed in the attacks which mobs in front of the White House and elsewhere made upon the pickets, and several thousand dollars more was spent on other banners used in demonstrations. The cost of the Woman's Party Convention at Chicago in June, 1916, including rent of the Blackstone Theatre, is given as $8,603.81.

Recent demonstrations by the militants, including the picketing of the Republican National Convention, legislative work during the meeting of the Democratic National Convention and sending deputations to the Presidential candidates cost $5,960.68. This figure included the overhead expenses of officers, salaries, traveling expenses of organizers, supplies, postage and express charges. Transportation of the banners and regalia to Chicago alone for use during the Republican convention cost within a few cents of $300. The national conventions of the Congressional Union and of the National Woman's Party in Washington cost $2,504.45.

"Prison Special" Cost $19,990.

"The prison special," which was sent on tour through the country in 1919, when the suffrage amendment was being blocked in Congress by the lack of one vote, cost the militants $19,990.42, including railway fare, living expenses of the party, rent of special car, supplies, banners, signs, expenses of State organizers, rent of halls, printing, telegrams and postage. In 1916 the militants sent across the country a "suffrage special" train which cost $5,800.79, including the expense of moving the train into twelve Western States.

In the three national elections in which the Woman's Party compaigned in its effort to make suffrage a political issue of the first importance, the militants spent considerable money. In the Congressional elections of 1914 they spent $8,408.59 in nine States. In the Presidential campaign of 1916, they spent $58,729.29 in twelve States for the establishment of headquarters, office supplies, rental of halls, campaign literature, placards, banners, telegrams, telephones, and salaries and traveling expenses of twenty organizers, the latter amounting to $24,896.30. The Congressional election campaign in 1918 cost the militants $6,180.06.

The National Woman's Party has a card index which contains a record of each individual Senator and Representative. This index and the maintenance of "the legislative department of the party" cost $12,639.37, involving, as it did, a large corps of lobbyists to interview members of the Senate and House not only once, but repeatedly. This involved considerable traveling and a large office force for cataloguing the cards. The results of the interviews of the militant organizers with the politicians, and every obtainable printed report indicating their suffrage views, were catalogued in these files for use in the fight to compel the passage of the resolution, which submitted the suffrage amendment to the State Legislatures for ratification.

The expenses of the "organization department" amounted to $96,202.37. This total includes the cost of training and maintaining a large corps of organizers throughout the country and organizing and advertising meetings. Pageants, plays and processions cost $21,587.68, while $8,021.36 was spent for the first suffrage parade in Washington, March 3, 1913, the eve of Woodrow Wilson's inauguration, in which thousands of women marched, and which resulted in a riot and a Congressional investigation of the police force of Washington. In its seven years' campaign the Woman's Party has spent more than $50,000 on postage stamps alone.

Antis Not Seeking Repeal.

In a letter to newspaper representatives Miss Mary G. Kilbreth, President of the National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, denies a published statement that the association had announced that it would seek to have the next session of Congress enact legislation repealing the suffrage amendment.

"This association has not asked and will not ask any action by Congress on the Nineteenth Amendment—which is now out of political control and in the United States Supreme Court," says Miss Kilbreth in her letter.

"We have, with the American Constitutional League, proposed a Federal amendment providing for submission of Federal amendments to popular vote or to special conventions of instructed delegates. This obviously applies to future amendments. It has nothing whatever to do with the Nineteenth Amendment except in so far as the Nineteenth Amendment campaign demonstrated the necessity of making misrepresentation of the people imposible in future.

"We indorse the new amendment because we believe in the right of the people alone to change their Constitutions, Federal as well as State, and because we wish to establish this fundamental principle beyond power of perversion and regardless of the measures involved.

"If suffragists oppose this amendment they must come out openly against majority rule, popular vote and local self-government, and admit that they favor lobby rule rather than rule by the people. We will gladly discuss this position with them, but meanwhile we object to having the proposed amendment represented as an attempt to repeal the Nineteenth Amendment and to having statements to that effect attributed to this association. Therefore we request the press hereafter to be on guard against unauthorized statements purporting to emanate from this association."

LOCK CELLS IN FLIGHT.

Two Prisoners Escape From Windham Jail, Cutting Through Roof.

PUTNAM, Conn., Nov. 28.—Frank Mason, known as a lock expert, and Alvin L. Bradley of Worcester, Mass., who was being held for the Suprerior Court on charges of robbery, escaped from the Windham County jail at Brooklyn, near here, early today. An alarm has been sent to the police of cities in this State, Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

The jailer, Albert Wald, said the prisoners got out of their cells on the second tier, went through a corridor to a washroom and cut a hole through the roof. It was evident that another had engineered the escape, as three doors had been opened and locked again. At 6:30 this morning he found that Mason was not in his cell, although the door was locked. Bradley also was missing, although his cell door was locked. The jailer believes Mason got out of his cell with a key and opened Bradley's cell, then opened the corridor door and locked it after them.

HELD IN GEM ROBBERY.

Bail of $25,000 Required for Man Who Said He Was Held Up.

David Saylor, the clerk of the Provident Diamond Company, who was locked up on Saturday on suspicion of complicity in the robbery, after he had charged that motor bandits stole $60,000 worth of diamonds from him at Forty-ninth Street and Seventh Avenue, was held in $25,000 bail in the West Side Court by Magistrate Francis X. Mancuso yesterday.

Former Assistant District Attorney Alexander Kaminsky appeared for Saylor and said that there was no ground for holding the man save for the allegations that he gave conflicting accounts of the hold-up.

EXPECTS MUNICIPAL CLEAN-UP BY WOMEN

Mrs. Upton Says They Will Be a "Continuing Force" in Our Politics.

THINKS MACHINES DOOMED

Republican Suffrage Leader Regards Local Reforms as Women's Peculiar Province.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton, Vice Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Republican National Committee, today issued a statement from the Washington headquarters of that committee in which she said that women were not going to end their political activities with the national election just held, but would actively perform their duties of citizenship and take a prominent part in all local elections.

President-elect Harding said in the course of the campaign that he favored appointing a woman to a Cabinet post if Congress established a Department of Education or Social Service. Mrs. Upton has been most prominently mentioned for this proposed office.

"Women are going to take an active part in all municipal elections hereafter," said Mrs. Upton, "and this will be the rule throughout the United States. The force of women in American politics is to be a persistent, continuing force.

"After the Tennessee ratification, which made certain our women would vote in the November election, the time was so short for organization and even education of women in their new duties that the work was hurriedly done and of necessity in a way incompletely done. There is now time for the formulation of careful and caretaking plans looking to the study of political and public questions by the women of the country, organization of the women for political purposes and plans looking to political activity. The leading women of the country already are at work upon such plans, and the future promises to be an active one.

"The next step taken by women generally will be in the municipal elections soon to occur. Some of these occur in the Spring, others not until the following Fall. It is generally conceded that the worst governments and the worst institutions of government in the United States are in our cities. There is no better place to start clean-up proceedings than in the cities. In fact, this is the very best place. This is right at home.

"Women are going to take a leading part and start this job with enthusiasm and determination. The conditions they will help to make right affect their own everyday life and the lives of the members of their families. This work, therefore, has even a closer and a more personal interest. Women are well qualified for this particular work. City government is but a larger housekeeping, and that is one thing women understand. It rather looks to some of us as though the entry of women into municipal politics means the smashing of political machines nation-wide.

"Some men think women like a house-cleaning job, but the truth is they don't. What they do like is a clean house and to get it are willing to go through the house-cleaning business. Isn't it about time house-cleaning started in many of our cities?

"The interest of American women in political matters is now nation-wide. Women's activities during the recent campaign accentuated their interest in political work and have given them a new zeal for that sort of thing that is growing rapidly.

"Lots of folks were apprehensive about the woman vote. Of course, we knew such people were foolish but there were lots of them. Looking back, we now see that the women played not only a conspicuous part in the recent campaign, but contributed more than their share to the final great victory. The truth is, women surprised the men folks by voting with fine and conservative judgment. In fact, the woman vote was a conservative vote. The vote of women in this election was more conservative on the whole than that of the men.

"Furthermore, it was a distinctly patriotic vote in that the women were strongly moved by patriotic considerations. They also have a regard for local as well as national matters. I am justified in saying that women showed a wonderfully keen appreciation of the right and the wrong, both as to men who were candidates and as to the principles at stake.

"I sincerely believe it is not too much to say that in the enfranchisement of women our country has received permanent support from a very large group of voters that will prove a steadying influence, and one ever exerted for national welfare.

"We really can be pardoned for taking a great deal of pride in this first test of the women in a national political contest. Personally I feel more than compensated for the thirty years I have labored to secure for women the right to vote.

"If anybody thought women would become active for a brief period during a political campaign and then forget all about political matters and lose all interest in them, that person little understands women, and is due for a big surprise. Women are not going to stop their political interest and political activities with the national election just closed. The fact is, they are extremely alive to the duties of citizenship requiring attention to local conditions in both city and village."

HAPGOOD WOULD AID RUSSIA

Attacks Attitude of France and America Toward Soviet Government.

Norman Hapgood, formerly United States Minister to Denmark, attacked the attitude of France and America toward Russia yesterday afternoon at the Bronx Community Forum in Hunts Point Palace. Dr. J. W. Hartman, editor of Soviet Russia, and General C. M. Oberoucheff, who was Commander in Chief of the Kiev military region during the Kerensky régime and a member of the party of Social Revolutionaries, also spoke.

"All questions about Russia come down to this," said Mr. Hapgood, "whether the British Government is right in its attempt to resore trade and health in Russia or whether the French and American Governments are right in doing what they can, through guns, blockade or melodramatic propaganda, to keep Russia in a state of isolation, disease and starvation. The essential principles of liberalism are in conflict with the policy headed by France and abetted by the United States of trying to destroy Bolshevism by destroying Russia."

General Oberoucheff said that the Bolshevist rule is less liberal than that of the Czars. "The failure of the social experiment in Russia is apparent," he said. "Instead of helping the workers in Russia, as would be expected of communism, it has destroyed industry and their means of livelihood."

Mr. Hartman expressed unqualified approval of the Bolsheviki and defended the terror as accomplishing much, with the loss of comparatively few lives.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Present Uncertainties in Finance and Industry; the Outlook for December and Afterward.

It was a common remark last week among people of experience that the continuing declines in most financial and commercial markets were a consequence rather of persistent selling by speculators than of the forced sales of real holdings which had characterized the four or five weeks preceding. From this it was inferred by many watchers of the markets that a halt in the general downward movement was now near at hand and that it might be followed by a substantial recovery.

There is this much of unquestionable soundness in the reasoning—that the speculative seller for the decline can no more cause an indefinitely continuing fall in prices than the speculative buyer for the rise can cause an indefinitely prolonged advance. Neither of them can really influence a market at all unless other and much more powerful influences are at work on the buying or selling side, and both of them are certain in the end to carry their own speculations beyond the point where underlying influences will support them. Since the speculator must protect his own credit, the reaction in the market is naturally proportionate to his own overplaying of the speculative game. The problem is to make sure when the real financial and economic forces have ceased to operate in a given direction.

There is not the slightest doubt that financial and commercial markets are at present as absolutely honeycombed with speculation for the decline as last April's markets were with speculation for the rise. Possibly there has never been such a period of speculation on a large scale in economic history; at any rate, there is no record in more than a century of such wildly violent movements, without anything in the news to cause them, as occur nowadays in the foreign exchange market, the silver bullion market and the market for numerous commodities. Lately all these movements have been downward. At the climax of the similar speculation for the rise last March, people who were able to look below the surface had already discovered that the granting of credit for speculative purposes had reached its limit, that the actual scarcity on which the rise in commodity prices had been based was a myth, and that the real investing and consuming public, guided by its own correct instinct, had absolutely stopped buying. Prices of both stocks and merchandise were still being bid up by the speculators long after these facts ought to have been plain to any observant person, and that has been one reason for the excessive violence of the subsequent break.

The time will come when the "bear speculators" in both stocks and commodities will have the same experience, and the time has almost certainly already come when the markets are protected against further declines like those of the last few weeks by the mere fact that prudent speculators for the decline are buying to cover their engagements. Furthermore, genuine buying on a substantial scale has unquestionably been attracted by the much lower level of prices. This is proved not only by the testimony of Stock Exchange commission houses in regard to orders for high-grade stocks and bonds which have lately been received from the investing public, but by the return of important European purchasers to the grain and cotton markets. The foreign trade statement for October, showing the third largest total export movement of our commercial history, is further proof of the same thing. When the retail merchants, either before or immediately after the Christmas holidays, shall have consented as a whole to take the plunge and reduce their prices to conform with the wholesale market, we shall have still better opportunity to see just where we stand. But it must also be remembered that the downward readjustment of prices, abnormally rapid and violent as it certainly has been, is nevertheless very uneven and that it followed an inflation of prices after the armistice, most of which was economically unwarranted. Even with the industrial stocks (whose declines have not only indicated previous extravagant advances, but a greatly altered trade outlook) almost as many are still selling above the prices of armistice week as are selling below them.

On the wholesale market grain products and textiles sold this week at the prices of 1916 or 1917 and so did certain metals like copper and tin. A very few commodities—coffee, tea and rubber are noteworthy instances—have actually been selling at "pre-war prices." But other products, in particular iron and steel, still command a 40 to 50 per cent. higher price than at the close of 1918. These products, moreover, have a good deal to do with establishing cost of production in other industries—even in farming. When this is the situation and when wages are being reduced without the general cut in retail prices which would enable the workingman to get the benefit of the wholesale trade's reductions nobody imagines that the readjustment is completed.

Exactly how much influence, temporary or permanent, an easier credit situation will exert, is somewhat debatable. After December, money should be very much easier; the money market is laboring somewhat prematurely to reflect those conditions even now. Yesterday's statement of the whole Federal Reserve system showed a rise in the reserve ratio last week from 44⅛ per cent. to 44⅝, which is the highest since July 23 and only 1 per cent. below the highest of the present year. But this was not, like last week's rise in the percentage, a result of heavily reduced rediscounts and note circulation; on the contrary, rediscounts of the twelve Reserve banks increased $62,000,000 last week and outstanding notes $18,000,000. This may be taken to mean that the money market will not be a secure reliance until December is over.

New York City hospitals last year cared for more than 75,000 patients too poor to pay for treatment.

The cost was only $3.74 a day for each, but there were 1,402,952 days all told. In terms of dollars, this is a large sum. In terms of health restored and usefulness regained, it does not seem so large.

The hospitals were able to do this vital work because of the generosity of those more fortunate who gave money to help their fellows.

Governmental Cooperation

While the production of crude oil in the United States is still on the increase and the present sources of supply appear to be adequate for some time to come, the probable gradual decline of production in the not remote future makes it a part of prudence to encourage and protect those American citizens who shall engage in the industry in foreign lands.

Proper diplomatic support with a just demand for equal rights and protection seems a duty of this Government.

NEW TENDENCIES IN WHEAT MARKET

INFLUENCES ARE CONFUSING

Attitude of the Speculative Interests After 87 Days of Declining Prices.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—The undertone of the cash wheat market is very strong with premiums on Hard Winters up 2 to 3 cents the past week and Red Winters 5 to 6 cents. It is becoming increasingly hard to secure either kind in round lots anywhere. From a statistical standpoint the wheat situation in the United States is strong, and with heavy sales for February, shipment being made via the Gulf, it is likely that keen competition may develop for the offerings from the country, especially if farmers continue their holding tendency.

A campaign to restore confidence is regarded by the grain trade as badly needed. While there is probably further liquidation to come in many commodities, the lowest figures are believed to have been witnessed in some lines, especially where there was no surplus to start with.

The recovery with which the wheat market ended the past week was accompanied by numerous reports—as, for instance, that pressure from both Wall Street and Washington had influenced the leading bear interest to desist from its selling of wheat, corn and oats. These rumors, combined with free buying of all grains, resulted in a higher range of values with wheat in the lead. Whether or not the rumors had any foundation the trade was not sure, but the fact remained that there has been persistent buying of corn and oats all the week, commonly credited to the Armour interests.

The main element of strength in the grain situation comes from the fact that the markets have been heavily oversold and that the short interest now is more widely scattered than for many months, with the result that it is easily influenced by rumors.

General belief is, however, that, while prices may work higher, it will take persistent buying to hold advances. The week-end news generally was of a depressing character. Two more North Dakota banks closed their doors, making fifteen so far, but this is regarded as due more to State politics than anything else. Around 3,000,000 bushels of wheat were cleared from Fort William and Port Arthur on Thursday, of which a fair quantity will come to Chicago. Export demand for wheat continues active and premiums are 2 cents higher at the Gulf for the week, with sales of Hard Winters and Manitobas in six days estimated at 11,000,000 bushels. Country offerings remain small.

Grain prices now have been on the down grade for around eighty-seven days. Wheat has declined $1.23 at $1.29, corn 22¾ at 96¾ cents, and oats 26⅝ at 43¼ cents from the high point of the year. The price of March wheat and December corn and oats has been practically cut in half, and the grain trade up to a few days ago was as bearish as it was bullish when prices were around the top.

There is now, however, a more general feeling that liquidation in futures has been very thorough, and that while there may be declines from time to time there is little prospect of heavy pressure on the selling side of the market at present. The cutting down of the purchasing power of the farmer is, however, causing considerable alarm in some quarters, especially as applied to general business.

Kansas is estimated to hold around 90,000,000 bushels of wheat on the farms, part of which is very doubtful quality, due to weevil and improper storage.

Several failures of grain elevators have occurred in Kansas and Nebraska the past week, and a mill at Hutchinson, Kan., had to be taken over by a stronger interest.

Hogs have declined $2.05 the past week and are the lowest since 1916, while sheep are the lowest since 1913. Grains have been on the down grade for eighty-seven days. Despite the holding tendency on the part of farmers, primary receipts of wheat for the week were 9,866,000 bushels or 1,460,000 bushels in excess of the previous week and compare with 8,767,000 bushels last year. Shipments of 4,802,000 bushels were 1,830,000 bushels more than last year. Corn receipts were 3,216,000 bushels against 2,445,000 the previous week and 2,115,000 last year; shipments, 1,914,000 bushels against 1,379,000 bushels last year.

How U. S. Stands by Allies.

Europe's feeling that this country has not borne its full share in reconstructive work is not justified by facts, which, according to an article in The Annalist (out today) shows that eight billions of dollars have been advanced to the Allies since the armistice. A New York "Times" Editorial of Nov. 20th said:

"The United Hospitals of New York treated more than 178,000 persons in 1919. Half of them were free patients. One half of the work of the hospitals was for the sick-poor. Their number is increasing. The cost of caring for them has increased nearly double since 1919. The public must help the hospitals. These fifty-seven institutions make no distinction of nationality or religion. They are carefully conducted and don't allow themselves to be imposed upon by persons pretending to be too poor to pay. To deny them proper support is impossible. . . ."

The French character is well known for its courage, intense industry and thrift. At least two-thirds of the French population is composed of peasants, agriculturists and farmers, nearly all proprietors of the soil.

Since the war France has shown marvelous recuperative power. Of 3,500,000 kilometers of land destroyed in the war zone, 2,000,000 have already been put into productive use. A considerable percentage of the 300,000 houes completely destroyed has been reconstructed and 3,000 kilometers of railway which were destroyed or damaged have been restored.

DENOUNCES DELAY IN RAILROAD LOANS

Federal Treasury Department's Policy Making Business Situation Worse, Says Railway Age.

CONTROLLER IS CRITICISED

Balance of $400,000,000, Due as Deficits, Now Being Held Up—Roads Forced to Borrow.

"The general business situation is unsatisfactory, and the Federal Treasury Department is helping to make it worse by the policy it is following in reference to Government loans to the railroads and payments to the roads on account of the deficits incurred by them during the first six months of private operation," says the current issue of the Railway Age. The Age in its criticism of the situation further says:

"The Transportation act provided for loans of $300,000,000 to the railroad companies, which were to be made upon the certification of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The Treasury Department held that certain of the loans certified by the commission were not in technical compliance with the law, and therefore they have been held up. The deficits incurred by the companies in the first six months of private operation, during which the guaranteed standard return was continued under the provisions of the Transpartation act, aggregated about $660,000,000.

"The Interstate Commerce Commission was authorized by the law to certify to the Treasury Department the amounts which it should pay to the companies under this guarantee. Only about $234,000,000 on account of the deficits had been paid when the guarantee period expired on Sept. 1, 1920. It was assumed that further installments could and would be paid under certificates issued by the commission before the total amounts of the deficits of the individual roads had been ascertained. The Controller of the Treasury has, however, advised the Secretary of the Treasury that payments on account of the deficits can now be made 'only after a carrier has submitted its entire claim under the guarantee and the commission has ascertained the amount due thereon.' The result is that the balance of over $400,000,000 due under the guarantees is being held up.

"Because of the withholding of these funds many railways companies are unable to meet their current obligations, and are being obliged to postpone needed expenditures. Many of them owe large amounts to railway equipment and supply concerns, which, because they cannot get what is due them, are being forced to borrow large amounts at the banks. These conditions tend to continue and increase the general inflation of credit at the very time when the Federal Reserve Board and the banks are trying to reduce it.

"It certainly is a sagnificant commentary on the way Government business is transacted that differences of opinion between two branches of the Government regarding the provisions of a law under which both are required by Congress to act should be allowed to create a situation which is producing such a demoralizing effect upon business.

"The narrow technical interpretation placed on the law by the Controller of the Treasury should no longer be allowed to keep impounded in the Treasury funds which the law intended should be transferred to the railroad companies, and which the business welfare of the country demands should be transferred to them."

The First Locomotive Built by Colonel JOHN STEVENS

MUCH of the impetus behind the gigantic commercial and industrial development of the Nation, in which the Bank of the Manhattan Company played such an important part, came from the inventive genius of Col. John Stevens, one of the original directors of the Bank. Stevens built the first locomotive, the model of which is still preserved in the Smithsonian Institution at Washington. He was the first to see the significance of railroads and took out the first charter for their construction. He built the first ocean-going steamship. Today, as for 121 years, the Bank of the Manhattan Company is offering the facilities of its huge resources and the counsel of its Officers and Directors to those men whose field of action is that vast network of commerce and industry which steamships and railroads have made possible.

Canadian Bonds Are Cheap To-day because 7% and 8% interest rates on gilt-edged Bonds will not continue.

The next big swing in interest rates will be down. Lower rates for money will most certainly advance the prices of existing Bonds and fixed-interest securities.

The large income-returns of to-day will then be a thing of the past.

This, therefore, is the time to buy.

Sound Canadian Bonds, payable in New York, are particularly attractive to the American investor by reason of the heavy discount at which they can be bought due to the high premium on American funds.

Write and we will recommend attractive purchases.

CLEWS FEARS TAXES AS BUSINESS BLIGHT

Abolition of Excess Profits Levy and Surtax Advocated by Banker.

James B. Clews of Henry Clews & Co., after careful study of the taxation system of the country, has become convinced that the surtax should be abolished along with excess profits taxes, that there is need of a general sales tax, that the floating debt of the country should be funded and that a good revenue could be obtained by a Federal license tax on automobiles and checks. Discussing the situation generally, Mr. Clews said:

"That excessive taxation is the surest way to blight business cannot be doubted. Nor can there be any doubt that the high taxes now in force are as much responsible for the present trade reaction as the change from war conditions to those of peace which is now making such rapid strides, for it is obvious that when corporations and individuals are obliged to surrender to the Government a very large portion of their income, their purchasing power at once becomes dwarfed.

"For the Government's fiscal year ended June 30, 1920, the total ordinary receipts amounted to about $6,700,000,000 and the net disbursements to about $6,400,000,000. Of this vast sum $1,610,000,000 was required to run the War Department and $736,000,000 for the Navy Department; for other departments and for civil and miscellaneous expenses, $900,000,000; for interest on the public debt, $1,020,000,000; for control of the railroads, $1,036,672,157, and for the United States Shipping Board, $530,565,000.

"The wisdom of providing Government revenues by means of a sales tax has been frequently discussed unofficially, but has never been given the serious consideration to which it is entitled by our law makers. Nevertheless, this system of taxation is being successfully operated in such countries as France, Germany and Canada at the present time, and it is believed that a very large majority of the business people here favor it.

"On sales and transfers of corporate stocks and on automobiles, candy, jewelry, drugs, pianos, tobacco, beverages, transportation, &c., a sales tax is already exacted; and this tax also embraces a good part of our wearing apparel, articles made of fur alone having contributed $15,311,000 in taxes last year. Why not enlarge the system, therefore, so as to cover sales of every kind all down the line, including tea and coffee? I am not losing sight of the fact that duties levied on imports are added to the selling price and are, therefore, paid by the consumer and not by the shipper; but to provide against double taxation these articles could be excluded from the list paying a tax on sales.

"Another large source of internal revenue could be derived from a Federal license on automobiles. A $25 tax on each of the 8,000,000 cars in use would yield the Government an annual income of $200,000,000. This might be objected to on the ground that automobile owners already pay State licenses and that manufacturers under the present law pay enormous revenues to the Federal Government, the amount for last year being $144,000,000.

"It is not my idea that the income tax as applied to individuals should be done away with entirely, but only that portion of it which comes under the head of surtaxes. The normal tax should be restricted at the rate of 8 per centum, if necessary, until the Government can get along with less income, but as single persons are already exempt $1,000 and married couples $2,000 the 8 per centum rate should also apply to the first $4,000 of net income. This would still make the capitalist pay the lion's share. The present rate of 10 per centum against corporate net income should likewise be maintained."

EMPLOYES TO SHARE IN OIL DIVIDENDS

Standard of New Jersey Announces Details of Plan for Increased Stock Issue.

The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey announced yesterday details of the plan under which it is proposed, with the approval of the stockholders, to increase the authorized common stock from $100,000,000 to $110,000,000. A special meeting of stockholders to vote on the proposal has been called for Dec. 20 at Bayonne. It is also proposed to decrease the par value of the stock from $100 a share to $25.

These proposals which are made by the Board of Directors probably will result in many of the employes of the company subscribing for its stock through the medium of a fund which will be established. The plan for employe ownership of stock is to run for five years from Dec. 30, 1920, and will consist of a fund to be established by joint deposits of the employes, the company, and its subsidiaries.

Any employe may authorize the company or any of its subsidiary concerns to deduct from his compensation each payday a sum not in excess of 20 per cent. of such compensation. When such a deposit is made the company or its subsidiary shall deposit out of its own funds half the amount of the employe deposit. The fund will be run by three Trustees, who will have the option of distributing to employes, upon their withdrawal from the fund, the amount of their deposits or its equivalent in common stock of the company. Until the termination of the fund at the end of five years no employe shall be entitled to have stock delivered to him except at the option of the Trustees. When the fund terminates cash and stock shall be distributed to participants in proportion to the individual employe's interest.

The Value of Money

Was never so forcibly illustrated as at present. The investor with funds available can now buy at prices that a year ago were unthought of and on a basis that will afford a return of

10 Per Cent or better

Sound stocks of undoubted merit have been carried along with those of doubtful worth in the cyclonic shifting of price levels, but as a measure of precaution it would be well for prospective investors to consult with us regarding the most attractive opportunities offered.

COMMODITY PRICES

Declines for the Week General Again—Recoveries in a Few Articles.

Of twenty-one articles in the subjoined table the wholesale spot price of fourteen declined during the last week, two advanced and four are unchanged. In the grain market wheat declined 14 cents per bushel, corn ½ cent and flour 50 cents per barrel. Sugar went ¼ cent lower and butter 8 cents; cotton declined 1¾ cents per pound and wool was quotably lower. Oats went ½ cent per bushel higher, coffee ⅝ cent per pound higher.

Wheat, corn, copper and cotton reached new low levels of prices for the year. Bradstreet's longer table shows that out of seventy-six commodities quoted twenty-eight declined last week, nearly all the rest remaining stationary.

CAREFUL BUYING MET BY CAUTIOUS SELLING

THE NEW GLASS PROCESS

May Ultimately Cheapen This Commodity—Speculative Builders Feel Market.

Cautious buying and inquiries are being met with equally cautious selling terms and promises in the building material and construction markets of this part of the country.

Few building material manufacturers or distributors are taking forward orders at present market price quotations, although within the last ten days there is reported to have developed in certain markets an inquiry from sources believed to represent speculative construction interests. Much of this inquiry, which has come through distributors in Philadelphia and New England, has been met with reluctant response.

Speculative builders at points somewhat removed from New York and vicinity are watching the developments here closely, according to the current Dow Service Daily Building Reports. New York is the worst sufferer proportionately from the shortage of housing accommodations, and lending institutions, as well as private investors in other cities, have apparently come to the conclusion that in the light of recent publicity regarding building practice in this city a speculative movement of considerable magnitude may be looked for in and near New York just as soon as it has become apparent that the price bottom of the building material market has been reached.

The idea seems to be gaining prevalence that pending the final action of the New York State Legislature upon the remedial measures that the Lockwood Committee will recommend to the lawmakers, small house and tenement projectors will rush in to take advantage of the present building laws and the left-over building material and equipment stocks from the 1920 season.

The assumption that labor conditions will be less onerous than formerly, at least during the life of the Lockwood inquiry, and, incidentally, that during the winter months and early Spring labor will be more plentiful, is having an influence upon specialists in this kind of building.

The two essentials, therefore, seem to be, first, a definite assurance that material prices will not react to levels lower than operative minimums, and, second, that assurance of deliveries may be obtained.

Persistent efforts to bear various departments have met with slight success in the market, as a whole, either for spot, Winter or Spring deliveries. The fact that these inquiries have overflowed to adjacent markets, like that of Boston and Philadelphia, where water haulage, it was thought, might offset the distance from point of consumption, aroused the interest of speculative builders in those sections, who began to wonder where they would come in for supplies if a great New York district demand should develop suddenly without their knowledge, particularly if mill supplies of building materials were low.

Lumber, offering the best illustration of the market in the current development, accords the best proof of what happened when this movement reached the manufacturing centers. One organization reported the receipt of orders in two days amounting to 174 carloads, or between three and four million feet, not an exceptional record but sufficiently important to indicate that something was happening. While the lumber sales company does not admit that this volume of business came from any one section, "but was scattered from Florida to New England and as far west as Ohio," there was sufficient business taken from this vicinity to indicate that there was more than passing probability that there is a change at hand earlier than had heretofore been expected. The instructions sent out to its salesmen read:

"You will have to use caution in taking orders now, because the stocks on hand are the only ones that we have to sell and we do not want any orders excepting for immediate shipment, and all orders must be taken subject to prior sale. We shall be very glad if you will be as active as possible for the next three weeks, because after that we shall not be active in soliciting business for a month and we want only enough orders to keep a fair volume of shipments moving during this period."

From a prepared roofing company there went out an order to salesmen accompanying an announcement of final price reduction which said: "By reductions from 24 to 31 per cent. on important items, we have sincerely endeavored to attain a price level from which further movement should be upward.

"We can only accept orders for limited quantities in accordance with a uniform plan to insure fair and equal opportunity for all our customers." This firm, incidentally, also reports a sharp change in orders and inquiries in its New England trade.

A favorable development has occurred in the window glass department which may help to solve the threatened shortage in that commodity and which may, in the course of time, finally lower its cost of production. A new process has been developed by which glass may be drawn out in flat sheets which, according to authorities in the trade, gives promise of ultimately changing the price level of this building commodity. This, however, is an event of the future.

As for the present, the glass mill workmen have asked for a 12½ per cent. increase in their wage, with the prospect, however, of a compromise being effected.

The first visitation of cold weather is expected to hamper the production of glass seriously, and on Dec. 1 many mills will be forced to close when the natural gas supply is to be permanently cut off for all manufacturing industries.

Basic building materials are holding firm. There are few current price changes.

MINES TO CLOSE DEC. 15.

Mexican Employes at Cananea Said to Be Preparing to Protest.

BISBEE, Ariz., Nov. 28.—The mines and smelter of the Cananea Consolidated Copper Company at Cananea, Sonora, Mexico, forty miles south of here, will be closed on Dec. 15, according to notice at the company's office in Cananea today.

The Cananea Consolidated is the largest American-owned copper company operating in Sonora and employs at present approximately 1,000 men, most of them Mexicans.

Demands made by labor which the company has decided cannot be met without a heavy loss, high taxes imposed by the Mexican Government and the present dullness of the copper market were reported as causes of the closing of operations.

Mexican employes, according to reports from Cananea, are preparing to protest to Adolfo de la Huerta, Provisional President of Mexico, in an effort to have the Government compel the company to continue operations.

CANCEL STATE FARE RISE.

New York Central and Long Island Obey Restraining Injunction.

The increased tariff schedules to have become effective on railroads operating within New York State last midnight as a result of the Interstate Commerce Commission's ruling, were canceled yesterday by the New York Central and the Long Island Railroad, the two intrastate roads operating from this city. Representatives of the legal departments of both roads said that the officials had decided to abide by the terms of the injunction granted by Supreme Court Justice James C. Cropsey, restraining the roads from increasing the rates.

C. C. Paulding, general counsel for the New York Central, said that, while he spoke only for the New York Central, it was generally understood that the up-State roads would follow the Central's lead.

The New York Central's legal representatives, he said, had not yet decided upon the details of the legal fight, which may carry the matter to the United States Supreme Court.

Sales First— then Commercial Independence

To Advertisers who are coming to grips with the Buyers' Market.

SALESMEN must return to intensified selling. Workmen must return to a solid day's work. The buyers' market is here. Like the first swim in summer, it comes as a shock.

The bracing effect will follow.

Possibly you feel it already. We do.

For nearly five years many of our clients have cautioned us to use care in their advertising to avoid heavy increase of sales. This restriction has prompted us to use advertising to gain other results vital to a sound business foundation. But we have looked forward to the return of an actual need to make sales.

The Immediate Need— "Sales First"

In discussing advertising, a caution has come into use: "Of course you won't feel the real effect of this advertising for some time."

That caution, while sound, has its dangers. It is true that the benefits of advertising grow vastly as the advertising continues. It is also true that the immediate ripples produced by advertising are sometimes small.

But many businesses today are in critical positions. Something must be done now.

To some manufacturers a "two or three years" stretch ahead looks like a mysterious eternity. These manufacturers need sales—now.

Salesmen are waking up. Workmen are waking up. Advertising must wake up. It must play an important part in awaking the many interlocking forces which keep business in motion.

Soft, vague advertising won't do—today. Long deferred sales won't do. Advertisements must talk and produce in terms of now.

Bankers and Advertising

And the new advertising must do more than quicken sales. The time has come when advertising must reach into the nooks and corners of business and lift where the lift is needed.

One non-advertiser who came to us enjoyed generous sales. One day he needed money. He went to the banks. He met a cold front. One banker quoted a smaller manufacturer in the same line. "But," protested our manufacturer, "my business is very much larger than theirs." After expressing surprise, the banker quizzically said, in effect, "Why don't you get a reputation?"

That manufacturer—successful at selling though he was—had not begun to experience the Commercial Independence which sound advertising can establish.

We heard, lately, of another manufacturer in a similar line—a successful advertiser. Yet he too, in time of need, met unusual resistance in borrowing. Why? The tone of his advertising was flamboyant. Bankers distrust flamboyant talk. This advertiser had dealt successfully with the immediate sales problem, but he had failed to consider the effect of his advertising in its broader aspects.

Advertising based on "Sales First—then Commercial Independence"—must have broader vision.

Bankers want to lend money. That is their business.

Investment houses want to supply new financing. Their very life depends on it.

The manufacturer who has reached commercial independence is sought by both the investment house and the banker.

Prominent in a list of questions asked of companies who seek new financing, one of the largest financing houses in the world brings up Advertising.

New issues must be bought by the public. Their marketability depends on the public's attitude toward the Company which wants the money. And that public attitude, in the sound judgment of this financing house, is largely influenced by the extent and character of the Company's advertising.

Advertising Effects must reach Farther

In preparing advertising for one concern, The Blackman Company predicted that, in addition to Sales, the program would also lead to better contacts with needed supplies of raw materials. Two months later the advertiser reported with genuine delight that this latter result had been attained—generously.

During the war one of the biggest textile mills in the country complained to a railroad official about delays of their product in transit. The delays were finally traced to a traffic manager. It was found that he was giving preference to the shipments of a manufacturer of men's clothing whose volume of business was a mere fraction of that enjoyed by the textile manufacturer.

He was asked why. He replied, "Oh, we couldn't hold them up."

The advertising of the clothing manufacturer had reached him. To him, the name of the textile manufacturer meant little or nothing. He naturally favored the company which he considered the more important.

The Goal beyond Sales —Commercial Independence

What is the goal of every thinking manufacturer today?

Sales? Yes. Profits? Yes.

But not sales alone. Not profits alone.

We believe that the highest state of business success is best expressed by the term "Commercial Independence"—Commercial Independence in the manufacturer's relations with his customers, his dealers, his banks, his sales force, his manufacturing force—with every group of people who can directly or indirectly influence his peace of mind in a business way.

How then can the manufacturer win Commercial Independence in addition to Sales?

By putting his story in a properly-balanced way before the compound audience which makes or unmakes his business—through the deliberate use of advertising to win sales first—then commercial independence.

An Invitation

UNLESS you are a rare exception, your chief concern—just now—is sales. We would like to discuss that subject with you. In our advertising capacity we have worked closely with some of the most remarkable selling organizations in the world.

But, with immediate sales, we would like to include the larger goal which we have styled "Commercial Independence." In building solidly toward that goal, immediate sales need not be slighted one whit.

We invite you to write or telephone. We invite you to discuss with us your immediate problem—but always with an eye to Commercial Independence.

Our Experience with Clients has shown that—

Well-devised advertising can upset trade traditions. The leadership of Djer-Kiss, now twelve years old, ends the tradition that five years of popularity is the limit for a perfume.

A sound service, properly advertised and schooled into the sales force, can place a Company in an outstanding sales position. Example: The Gargoyle Mobiloil Chart of Recommendations.

A business made up of a number of brands in scattered territories can be concentrated into a few strong brands—nationally sold. Example: General Cigar Company—Robert Burns, Van Dyck, Owl, etc.

Experienced handling can give life and selling force to an apparently dry subject. Example: Columbia Trust Company advertising.

Even the most valuable and far-reaching service to the public is incomplete until you tell the public about it. Example: The investment advertising of The National City Company.

Through fair, informative statements, professional as well as public approval can be won for a proprietary article sold through the drug trade. Example: Packer's Tar Soap.

Advertising which makes convincing the high quality of a product will attract great sales leaders to the selling organization, even without direct appeal. Example: Stevens-Duryea Motor Cars.

By skilful presentation, a little article can be made important and thereby quickly reach acknowledged leadership in its field—Wilsnap Dress Fasteners.

The public is grateful for advertising which gives instructive information. Example: Letters of thanks from mothers to The Walter M. Lowney Company.

With a superior product used in constructing other products, public reputation, has through advertising, proved the one thing needed to gain wide adoption by manufacturers. Example: Columbia Axles.

If trade respect and public appreciation have been properly won, quality standards may be safely maintained and charged for—even in a high raw materials market. Example: Crossett Shoes.

Sharp individuality in advertising can clear the way for prompt sales in an apparently settled-down field—as shown by the quick acceptance of the new Emerson Records.

If you can make a sound thrift appeal, the public will read and act. Example: Advertising of Mercantile Trust Company.

Advertising can very quickly win jobbing support for a brand, in a staple line which jobbers once preferred to sell unbranded. Example: Mayo Mills Underwear.

An ethical theme in the advertising can establish a better basis of understanding between the public and the retail merchant, to the manufacturer's advantage. Example: Toledo Scale—"No Springs—Honest Weight."
